

WOLVES HERE SATURDAY NIGHT

ELECTIONS TO ENLIVEN MEET STUDENT BODY

Rivalry Chairman, Yell Prince, Forensic Committee Scheduled

EXECUTIVES TO CONFER

Budgets Come Up For Approval Tonight; Home of Sparks Scene

Election of an inter-class rivalry chairman, a yell prince, a forensic council for the purpose of planning trips for Willamette student speakers, and the staging of a pep meeting will feature the second official student body meeting of the year tomorrow morning in chapel.

President Dick Lucke stated that beyond the regular business affairs to come up before the meeting, nothing unusual will be brought forth at the session tomorrow. The election of the forensic council, hitherto non-existent on the campus, was authorized last year, but was not carried out. Inter-class rivalry chairman and yell-prince elections are regular functions of the ASWU at this time of year.

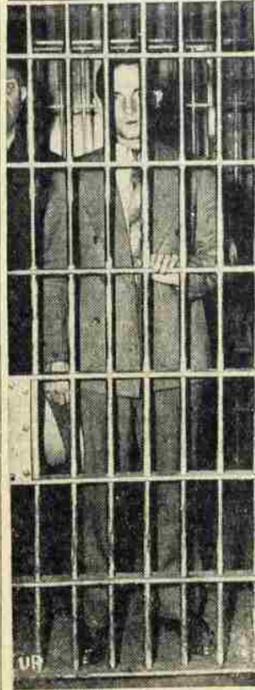

The high-spot of campus political and financial business will come tonight with the first current meeting of the new executive council. Classes Monday elected their delegates to the body, and the council is now ready to begin the year's work. Meeting at the home of Leslie J. Sparks, graduate manager, for dinner, the council will consider business at hand.

The appointment of a homecoming manager, one of the most important offices on the campus, will come at tonight's meeting. Possible candidates for the position have not been announced. The executive council will also appoint two members to the honor code committee.

Student budgets will prove to be the nectar of the evening. Six scheduled lists of expenditures and funds will come before the body for approval. The athletic budget, drawn up by Paul Wallace, Arlie Walker, Dean F. M. Erickson, Dick Lucke, and Leslie J. Sparks, is usually the largest financial schedule considered by the group.

Other budgets to be presented at the meeting tonight are Collegian, Wallulah, general fund, social fund (for ASWU parties) and forensics schedules. All budgets must be approved by the council before they become legal.

Justice?

Bruno Hauptmann, indicted for extortion in the case of the famous Lindbergh kidnaping. Hauptmann will be arraigned today in the Bronx county court, and within a week authorities will have decided whether to charge the alien on the extortion charge or extradite him to New Jersey for trial on kidnaping and murder charges.

EXECUTIVE GROUP DELEGATES VOTED

Classes Elect Rivalry Men to Carry On Program of Intra-Mural Sports

With the beginning of school, university groups have begun to get organized. Classes have met at least once and have made a few tentative plans for the school year.

All four classes elected representatives to the executive council Monday, September 24. Those elected were John Robinson, freshman; Randall Kester, sophomore; and Frank deLespinasse, junior. The seniors will hold another meeting to revote on Carl Rhoda and Louis Magin, as no one person received the majority.

Inter-class rivalry chairmen elected were Frank Harris, freshman; Bill Sutton, sophomore; Malcolm Jones, junior; and Seymour Feathers, senior.

The junior class with Steve Anderson as president discussed the

FERA Places 50 Students On Job List

Approximately 55 students have been placed with campus positions on FERA funds. While this falls short of the number of applications by 53, it is expected that, as rotation of the work begins, others will automatically find work.

These positions requiring technical skill and knowledge, such as research work and secretarial work of the higher order, will not be rotated, but will be left in the care of those first assigned.

As additional work presents itself to the campus, and various considered improvement jobs come up, others not listed in assigned positions will be given jobs, and will rotate the work to keep the force of "campus unemployed" continually working.

LIST CHANGE FOR STUDENT OFFICES

Improvements To Be Made In Present Set-up of Collegian, Prexy Desks

Extensive plans for the remodeling of the Collegian and student body offices, located on the basement floor of Waller hall, are being pushed to completion by Dick Lucke, president of the student body, and officials of the Collegian.

The work, scheduled to get under way within two weeks or ten days, will give the Collegian force the old news room and the office of the student body combined. The partition separating the two rooms will be torn out, and student body officers will be given that part of the building formerly occupied by the manager and editor of the Collegian.

The main partition which forms the hallway near the telephone will be left standing and will be built up to the ceiling, giving student leaders private offices for their business. Adequate locks will be provided.

Agitation is being heard that favors a pay telephone being installed in the Waller hall basement. Charges are that many students run up long distance tolls and leave them unpaid.

W. Club Elects Grannis Prexy

The "W" club, composed of all students who have won their letter in varsity athletics on the campus, has elected Loren Grannis as president of the organization. Other officers elected were: vice-president, Mike Balkovic; secretary, Robert Clark; and treasurer, Carl Rhoda.

SPEECH GROUP TO OPEN YEAR OF FORENSICS

Co-eds Given Privilege of Entering College Forensic Battle

WHITMAN TO BE SCENE

Executive Committee Will Hold Meeting Here October 13 For Plans

Willamette university will act as host to the executive committee of the inter-collegiate forensic association meeting to be held Saturday, October 13. The committee controls all state forensic activities.

The organization is the sponsor of the three major speech contests held each year. At the last meeting of the committee, Vice-President Bill Mosher acted as president. It was at this time the group started a movement to establish an annual contest to determine the championship of the Oregon inter-collegiate forensic league. The group will elect a committee to choose a topic for the after-dinner speech contest which is held the early part of December.

Willamette university began activities Wednesday with the preliminary round-up to discuss plans for the season. The experienced men who will be back to talk for the home squad will be Garfield Barnett, Bill Mosher, and Talbot Bennett. George McLeod, Lawrence Morley, and Randall Kester are the new men who are working for a place on the regular team.

This year there will be many forensic activities open to the students of Willamette. For the first time since Professor Rahe took charge of forensics, women will have a chance to enter speaking activities and represent the school.

Try outs will be held soon for women's debating squads. There is a reasonable indication of interest on the part of co-eds toward forensic activity, but the extent to which women will be allowed to participate will depend upon the interest and ability developed.

Men and women of any class will be allowed to enter the inter-collegiate forensic contests of Oregon. Fields here are opened to those interested in extemporaneous speaking, after dinner speaking, old-line oratory, and peace orations. Cash prizes are awarded the winner of each event.

Collegian To Conduct Vote For Governor

To stimulate interest among voting Willamette students, the Collegian will conduct a campus straw vote, including in the ballot form to be printed in the next issue the names of the three most outstanding (from point of popularity) candidates—Peter Zimmerman, independent; Joe Dunne, republican; and Charles Martin, democrat.

Following the publication of the straw ballot next Thursday, students will be expected to mark their choice, or write in a candidate's name. A ballot box will be placed in Eaton hall Friday for depositing of the tickets.

All Willamette students and special students, whether of voting age or not, are eligible to cast their ballot.

Ask Students Turn Out For Philharmonic

Willamette university students who are proficient in playing orchestral instruments are invited to attend the initial meeting for the fall of the Philharmonic Orchestra at the Salem Y.M.C.A. Tuesday evening at 7. September 26, Jacques Gershkovitch of Portland is the conductor of the Salem orchestra which has gained a fine reputation among musical organizations.

FRESHMEN TO BE GIVEN BIG PARTY

Freshmen will be given a gala evening of entertainment Saturday, October 13, when the '37s act as hosts for the soiree.

Plans are being made to choose the place for the frolic and the sophomore class officers, Aden, Graham, Bradnard and Brandon, are making the arrangements for the affair. The evening will be

Teachers Thirsting For Victory; Hurts Hamper Willamette

Oregon Normal Has Tricky Squad; Are Ready To Avenge Terrific Defeat of Year Ago; Bearcats Suffer Injuries at Corvallis

THE Oregon Normal Wolves are coming to town. Larry Wolfe's tricky behemoths will clash with Willamette in the first home game of the season on Sweetland Field under the arcs at 8 p. m. Saturday night. The invading squad has been pointing for the Willamette game since the beginning of the season, and will be gunning for revenge in fighting fashion. It was last fall that "Speed" Oravec and his mates raced over the unwilling Teachers 20 to 0. Wolfe has assembled an eleven which he will send on the field, battling to repeat the 6 to 0 victory they gained in 1932.

Makela, Tehila, Bowers, and Ystad of Astoria high school's great 1929 team will be on the grounds with a brilliant supporting cast, including Bardenel, ex-star at St. Mary's, ready to dash through the paces with them. They ran over St. John's Bachelors, a group of ex-collegians, 18 to 0 in Portland last week. It is reported that they withheld their most effective plays to show them here on Sweetland Field for the first time.

The Bearcats have been beset by several costly injuries, and thus will be forced to take the game in stride. Connors, Vagt, Grannis, Williams, and Erickson are all in doubtful condition. Connors, the big fire eating center, is definitely relegated to the sidelines with a fractured wrist, but the others should be ready to play ball by game time. The remainder of the squad is in fine fettle following Saturday's close battle with Oregon State. Keene, who has much respect for his rival Larry Wolfe, one of the crowned heads of coaching keenness on the Pacific slope, will mass the fall force of his lineup against the Monmouth aggregation. Oravec, fast becoming the mighty mite of Northwestern football, is a genuine scoring threat in himself, but when teamed in the backfield company of Dick Weisberger, Ed Frantz, and Don Mills, he becomes a dodging powerhouse of offensive strength. Versteeg and McAdams are scheduled to start at end; Balovic and Weisner at tackle; Hoyt and either Tweed or Becken at guard; and Grannis moves over to center to relieve the injured Connors. A host of reserves will be waiting to file in to the contest once the regulars commence to give way to reinforcements.

Although the Willamette starting lineup will carry an average of nearly 190 pounds to the man, they will be considerably out-

GUILD HAS FIRST MEETING OF YEAR
Little Theatre Guild, another of the prominent campus organizations, held their first meeting this year Wednesday afternoon. The Little Theatre Guild, organized on the campus last year, is primarily a group formed to develop dramatic talent among the students.

Plans for the year were discussed by the members. Tryouts were held for new members as there are a number of vacancies to be filled. This year good attendance and work will be essential requirements for membership. There are too many students wishing to belong to let part of the quota of 40 members be inactive, according to Guild officials.

The organization gives the students an opportunity for study and practice in dramatic fields, especially where little previous experience has been had. It is also for the student who does not plan to specialize in dramatics. Anyone interested in costuming, reading, acting, casting plays, make-up, assembling properties, sketching scenes, and original playwriting and production are asked to take advantage of the opportunities offered by Little Theatre Guild.

Careful programs of work are being planned by Professor Rahe. The organization will try to present one one-act play per month. Consideration is being given selling cards that will admit outsiders who are interested but do

Chresto Cottage To Be Social Center; Parties Planned Each Saturday

Chresto Cottage will hereafter be open to the students at large from 9 a. m. until 7 p. m. each day, and will be reserved for meetings of campus organizations or parties from 7 until 9:30 each evening.

Extensive as was the drive of last year for an improved Chresto, the cottage is still in need of certain articles of furniture and materials. Book cases and perhaps other pieces of furniture will be furnished by students at some time later in the year. Renovation plans also call for covering the cloakroom floor and the varnishing of chairs and tables.

F. E. R. A. funds have been apportioned to provide for the wages of a janitor for the building. The janitor opens the doors at 9 each morning.

From 7 until 9:30 each evening, any campus group who wishes may meet there. Anyone wishing special evenings must see Lowell

Eddy. The building is also available for dinners and lunches. There will soon be posted to Chresto a schedule of events in the near future for which the cottage has already been asked. In order to use the kitchen, get the keys from Dean Dahl or Mrs. Ellis. Friday nights will be held open for parties.

The Saturday night party, inaugurated last year, will be a weekly occurrence this year except on the Saturday nights when an all-student body affair is scheduled. Each Saturday the head of some campus group is to have charge of the program. Refreshments will be served and a faculty member will be present to act as chaperone. Bill Lemmon and Isabel Morehouse had charge of the group games last Saturday night. Between 40 and 50 students and faculty attended.

Development of Television Predicted With New Tube

A new cathode ray tube, utilizing neither filament, grid nor screens, and generating high-frequency direct current for use in short-wave radio broadcasting and television sending, has been announced by Philo Farnsworth, 28-year-old inventor, and the Heintz-Kaufman Laboratories of South Francisco. Ralph Heintz (second from right above, without coat) is explaining functions of the invention at tests of the tube—placed directly in front of him. Experts predict immediate development of television broadcasting stations through use of the tubes.

Shade of Paddle Hovers Over Freshmen; Gals To Receive Share Tortures

Freshman initiation has officially begun, much to the dismay of the newcomers and the delight of the very dignified as well as lofty sophomores and other upper classmen.

Although there are to be no formal ceremonies, the rookies will soon know that they are being subjected to the (perhaps it should be called painful) operation of becoming a part of the institution.

Bob Hart, president of the Cubs, a school service organization, will take charge of the Fresh boys and with the help of the club will see that they get a very thorough introduction to campus life. It's faintly hinted that they might actually go so far as to apply slight stimuli to the lower extremities of the torso. The fact of the matter is that some of the members of the Cubs get blisters on their hands from welding paddles. Some of the Freshmen also get blisters! (Ed. note: We had to censor some of this.)

The girls share a less violent fate but nevertheless they are doomed to have troubles all their very own. Lillian Graham, vice-president of the sophomore class will take charge of their affairs. They have a few pleasant little tasks such as striking phoney stamps on ceilings and the like.

As a final windup, the Fresh put on a stunt and serpentine at a home game on Sweetland field much to the amusement of everyone, except—possibly—themselves.

Fresh boys should bear in mind that a freshman is always wrong—never right. So, if a couple of guys about the size of Tarzan walk up and one says, "I saw you with a blond last night," you naturally answer "No, it must have been two other people." Then the guy says to his partner in crime:

A Question of Buildings

On every hand, from those people familiar with our university, we hear that Willamette is expanding. The university is broadening out. Its sound reputation as a college is going over the state, and the country, with increasing effect. More youths of college age are looking to Willamette as the place to continue the education begun in high school. The trend of expansion has become strong during the last two years. Indications of the bigger college that is bound to rise on the Willamette campus are seen in the widening of educational fields here, and in the increased activity of our students. The same air—the same atmosphere—that hovers over the campus might be noticed before the break of a depression. In short, Willamette is growing, not in leaps and bounds, but steadily, slowly, and surely.

Incidental with this growth comes the question of new buildings for the campus. The buildings that house the university are losing in the race with the expansion movement. Hand-in-hand with the question of new buildings go the problems of equipment, library facilities, and standardization of the law school. If the proportion of increase now noticeable goes on up the scale, the future will require that additions in the line of buildings and accommodations be made.

Sincere visionaries see for the campus a new science hall, a fine conservatory of music, and enlarged or new library headquarters. Of course, these things are all excellent considerations, and, if added to the campus, would create immediately huge benefits to the university—and its students—if they could be taken care of financially.

Our visionaries have had the good sense to temper their dreams with the heat of the financial question. Where students have blindly advocated "new buildings," those concerned with the welfare of Willamette have pointed out institutions which are building poor, and have called to mind the situation of added expense that arises with construction programs. Briefly, the sum paid for the erection of a building does not end the cash output. To the original cost of the edifice must be added the necessary expenditures for upkeep, such as heat, light, janitor duties, and hundreds of minor details. Also, when the sum necessary for the construction of the building is withdrawn from interest-gathering sources, the university, in addition to taking on added expense, loses income. It is easy to be seen that the university could not, as some students advocate, plunge into an extensive building program. It would be disastrous.

The Collegian, however, does advocate a building program which we consider to be entirely feasible, and one which embraces the more immediate and pressing needs in the line of campus construction.

It is the erection of a new library building. When the building is completed, move the law school from its present dingy basement quarters to the floor space in Waller at present taken up by the library. The construction of a new library building would cost in the neighborhood of $60,000. At present, the university possesses a fund of $100,000 which has not been allocated to any particular branch of finance planning and should, we feel, be utilized in this manner. Later on, perhaps, standardization and enlargement of the law school library could take place.

The project is something to think about. The time is ripe for enlargement.

Education And The Student

ABOUT this time of year, various educational experts take pen in hand and write on the evils of the present system of higher education—directing their criticisms mainly at the credit method. They bombard United States universities with articles that, as a general rule, claim students are graduated under the credit system who are not educated, and who do not deserve a degree. They propose, instead of basing courses on the earning of credits by passing specific examinations, a general examination that would review the entire schedule of courses taken during the four years.

All well and good, of course, but to us, it represents so much time wasted. Two reasons are responsible for our conclusions. First, as long as a certain class of students have money to keep from working, they will attend college, and to continue with college, they will pass courses under the credit system. It would make no difference to these people if the general examination method prevailed. They would still graduate without being actually educated. Second, the getting of an education depends not on the grading system used, but on the student.

The student is the master of his destiny while in college. If he wishes to retain an actual knowledge of the subject he studies, he will. If he wishes to forget as soon as the course is passed, he will. The importance of the course to the student determines the amount of knowledge that will be maintained in that field.

No matter what the system, the student is responsible for his knowledge. If he wishes to study deeply and sincerely, and make a howling success of his college life, he'll do it, and nine times out of ten, he'll be successful in the life to follow college. If he just reviews in order to gain the credit, that's all he does, and that's all he will do.

Our lives are our own. Our education is our business. If we want one, we'll get it. The method of giving credit doesn't make much difference.

It may not have been Dillinger, but vandalism referred to in a letter-box article today has no place on the campus. It is childish, foolish, and entirely unbecoming one of university age.

BOOKS

By H. Allen Smith
United Press Book Editor

The story of Vincent Van Gogh's life stands as one of the great romantic tragedies (if such things be) of modern history, and surely it has never been told with more charm and understanding than in Irving Stone's new novel, "Lust for Life" (Longmans).

Van Gogh's story is known to those who maintain or profess an interest in art. But here, in a novel, it becomes something more stirring than mere biography—a drama that takes hold of you with something of the force that life itself employed in beating Vincent Van Gogh back into the dust of the earth.

"Lust for Life" covers 16 years, extending from the time when Van Gogh was a youthful Hollander, at work in London and with great prospects of a business career before him, to that final, poignant scene in the inn at Auvers when "Theo felt his brother leave him forever."

We're inclined to believe that the fates had it written on their calendar for Irving Stone to write the story of Vincent Van Gogh. He has done a magnificent job. He will send many, who have little, or no interest in art, to the galleries. They will want to see what Van Gogh—this strange man who sliced off his own ear for a harlot—did with his brushes. And beyond that, they will find that Mr. Stone has provided us with a story that cannot be put out of mind—that, in our opinion, is the best biographical novel produced anywhere in recent years, with the sole exception of "God's Angry Man."

Peter Fleming, who burst upon the American literary scene not so long ago with his sparkling travel book, "Brazilian Adventure," has been doing the Far East. He traveled from London to Moscow, across Siberia to Manchukuo, down into China, across to Japan, and then to America via the Pacific. He tells the story of his journey in "One's Company" (Scriveners).

He sets down his observations and impressions with the same freshness that made "Brazilian Adventure" a best-seller. I would not say his second book is better than the first, but it certainly serves to place Mr. Fleming as one of the topmost travel writers able to buy a railroad ticket or paddle a canoe. Maybe it's because he reacts as you and I would react if we were suddenly set down in a strange foreign land.

ENGAGEMENTS
October 21 was announced as the wedding date of Miss Rosetta Smith, '32, to Charles Quincy Kaufman of Portland, at the Alpha Phi Alpha alumnae meeting in the chapter house.

NECROLOGY
Dr. Angela Ford Warren, for whom funeral rites were held in Portland May 24, was a member of the Ford pioneer family which settled in Keizer from Missouri in 1852. Dr. Warren's family moved from there to Salem where they lived in a large white building where now stands the city library. Dr. Warren had lived in Portland for years and was highly regarded there, especially for her church and philanthropic work. She willed $5000 to Willamette university. She left bequests totaling $50,000 to church, educational, and philanthropic organizations.
Dr. Warren received her degree from Willamette medical school in 1877.

George M. Brown, 70, former supreme court justice, died at The Dalles June 17 as the result of a paralytic stroke. Judge Brown was born in a log cabin on a donation land claim near Roseburg. His parents had settled in the state in 1847. He received his education at the old Umpqua academy at Roseburg, and at Willamette university where he was admitted to the bar.
He held the office of district attorney for the second judicial district, which comprised what are now Benton, Coos, Curry, and Lane counties, from 1894 to 1907, with the exception of a vacation of two years. While serving in this position, he made a name for himself as a prosecutor. After the reduction of the district in 1907, he was elected to the district attorney-ship of the smaller district.
He was elected attorney general in 1914 and served nearly two terms before he was appointed to the supreme court, where he served until January 1, 1933. Since then he had been in private practice at The Dalles with his son, T. Leland Brown, Wasco county district attorney, who was graduated from Willamette in 1922.
Judge Brown was also president of the Douglas county bar association for several years. He was a member of the Elks lodge of Roseburg, and of the Presbyterian church in Salem.
He was married in 1895 to Miss Bertha A. Bellows, member of a prominent Roseburg family. Besides his wife and son he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Marjorie McGilchrist and Miss Elaine Brown, '32, both of Portland.

Murray D. Shanks, district attorney of Linn county and former state senator and representative, died at Lebanon August 23 as the result of a ruptured appendix.
Mr. Shanks, who received his A.B. and LL.B. degrees from Willamette university in 1909, was president of the student body during his senior year.
He was born near Mount Angel 52 years ago. Surviving him are his widow, Edith Booth Shanks of the class of 1909, a daughter, and a brother, H. F. Shanks, Salem jeweler.

Margaret W. Magin, 18, died in a Portland hospital August 4 following a prolonged illness of bone disease which resulted from an injury received. She had been graduated from Franklin high school in Portland in June, 1933, as an honor student, and was particularly active in musical activities both of school and church. She entered Willamette in the fall of 1933, and was affiliated with Alpha Phi Alpha sorority.
She is survived by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Louis Magin, and two brothers, Robert and Louis, all of Salem.

PERSONALS
Ralph Barnes, '22, and Esther Paroungian Barnes, '23, are in Salem for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Barnes. They traveled from Moscow, Russia, where Ralph is correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune. This is the first trip to Oregon for Ralph in ten years. After taking graduate work at Harvard, he entered newspaper work on the Brooklyn Eagle. From there he went to Paris, on to Rome, then to Moscow where he has been for four years. He has achieved international reputation for his news ability, and is the youngest person to be recognized in "Who's Who."

The Barnes' children, Joan and Suzanne, have been in the States with their grandparents. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, and Mrs. Paroungian of Portland, because living conditions at Moscow were not satisfactory. Esther has been in Moscow since May, 1933. She had brought the children with her from Paris several months before to visit in the States. The Barnes expect to leave early in October for Moscow.

A preliminary study of the "cultural adjustment" of Indian tribes to new environment was being undertaken this summer by Joel Berreman, '27, who is research assistant at Stanford university. He studied for his M.A. at U. of Oregon in 1932-33, and last year worked toward a Ph.D. at Stanford. He is seeking to map the location of former Indian villages with the view to future excavation. His work is being jointly undertaken by Stanford and U. of O. In the latter school Prof. L. S. Cressman is in charge of the work. Mr. Berreman spent some time at Grand Ronde, Yamhill county, where the study began, and in the Warner valley and Hart mountains region in eastern Oregon.

Mrs. Berreman was formerly Savilla Ricks, ex-W.U. They have two small sons.

Prof. Leslie J. Sparks, '19, of Willamette university, served as superintendent of the Salem city and school playgrounds during the entire summer. The program, which was made possible through the aid of the SERA, the city, and the school board, was the first extensive undertaking of the kind, and proved to be very successful, creating a great deal of interest and providing numerous recreational activities for the people of Salem.

Gurnee Flesher, '29, was one of the directors of activities, being located at the Leslie playground. Many Willamette students and

Paris Styles

By Mary Knight

United Press Correspondent
PARIS, Sept. 27.—(U.P.)—Lace, like jewels, is considered in the heirloom class provided it is real. As such it is one of the precious elements of feminine attire. French and Brussels points have been transmitted from generation to generation in aristocratic families, and this season Worth has designed several lace gowns proving its enduring charm and smartness.

One of these ensembles is called "Mon Espoir," or "My Hope," and is of black tulle with large polka dots over a foundation of black silk. The back décolletage is square and reaches to the waist. The sleeves and lower part of the skirt are made of an unusual kind of "bouillonne," or shirring on the wrong side, of the dots in the design. A black velvet belt is fastened with a long and narrow strass buckle.

In white lace, also for evening, "Mes Amours," or "My Loves," is delightful. The design is of leaves and flowers, with a scattering on the blouse and near the hem, of iridescent sequin embroidery. The sleeves are long and closely fitted and the skirt clings to the body as far as the knees, after which a double V-shaped panel, slit on both sides, gives the necessary fullness. A white foundation with a high fluted tulle flounce shows underneath.

The Pacific forensic league contest to be held at Whitman this year is to be open to sophomore, junior, and senior men. Willamette is one of the few small universities that belong to this league. The other 12 members are University of Oregon, Stanford, University of Washington, Washington State, Whitman, Oregon State, University of Idaho, Pomona, University of Southern California, University of California, and University of Nevada.

Professor Rahe feels that competition has become keen enough during the past year to stimulate barnstorming trips for the Willamette debate squad. Plans are under way to enter the Linfield invitational meet, and the Pacific forensic league.

Final arrangements are now under way to send two men on a barnstorming trip, and it is positive that the men will be sent to represent the school in the middle west.

Last year, Willamette won the Oregon championship and tied for third place in both the Pacific slope and the Pacific coast title contests.

HOMECOMING PLAY BEING CONSIDERED

Philip Barry's "Youngest" Approved by Majority of Faculty Censors

The title of this year's Homecoming play has not, as yet, been definitely announced by Professor Rahe, dramatic instructor. However, Philip Barry's "Youngest" has already been approved by two of the three members on the faculty committee.

Theta Alpha Phi, the Willamette chapter of the national dramatic society, will, as is customary, sponsor the Homecoming play. Ralph Barber, president, has appointed a committee to read and select plays which would be suitable for presentation. As soon as the committee reports, their findings will be considered by a committee of faculty members composed of Dr. Matthews, Dr. Pearce, and Dr. Kohler.

When the play is selected an announcement will be made as to the time and place of try-outs. The Homecoming play is open to anyone interested in trying out.

LETTERBOX

To the Editor:

Apparently John Dillinger or one of his legal or illegal "pals" is roaming about the campus. Only men of the Dillinger type are destructive. That is why we know that it could not have been a Willamette student who walked down the lower hallway of Waller and proceeded to mar, split and otherwise deface the signboard of the Wallulah office. The manager would appreciate information leading to the apprehension, dead or alive, of the guilty parties. No little expense has been put into the Wallulah office to make it an attractive and neat student office.

If the cool and invigorating air of the past few days has made someone feel his "oats", PLEASE, let's hope he may find some other method of ridding himself of his excess manly strength.

ties of the club were discussed. The arrival of rook hats will mark the beginning of a Roman holiday. "Hack" days will be every Tuesday and Thursday after chapel.

The club plans to make a more extensive patrol of athletic events. The general policy of the club will be carried out with a few additions and more severity. It is to be the aim of the Cubs to effect better feeling on the campus toward the organization, and thereby receive more cooperation than has been had in the past.

Later in the semester ten boys from the freshman class will be chosen as new members of the group.

BEARCATS READY FOR HARD FIGHT

Schedule of Willamette Is Tough; To Play San Jose State In San Jose

With the Oregon State game out of the way the Bearcats are ready to settle down to a long and stiff schedule with teams of their own size.

The Bearcats open the home season next Saturday night on Sweetland field against Larry Wolfe and his tricky Oregon Normal team.

This year's schedule is not only a difficult one, but it includes new teams as well as traditional rivals. Willamette will play San Jose and Columbia, which are two strong non-conference teams.

Two games which will be looked forward to are College of Puget Sound and Whitman. Both of these schools will play in Salem.

Complete schedule:
Sept. 29—O. N. S.—here.
Oct. 6—Open.
Oct. 12—Albany College—Albany.
Oct. 20—Linfield College—McMinnville.
Oct. 27—College of Puget Sound—Salem.
Nov. 3—Pacific U.—Salem.
Nov. 10—San Jose—San Jose.
Nov. 17—Columbia U.—Portland.
Nov. 29—Whitman College—Salem.

CONFERENCE TEAMS READY FOR START

By Ford Robertson

Coaches of Northwest Conference teams are busily pushing forward in preparation for the opening games. At Whitman, Nig Borleske, leader of several championship teams, will again lead the Missionaries. Roy Sandberg will take the field with his 1933 Champion Loggers, and Henry Levers expects to lead the best team ever developed at Linfield college. The foxy Anse Cornell will reign for the second year at Pacific U. Boasting the best team ever assembled at Willamette will be Spec Keene's outfit, hot after the title that they failed to snare last year. Over in Idaho, Loren Basler will again pilot a team of sophomores and freshmen. The one new coach in the conference is Joey Mack at Albany college.

Little can be found out about Nig Borleske's Missionaries, but it is certain that he will be on the championship trail with a crew of veterans. He will be anxious to avenge the 40 to 0 defeat that he suffered at the hands of the Willamette squad last year. Up at Tacoma the coaching staff is bemoaning the fact that they lost such an array of veterans and concede the championship to Willamette. The coaches can take that for what it is worth but it is certain that they will try to repeat the performance of the past season.

Anse Cornell seems to have his system pretty well established at Pacific U and will probably give any team in the conference a run for the title. Pacific made a very creditable showing against the Oregon Staters last Saturday and promise to be better with a few weeks' practice.

Willamette University has one of the strongest teams ever assembled in the Northwest Conference. Led by Johnny Oravec, Eddie Frantz, and a line that has two All-Conference men and five more equally as good, the Bearcats are hot on the trail of the title.

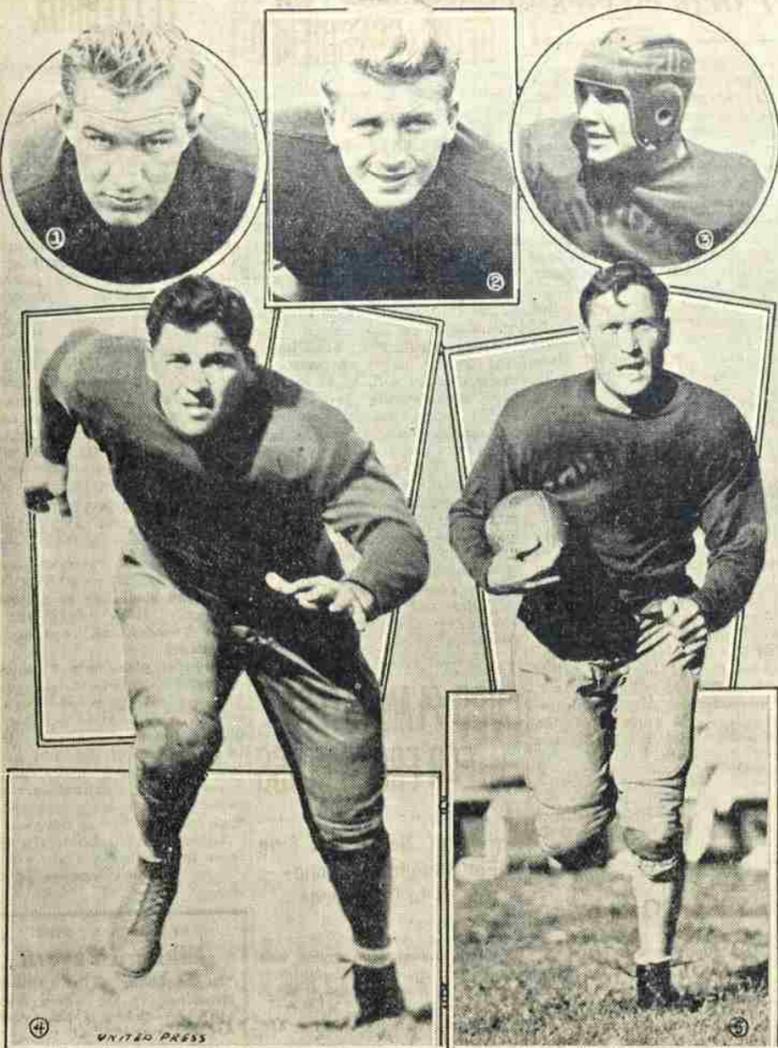

The College of Idaho after a relapse of a few years seems again headed for the top of the ladder. Basler, long recognized as a good conditioner of men, will put a squad of sophomores who are veterans of one year conference play into the field. While not a strong contender for the crown this year, they will bear watching in the future.

Albany College will probably have the weakest team in the Conference, all of the veterans being taken by graduation. An inexperienced squad is left for Joey Mack to start work on. Mack was a former Oregon State star and bids to do well in the coaching game.

The conference race promises to be one of the tightest ever witnessed in northwest history. While sports writers and coaches pick Willamette to win the crown, Puget Sound and Pacific must not be underestimated in the rush for the title. Puget Sound won 6-0 last year—a mighty small margin, but enough for a championship.

OUTDOOR
The author read the jacket blurb of his new book and turned to the publisher. "Please stop the presses and throw everything away," he pleaded. "I want to write a novel that is worthy of this tribute."

Some Rugged Men Out of the Great Northwest

An ominous silence comes out of Pullman, Wash., where Orin "Babe" Hollingbery is grooming his Washington State Cougars for the 1934 conference football race. The Cougars, loaded with veterans, appear to be a strong defensive team with a great potential offense, and here are five reasons why: (1) Johnny Bley, 200-pound veteran tackle; (2) Ted Christofferson, tricky halfback; (3) Ollie Arbelvide, another speedy back; (4) George Theodoratos, already voted by many all-coast tackle, and (5) Boyce "Tex" Magness, nimble-footed triple threat.

Footballers Give Views On Coming Contest Here With Teaching Battlers

Quite frequently pre-game statements are released by coaches over the air and elsewhere. The Collegian sports staff thought that it might be of interest to the student body at large to know how the team feels about Saturday night's football clash with Oregon Normal here on Sweetland Field, so it arranged a series of interviews with various members of the squad, who will be out there clawing at the Wolves Saturday. The results are tabulated below:

John Oravec, starting halfback and triple threat star, "You never can tell what will happen out there."

Ed Frantz, veteran quarterback and punter, "If the team can get half as much pep as the student body has, we'll knock them cold."

Don Mills, blocking half, "We expect a tough time every minute."

Dick Weisgerber, pile driving fullback out from New Jersey, "I don't know much about these Western teams, but Willamette will be out there to give it to them."

Bill McAdams, rangy end from Los Angeles, "I'm going to turn in a much better game than I did against the Staters."

Charley Versteeg, McAdams' lanky running mate, "Will be able to say a great deal more after the game."

Mike Balovic, tackle, who turned in a beautiful defensive game at Corvallis, "I have played against Oregon Normal twice now, and they were two of the hardest games that I have ever competed in. However, we're going to win."

Carl Weisser, All-Conference tackle, "Going to be very tough."

Harold Hoyt, scrapping guard, "We will have to step faster than we did against Oregon State."

Bill Stone, hammering fullback, "Willamette by at least two touchdowns."

Loren Grannis, star guard, moving over to center for the Normal game, "Saw them play the Bachelors, and I think that we will have a difficult time to skin the Wolves."

Manville Petteys, pass-catching end, who once played for the Normalites, "Good support will bring a win."

Darrel Newhouse, sizeable tackle, "There are a lot of fellows in that club that I know, but I would pick Willamette."

George Erickson, smiling end, "I have seen Oregon Normal play, and they look plenty good. We will have a real battle on our hands."

Donald Brandon, shifty halfback, "I think Willamette will win."

George Cannady, the ex-Grant high speedster, "If we play heads up football we can't lose."

Bill Tull, a hard hitting foot-ballist, "A real ball game. We should win."

The rest of the lads were too much absorbed in a rousing scrimmage session to offer their view points on the impending clash. It is sincerely hoped that the bits of wisdom offered by the lads who actually play the game will be of value to students when placing their bets on Saturday night's festivities.

Gym Classes Get Headway

The semester gym class program for lower division students offers a variety of activities. While the weather is agreeable this fall the classes are to be held on Sweetland Field, featuring passball as the main activity.

These classes are conducted on Mondays and Wednesdays at the hours of 9:35, 10:30 and 2:10 with some physical education major in charge.

As passball finds a definite place each fall in intramural sports and as a league for a championship series is to be organized, the activities of the freshmen in this sport usually results in the organization of a team for that league.

Mr. Sparks states that the passball league furnishes a recreation hour for those participating, but the main objective in the gym class instruction is the development of skill. These classes might be termed instructional classes rather than gym classes.

On the Sidelines

By George McLeod

Willamette went to the post against Oregon State fighting to upset the Beavers. A wet ball and a couple of bad breaks cost them the chance to see that ambition realized, however, they did battle in there against Lon Stiner's famed "Iron Men" with some rather surprising results. They conducted a sustained drive of some 60 yards during the second quarter; and, all in all, piled up eight first downs as against seven for the Orangemen. John "Scout" Oravec, Spec Keene's fleet footed speedster, was a sensation, as he eluded would be tacklers during his tenure in the game. He averaged something better than three yards a crack at the husky State College line.

It is not at all unlikely that John will wind up in the annual college All-Star game at San Francisco New Year's Day if he continues to ramble over the gridirons of the Northwest in the same elusive fashion that he displayed against a powerful Coast Conference team last Saturday.

Larry Wolfe will be in town with his mole-skin clad brigade the day after tomorrow. And if you don't think that means fireworks, just wait and see. Normal teams are noted for their color and dash. Wolfe is a past master at the art of imparting tricky, unorthodox plays to his charges; and consequently they are one of the most alert combinations to show in the Northwest. The team has rebuilt considerably since dropping a twenty to nothing decision here last fall. The invaders fairly abound with laterals, double laterals, triple laterals, zooming long passes, zipping short ones, dead man formations and other deceptive offensive weapons.

Dick Weisgerber, two hundred and fifteen pounds of mighty fit looking fullback is very capably filling the shoes of Ole Olsen, who ran into too much appendicitis to return this fall. Dick, who came all the way from New Jersey to pack a ball in the Willamette backfield, moves into a line with plenty of vim and vigor; and once in the open, he dashes away sidestepping, dodging, twirling, and stiff arming, as though he were a imitating Southern California's famous "Cotton Top" Irvine Warburton. On defense he seems to have that rare ability to diagnose the direction of the coming play and then to wham into the ball carrier with a devastating tackle. This ability, often designated as football instinct, is that same intangible something that made Mickulak great at Ore-and wishing may take it as a preference.

With the onset of more stormy weather the instructional classes will be held on the main gym floor which has been refinished during the summer's vacation. These classes will include some basketball and some formal gym work. The formal work includes all regular gym exercises designed to develop muscular coordination. Basketball will be conducted on the order of passball by splitting the classes into opposing teams. However this has nothing to do with the official "fresh" basketball team coached by Mr. Sparks in the spring. It is only from these gym class games that he is able to check on prospective material.

The sophomores will be given tumbling instruction and other advanced work. This line up of activities will furnish an excellent semester's program.

gon, and elevated Nagurske to stardom at Minnesota.

Coaches Borleske, Cornell, and Sandberg recently conceded the Conference championship to our own Bearcats. And in passing we can not but appreciate this very thoughtful gesture on their parts; but it is nothing more than just that, just a gesture. Knute Rockne once spent days bemoaning the inadequacy of his Notre Dame "Irish" to compete in an approaching contest with Southern California. By game-time everyone was feeling very, very sorry for the hapless Ramblers. They won twenty seven to nothing in a breeze.

Moral: Football games are won on the playing field, not in pre-season utterances of diplomatic coaches. To be the underdog gives a team an immense psychological advantage. Borleske, Sandberg, and Cornell are very evidently overlooking no opportunity to place every fair advantage on their side of the ledger in their impending clashes with the Bearcats.

Shortly before game time at Corvallis Saturday Mr. "Spec" Keene received a cablegram from the new president of the university, Dr. Baxter, en route from Europe, wishing the Bearcats and their coach every success in the O. S. C. game. It is indicative of his deep interest in athletics that Dr. Baxter should show a team that he has never seen this consideration. It appears that Willamette is receiving a man who in addition to his scholastic attainments will be a genuine friend to her athletic teams.

BEARCATS DISPLAY GRID SUPERIORITY

Return From Corvallis After Outplaying Orangemen in Contest

Willamette gridmen returned from Corvallis last Saturday on the short end of a 13 to 0 score, but knew that they had outplayed the so-called "iron men" from Oregon State.

Both Oregon State touchdowns came as the results of "breaks." In the first quarter, Mills' fumble was recovered on the Willamette nine yard line. Four plays were needed by the Orangemen with Franklin finally going over. Pangle failed to convert.

Soon after this touchdown, the Bearcats made a real threat to score. With Oravec and Weisgerber carrying the ball, Willamette marched to the Oregon State 23 yard line, but the Staters held, and the ball was lost on downs.

The Oregon State second touchdown was scored in the second quarter when Devine blocked Frantz's punt on the three yard line. The ball rolled across the goal line where Schultz, Staters' left end, fell on it. Pangle converted.

The Bearcat team, both on offense and defense, looked like a squad which will show the other conference teams a thing or two about football.

Johnny Oravec and Dick Weisgerber did most of the ball toting for Willamette.
