Baxter Hall unity was a new occurance this year. Who could forget the Hearts Tournament, our two social functions and finally Alpha Baxter Omega. We were not without our fraternity relations this year, recall for a nauseating moment the sleepless nights, the beta boys ripping the phone off the wall after they were showered, and the same fraternity acting like animals when the new meal system was installed. Other heart warming memories: Sue Reidie's melodious voice ringing down the hall, Jim Hilton's memory-who is Jim Hilton, Peter Fritz destruction of doors, Doug Kays personality, Bob Klahn, RA Sally 'Godard and social awareness, Ken Josensens's pool table, Radical Bullock Peter Schmidt's steam baths, little Bo Peep lost her sheep and found them in 309 signed BD, Schmidt where are you? We wish to extend our best wishes to Richard, Mary-Beth and Brian the best head residents Baxter has had.

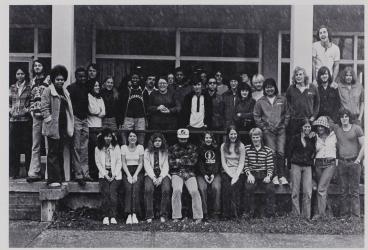

Fourth floor, the penthous of Baxter Hall-home of Hawaiians, haoles (and wahines?) . . .

Mark followed Mason's tradition of a fourth floor resident on crutches—it's such a neat climb up there with a broken leg, right? . . Slime on the walls in 403 . . . shaving cream fights . . . a darkroom in the attic . . water thrown off the end of fourth floor . . . we had our own guitar and banjo concerts till 3:00 in the morning courtesy of the boys from Grand Junction . . the great solar reflector experiment . . . soccer and field hockey in the halls . . . oh yes . . SHOWER!!!

Belknap Beta Chi:

Tokyo Rose you folks. The domino theory: "Study long and you study wrong." Shaun learns her lesson from the townies . . . Don't forget your switch-blade next time. What is womens lib anyway Jo? Are you a Kosher pig Stu? "Meat on the hoof!" K.C. and his ten twinkling fingers. "Ride that hog." Chrissy "I hear you!" What DO you do out at the stables Sandy? Trucking Jsse . Rocky Mountain High Connie. We still don't know. "Hey, mean pills! Mrs. Queball ayse: Obsene language I can't stand take your betting like a man." Patty and Jean drunk? Amazing! A TR.4, huh, John? . . . and with out honking the horn. Listen honey, whoops! . . I mean, ALI . . . is Diane back from dinner yet? All right Sparky, time to show us your boxers. Dio and the Fish "do a job" and "have a night." Anybody like the plastic plants? Where IS Diane anyway? We had Halloween and Christmas "parties." You're dreaming of a black Christmas, huh, Wilbur? Nice try What happened to the booze? No time to change from the slopes, Tim? Sue and BJ- the Pointer sisters minus 2. Tom Pom- the only man alive to belong to 6 frats and 4 sororities. Richard, you're not missing anything. . Smoking after breakfast, Lisa? Who was that guy in the first floor bathroom? Oh, it's a lust house? No, it's a coed dorm. Where are you going, Don? "Crazy, wanna come? Ah ha ha ha ha!" What's the funny smell coming from Nancy and Dolores' room? Hey Hubie! What Butch? HOW does the Nutcracker start, Marty? Does Dave Ball? What's on T.V. Stu? Buzz Mary in room 229. Leah- is that a Christmas tree or a T.V. antenna? The tric? became the dou? Does the coed powder room mean together?

Matthews Gets It On?

Rain, the smell of popcorn, warmth . . .

In the beginning, there was roller skating. Matthews Mashers—1950's and sore muscles (Let's boogie!!)

John West presents: Saturday's Sinister Cinema's "Green Slime"-introducing The Granola Girls: featuring flannel feet and Frankenstein

The President's Octoberfest-Iced parachutes and glazed eves . . .

Happy times far into the night 'round the key board. Broadway comes to Matthews. Rodgers and Hammerstein, eat your hearts out . . .

The Willamette chariot took us to Thedford. Ferns and a fire.

Guitars and song. Mattresses, kegs, and freedom in the clean autumn air . . . Talking, talking

Bare-topped California boy

Is it a bird? Is it a plane? No.

Suspension-bridge pants San Francisco open up your Golden Gates . . . (How do I feel?)

It's Limpalong Kennedy! Flash! International Ping-Pong Tournament held in Matthews Dorm, Salem, Oregon!

Wagner and southern charm. Amid the pregnant blessing of the Lady of the Evening and Music Man bobbed for apples and carved pumpkins. Dandy punch. . . Sambo's will never be the same. To the beat of breastplates we took Salem by surprise . . .

> Matthews Ark-in the zoo there are some domestic animals. Announcing Beany, Jessie and, whoever heard of a Black Banana? (Sorry, Mary Ann-lick, smack!) Speaking of kittens- Dear third floor: Pussy Galore is no more i.e. #215 and #221.

The topped our of David impaired little tree. Santa was payne. Trails of cranberries strung through the dorm. Carols sung three times through. Wassail, wassail, all over the town. Third floor drank freely of the Christmas spirit. (Figuratively, of course)

> Matthews own Fiddler on the second floor roof and Shirley Temple in the shower. States of euphoria followed by an attack of appendicitis. Skiing on Sunday. True love.

Dumb-bells on third floor. Mysterious rendezvous of the Sexual Terror. Bagels and Happy Horas? (Oy Veh!) From the King's Palace comes a bouncing blue Volvo; Matthews own #1 Nixon enemy. Across the hall Garth is alive and well and living in Matthews.

Dr. Dildo reveals: "What those Lumps really mean," or "How to Seduce Women while Trying Very Hard "

Publisher's edition: $10.95

Hard Back: $25.00 Payable in easy nightly installments A scream arises from the stair well as the feared resident rapist rises again!

(If you don't believe us, ask Aldonza.)

Cupid's magic inspired a display of Matthew's talent and togetherness. In the last two hours the dorm prepared what was to become one of the most successful social events of the year. With three different love potions, (15, eh Teddy?) served by our own enticing waitresses to the music of "Bridge", half the campus was spellbound. By candlelight Cupid's arrows found their marks (S.S.+D.C., S.V.+B.B., M.B.+J.M.)

(Sung to tune of House of the Rising Sun)

There is a house on Mill Stree They call the ol' WISH House And it's been the ruin of many a pure soul And God, I know I'm one.

Our mom is a lady from England A chemist without a doubt; Although her French is important, She'd rather be a kraut.

Herr Reinisch is ze r.a. Ze man with ze master key; I hope to God zat Reinisch Vill never valk in on me. (These aren't misspellings!)

Arturo is our costarricense; We're awfully glad he's come. Ol' WISH supplies las mujeres And he provides the rum.

Voila! We have sweet Rosie 'Cita from Normandy. Hey Rose, you want this crossword? She's sure to say oui, oui.

For an expert in karate InJoon's the man to know. So clever with origami And taught us to say anyo.

Last not least Ernestus Who handles all our dough. Hey buddy, how's the cabaret? I hear it's just fantaaastic!

Jewels We are strung carry all through on our
a canyon shoulders,
in the Detroit hiking up Mountains. Sugar Canyon.

Eyes gather a late glimpse of sunlight. Our destination is Opal Lake, where she said, "I would rather be alone than never to be left alone". really

EXPRESS

The Jeweler

Once I was a jeweler
But not anymore,
The corrucating gems
Hurt my eyes,
Their sharp edges
Cut my ahdn,
Their hard rigidity
Gave me no comfort,
Their houch was cold,
and, The customers were vain.

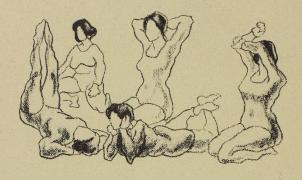

I was a jeweler once, But not anymore.

The Tune of a Dollarninetveight

A diamond dances On a thousand black seas Spinning web-like trances Of harmless melodies

If by chance-

Closely you should listen You would hear the sight Of the strings as they glisten Burning the soles of your feet in the night

Although well-disguised beneath the rumble
The needlemarks are easily found in the supermarket jungle
Where steel cages roar past on wheels
In perfect time to diamond-made symphonic reels—
The diamond dance begins to assume its true diamonic glow
Stepping from behind the shadow of Michelangelo
The onlookers watch the royal marriage
Of their favorite fairy tale prince

Whose legend is indellibly frosted on the back of his cardboard carriage Which bears the diamond carved inscription: Supermarket wedding cake—Sold to the tune of a Dollarninetveight.

South African Mine

Two black men Bent supplicants to the diamond gods of their country Straighten slowly as they reach the end of the tunnel deep within the earth. Long day.

Two black men Shot through with the carbon dust of unborn gems weave their way toward the light like moths Cool air at the top of the shaft. Saturday night.

In the evening chill Dew gathers, sparkling with miniature rainbows in the grass, on the leaves, in the hair of the two black men.

They stand
The tunnel-dark day
behind them
Wait solemnly for their share of the riches:
Enough, perhaps,
for bread
and cheese.

Seasoned

Growing has been my cross, Impaled on a ravenous stomach. Subservient to the regeneration of an over-strained pectoral.

I'm skewered over an open pit with one chef sprinkling salt and another pepper. Oregano fills my desires While paprika engulfs my soul Leaving tobasco to quench my thirst.

Gawking at the slow turning spit, they (my gaggle of gournets) halt. Calling the chefs and their helpers to slice me from that median fire — but the cook gets fresh coals — the connoisseurs burn first.

The kitchen clan takes me for their own. I'm left to an interlude of Brown sugar and pineapple juice. Simmering and swealtering. Luxuriating, thanks to osmosis. Now I'm cured,

Garnished, then shown; the culmination of their kitchenly love, then shot down too greased sluice into palates bursting with over use ---

But I left those benevolent hosts My own little cure. Trichinosis will have a turn.

For so long, father

our thoughts to one another have fallen to the floor and remained unopened and we smile rather than speak choosing silence over conversation because there are few words now.

But there was another time (do you remember, father?

(a) you remove, jauner:
i, heir to your life heir to your flesh, remember):
we had stolen a day from schedules and walked in a wild seashore rain yelling above the wind like two madmen (but only our voices yelledfor the words were of a calm solemnity: that last and final time).

It was the year of the oil slicks and though the enraged oregon coast had escaped most of the menace not all things were spared.

I am thinking of the cormorant, father

(do you remember?)
it lay motionless dying

feathers too fouled even for dragging in sand:

"Animals know when they are dying"
you said as softly as the wind allowed and yet no wind could have kept me from hearing you. You paused, then for the only instance ever in our tiny time of shared lives you spoke of a piece of river land left unpurchased and the Parisian skyline you'd not see again; of feeling the years overtake you like my brother who you'd not outrun for quite some time.

Silent, istood between you and the ocean listening part out of inherited pain part out of knowing i had completed the journey on shared and finite shore:

now a separate death awaited me.
Father, i have a photograph of the cormorant and often step into the two-dimensional reality to feel the chill of grey rain to hear your words sketching lines of bondage in the sand around me and to see again the dying bird locked in its alien mortality.

It is then that i sense the fated entropy of things and myself linger in small temporary consciousness before an immense and patient sea.

THE INTERVIEW (AFTER-"The Applicant" by Syliva Plath,

Are you an upper-crust person? Do you carry your credit cards, driver's license, birth certificate? A briefcase and a handkerchief, Gloves and an overcoat, Membership cards for WASP clubs? No? No? Then we cannot possibly accept you Don't be upset Let me see your hands You did manual labor. Here we will rub those scars away Take away your problems And do anything you want Will you join us? Promise we will attend your funeral at the right time And break up with sadness We will use your example for others You don't have the right shoes on Try these

They are a bit flashy for you yet Will you take them? They will take you anywhere In daytime, but not at night You'll move in high circles with these

We must do something else Cultivate in you some shrewdness Come step down from your morality Well, after all we did You are still in the autter

But wait and see you'll reach the upper-middle the upper-crust Everyone will love you Talk Business and be charming You can really be a mover

You can walk and see around you See, you can be in the high class Big talk, big money deals, dollars and dollars No going back now Will you go on, go on, go on. O Diamond of Diamonds of what were you born? They say you're but carbon, black and plain, and nonexisting.

O Diamond of Diamonds from where do you come? In Africa, Deep in the pipes of old volcanoes, waiting, forming, crystallizing.

O Diamond of Diamonds how innocent and pure. Like the babe at birth, simple and small, and lightly glowing.

O Diamond of Diamonds look at your life. Its the men that raise you that form your worth, and pay the price.

Blood Crystals

Shining angles of light Warm to the touch

Yet cold to the sight. Pure? Clean?

Sliced flesh gleaming in the sun smells of murder . . .

The killer laughs and withdraws the knife. It's all a mirage . . . a phantom vision in a flat surface of stone.

The ruby glitters and the vision is gone.

Walking back-alleys from the Ram to Sambo's

"Tell me, Pendergrass, are you warm water filling a college-student body or a college student with a body full of warm water?"

Midnight

swinging through the doors of the Ram (the Ram follows the Bill, leads to the Fish, the Fish leads to the Water Bearer) I stride into mist and blue mercury vapor, a creek creekling along on my left.

My theme for the evening is embedded in the evening which permeates my treatment of the Theme.

This is it; the light shines on the silver-grey paint of the Delta Gamma Housemother's car, the paint shines in the alley light.

Further on, the asphalt path leads to mud and unfinished offices, piles of concrete plywood stacks of dismantled molds (does aggregate hold the steel rods or do the rods hold the aggregate?)

The mist is sufficient to diffuse light, scatter sound, echo and source are not distinguished by the ears. The watery air bears flutesong from somewhere, streets and buildings banter the sound back and forth . . .

What is this poem about, anyway?
I look in the mud by the Utban Renewal buildings,
the puddles reflect leaf-shadows and Liberty St. lights
(what does a mirror do in the dark?)
I see/feel/think about my boot sole imprinting the mud pressing into the soles of my boots.
he with underfoot axins swiftly

the earth underfoot spins swiftly through space, wobbling slowly, slowly slowly, the waters which the earth bears teem with their burden of fish.

February Night

They came through the windows
The panes cut up the moon beams
But had no power against dull iron men.

Silently, mechanical terrors group around the bed Form an endless circle in the small room Extending out of imagination

Until the moon rises higher

To cast a cold eye across the bed
Dissolving Fear into fragments of winter light.

The Sacrifice

Zagreus struggles violently with the Titans,

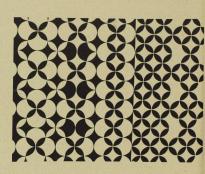

Trying to make a living, His typewriter perspires with exertion.

Zagreus surveys the dreams gone by, Blueprints, paintings, sketches in notebooks, Merril-Lynch lies outstretched upon the table– Unconacious, though still alive. Remnants of past battles and their outcome, Both trophies and scars In the many disguises of a blessed child.

Yet this battle he must win. Something had been said that had made it important.

The mirror, the cone, the knuckle-bone, Gifts of malice, taught to love, Cry for their master's destiny.

Zagreus returns to his task, With the sacrifice of innocent love He forfeits another morsel of flesh As the typewriter comes to rest. Another story finished.

Thoughts Concerning the Glossary of Truth and Meaning in Political Science

Political science words with your ancient Greek origins Is it not a blessing to know that you exist?

You are multi-syllabic. "Epistemological" and "teleological" You roll off my tongue like musical notes.

And you leave a blank feeling in the back of my head Reminiscent of undecipherable exams, of seminars spoken in a code.

Antipestic words. Bland, sterile tones!

Like a lotus eater, the intake of your name weighs down my eyelids; My interest in your meaning is lost without regret.

Just come to me during the right conversations.

Let me recall you in a game of Scrabble, so I can impress my friends in elementary education.

But don't ask to be defined.

- I It was the sun,
 I noticed her first.
 She hung, a golden
 prism in the sky.
 I felt the warmth
 burrow into me,
 then lay in so many
 golden glistens.
 You looked upwards
 then slowly stopped,
 Your words were held crystallized and caught Laverted my gaze
 so as not to see the brilliance reflected in your eyes.
- II You remarked casually on the length of days now and how the coolness seems to leave the trees and corners this time of year. I glanced up in time to hear you say "How nice home was about now, with the sun a pure golden and the water, a mirror of her image. Even the air, you said, whispered of the hue in warm tones."
- III I reached for your hand as the warmth began to glisten cooly within me, But I touched only the shadow as you turned golden, then blended away.
- IV It was the sun,
 I noticed her first.
 She hung, a golden
 prism in the sky.
 Then broke and shattered into so many slivers of the finest topaz.

On the Town

Saturday night again cowboy in from the each logger down from the camp in the tavern getting drunk trying to prove who is stronger and braver or just proving neither can win flighting and cursing bloodied lips swollen eyes staggering until their ten-dollar women take them home.

Nothing can bring you down

Children, no more sorrow, Everybody dreads what's coming tomorrow, They say its up to you,

Be strong, your strength will see you through. You'll make it,

Nothing can bring you down.

Lovers, low and weary,
You've got someone who loves you dearly,
You're free, you're on your own,
Young and poor and little known,
You'll make it,

Nothing can bring you down.

Sing out! The morning sun is shining, There's no need for crying, Nothing can bring you down

Longing for the days gone by Won't bring them back, let's leave them lie, And live the life we have to live, With all the love we have to give.

So live with the blaze of a lusty fire, Lift your soul a mountain higher, Shining stars await your pleasure, Share your joy, unlock you treasure.

The kingdom of happiness lives for today, A flaming rose will rise and show you the way, And when darkness whispers that you must wear the crown, Just remember that nothing can ever bring you down.

I misss those times

Sitting down at Sully's in my '51 Chev. The Bench Boys keeping time I leave to go pick up Sally Cruising way down main street with my best girl at my side Jim and Sue pull up in his coupe And we run the whole town together

I miss those times We had swell times together

Where are all the friends, do the good times have to end? We all thought they'd last forever

We used to all go to the dance to rock'n roll and see our guys once : The old tunes that we knew so well Would keep us going till our feet were sore

Doo Doo Doo Doo Wah

L miss those times We had swell times together

Where are all my friends, do the good times have to end? We all thought they'd last forever

Good times were the rage

years ago when the twist was hot long before they descovered rock we danced all night in the middle of town the kids all got together just to hang around and the music they played really shook the ground friday night at the soda shoppe everybody's learning how to twist and hop jan and dean on the radio souped-up cars at a drive-in show it all began twenty years ago. OOO....

those were the days of the boogaloo the bunny hop and elvis too restless kids in a golden age when good times were the rage good times were the rage

the way we live makes parents cry they watch us leave and wonder why but home's a drag on firday night we'd rather go out and trip the lights goin' downtown to the hop tonight. OOO...

Chorus

those were the days of the boogaloo the bunny hop and elvis too restless kids in a golden age when good times were the rage good times were the rage

Memory of a day.

Winters day a cold and lonely day Time rolls on in a never ending way Ever changing we all must grow Yesterday but a memory Games to play then put away

A childs life, he yearns to be free Echoes of an age lived by others Secrets lost in the heart of another Take the time to listen my brother For we still and ever shall borrow from the past

T: When we were young in the park Late after dark

B: How we could sing

G:Listen to those bells ring

B: With half a chance
A little rumble seat romance

G: No chance

B: What about prohibition

G: No help to inhibitions B: Dates they were few

G: Early curfew

T: When we were young Late after dark Carefree and happy days Too bad they couldn't stay

Spring time such a joyous time Life abloom in a happy tune The butterfly spreads its wings to the sky The butterfly seeks but will it find Answers to question and reasons why Searching for truth, peace, hope and love

Lost in a maze of fantasy
Today will be but a memory
Summer is coming into our lives
A young man sighs an age about to die
Marbled walls and hallowed halls
Shall be but a memory

We drift away to a new day So goodbye we must say To you our friends Those were the days
