Dr. Sherman

The death of Dr. Charles L. Sherman at his home in Salem on June 7 ended a career that will, in its influence, live many years more in the lives of his students, many of whom have achieved positions of eminence.

The Willamette span of his life (31 years) shed the benediction of his rare personality on generations of students, cherished by many as the supreme experience of their college days. Personal tributes by some of these will be published in the fall issue of the Alumnus.

Dr. Sherman was born in Volga City, Iowa, May 21, 1880, to Robert and Mary (Perry) Sherman. He began his education in Volga City schools where he later taught at an early age. He was superintendent of schools for a time at Wesley, Iowa. He then enrolled in Upper Iowa University, Fayette, Iowa, receiving the Ph.B. Degree in 1907. He was offered a Helen Gould Fellowship to New York University where he was granted Ph.B. and Pd.M. in 1912, Ph.D. in 1913 and Pd.D. in 1914. He was a "Sometime Fellow" in New York University for years, giving him the privilege of sending exceptional students to N.Y.U. under the Gould Fellowship.

Dr. Sherman came to Salem in 1914, where he served Willamette University as Professor of Psychology and Philosophy until retirement in 1945. He was author of "The Moral Self." As a fitting culmination to a long period of service in the interest of education, he was recalled to his Alma Mater, Upper Iowa University, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his class to receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters in 1957. Dr. Sherman was listed in Who's Who in America and Who's Who in Psychology.

He was a member of the American Philosophical Society and Psychological Society for many years and a dedicated member of The Wilderness Society of America. He was also a member of the Methodist Church.

In 1916, Doctor Sherman was married to Grace E. Thompson, Willamette University student. Survivors include the widow, Grace Eleanor, two sons, Charles Edward, Oxnard, California, and Harold Eugene, Portland, Oregon, two daughters, Mrs. Mary Eleanor Bones, Taft, Oregon, and Frances Elaine Wadsworth, Salem, Oregon, and eleven grandchildren.

It may truly be said of Doctor Sherman that he was educator, beloved professor and counselor, author and scholar, true and abiding friend, devoted husband and father.

Awards and Grades Announced

Outstanding scholastic achievement was recognized by the College of Law for the spring semester by the naming of award winners by Dean Seward Reese.

Charles W. Hall of Salem received the Frank A. Turner award for having the highest scholastic standing for the year. He will be a second year student this fall.

Kevin Midlam of San Diego was judged by the faculty to have made the most satisfactory scholastic progress in his final year and received the U. S. Law Week award, while Bender-Moss awards for excellence and performance in trial practice went to Thomas Lodge, Vancouver, Washington, and Robert McGehee, Reno.

Corpus Juris Secundum awards for attaining the highest ranking in the class went to Charles Hall, first year; Hugh K. Cole, Jr., second year; and B. Gary McBride, third year.

In addition, the Dean recorded 15 names on the Dean's list for finishing the spring semester in the upper 10 per cent of each class.

At the same time, Registrar Richard Yocom announced that 197 individuals in the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Music made the spring semester honor roll (3.5 or better).

Of this number, 30 students had straight A's. The all school grade average was 2.833; all women, 2.910; all men, 2.771; all sorority, 2.929; all fraternity, 2.870; all athletic, 2.802. Sigma Alpha Epsilon topped the men with a 3.073 average, while Pi Beta Phi led the women with 3.005.

Thetford Lodge

Willamette University soon will acquire a campus "outpost" 35 miles from Salem.

Ex-governor Charles A. Sprague, a member of the Willamette board of trustees, has announced that he and Mrs. Sprague will give their private mountain retreat, Thetford Lodge, to the university.

The lodge will be turned over to the university some time during the 1963-64 school year. It will be used as an educational and recreational facility for faculty and students—small group meetings, student retreats, faculty conferences.

Thetford Lodge overlooks the Little North Fork of the Santiam River, seven miles above Mehama on Elkhorn Road. It is in a recreation area controlled by the Bureau of Land Management.

The 30x38 split-level lodge, designed by Pietro Belluschi, commands a magnificent view of the river and of a sheer rock cliff upstream. The lodge includes a living room, dining room and kitchen, all built around a massive fireplace; a spread of picture windows; two downstairs bedrooms; two bedrooms in the loft; a huge porch; and a large basement.

The lodge is served with electricity and a pressure water system supplied by a deep well.

The name Thetford Lodge has historical and sentimental significance for the Spragues. John Chamberlain, paternal ancestor of Mrs. Sprague's, went up the Connecticut River before the French-Indian war and founded the town of Thetford, Vermont. The lodge is named after that town.

Dean Reese to Address American Bar in Chicago

Seward Reese, Dean of the College of Law, will appear on the program of the American Bar Association at the annual convention August 12. He will address a joint session of two groups: (1) the section on Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar, and (2) the National Conference of Bar Examiners.

The address, entitled "It Ain't Necessarily So," is characteristic of the Dean but probably less characteristic of the august proceedings of the bar. "The purpose of this speech," Reese explains, "is to question some of our basic assumptions concerning legal education, the practice of law, and the background of those who serve on the bench."

Some of the sacred cows he impales on his lance are the traditional criteria for admitting students to law school, for evaluating their aptitudes, and for determining their fitness for admission to the bar. Good college grades sometimes forecast a good law school performance, high LSAT scores sometimes pinpoint exceptional legal ability and brilliant scores in the bar examination sometimes presage successful careers—but "It Ain't Necessarily So."

Though Reese makes no pretense of conducting a scientific sampling, he has amassed an impressive array of actual cases from law deans and lawyers all over the country. Some of the most unpromising human material for whom teachers can predict nothing but "poverty, penury and woe" turn out to be distinguished judges, famous trial lawyers and corporation counsels.

Maybe some careers are blighted by poor scholastic performance . . . "but friends—this is not absolutely true. (You will note that my English improves as I go on)" says the Dean.

New Team in Admissions

Registrar Richard Yocom was named the new Dean of Admissions this summer and will be joined by Richard G. Rohrer to take over the post left by Charles Paeth, who accepted the Dean of Students position at Oregon College of Education.

Yocom graduated from Willamette in 1949 and returned to the university as admissions counselor in 1955 after obtaining his master's degree in psychology at the University of Mexico. He has been registrar since '58 as well as assistant professor of psychology.

Rohrer is a 1958 graduate of Willamette and went to the University of Oregon for his master's degree in education. He taught at North Bend for one year and has been a teacher and counselor at Milwaukie High School since 1959. He will be in charge of the high school visitation program and the counseling of prospective students, while Yocom will handle the administration of both admissions and registration.

Golfers at N.A.I.A. Finals

Coach Norm Chapman's golfers earned national laurels this spring as well as claiming the Northwest Conference and District 2 N.A.I.A. championships.

The Bearcat team of Bob Woodle, Mike Laughlin, Bob Elder and Bruce Hubbell finished seventh in the N.A.I.A. championship at Kansas City. Eastern New Mexico won the crown in the competition between the 23 teams from all parts of the country.

Woodle finished in a tie for sixth out of 143 individuals and was elected to the N.A.I.A. All-American team. He, Laughlin and Elder graduated in June, while Hubbell will be a junior this fall.

It was the first time a Willamette golf team has entered the nationals, but the 12th time in 13 years that the Bearcats have won the NWC.

Let's talk to Mrs. Morton E. Peck about

"DIAMONDS IN THE BASEMENT"

Ellsworth College in Iowa has lately uncovered a rich resource created by the Pecks (father and son) sixty to eighty years ago. Mrs. Peck, widow and collaborator of one of Willamette's best loved professors, carries on as curator of the Peck Herbarium in Collins Hall.

A year or so ago a stranger turned up in the central Iowa town of Iowa Falls. He wanted to know if the town had a museum. No, he was told, there was no museum. Unsatisfied, he went to the local Ellsworth College, where he got the same response. A student, overhearing the conversation, remembered some cases of stuffed birds and animals in the basement. The stranger, a taxidermist, went to take a look. He emerged some time later to inform the college that it had diamonds in the basement.

The collection contained over five hundred specimens, superbly mounted in natural settings. "Such taxidermy!" the visitor exclaimed. "And where did he get his training?" (The answer to this question is that George D. Peck was largely self-taught). In the collection were several varieties of warblers now extinct, and a great whooping crane of which only 34 remain on the North American continent, jealously guarded by two governments. The collection is estimated to be worth not less than fifty thousand dollars and possibly twice that. It is now being established in adequate quarters.

An Alumnus reporter, hearing fragments of this story, went to call on Mrs. Peck, who was found seated on the shady, well-kept lawn of the small but attractive Peck home in Salem, which sets far back from the street at the end of a curving flagstone walk. From her memories, and from a few documents she was able to dig up, she tried to fill in the story of this later-day Audubon. "I am the only one left," she explained, referring to the Pecks of her generation. "I am sure I could reconstruct this history if I could go back and talk to some of the Iowa people who are old enough to remember."

The Peck farm, now owned by Miss Ida Wade, is located on the Cedar River near LaPorte. The old home, a log structure now faced with siding, is still there, and nearby is the log cabin erected by George Peck as his workshop, still carefully guarded by Miss Wade.

Morton Peck's father on his Iowa farm (c. 1890)

When Morton was eleven years old, in 1882, he began to assist his father in gathering specimens, an activity he continued for many years. The taxidermy was a pure labor of love on George Peck's part, often attended with vexing frustrations. One time, when he encountered a tough problem, he appealed to William Hornaday, one of the greatest naturalists of his day and credited by the Encyclopedia Britannica as a prime mover in saving the American bison from extinction. Hornaday's help, generously given, started a life-long friendship.

In 1903 when Morton was a young biology professor at Ellsworth College and a graduate of Iowa's Cornell, he started with a friend on a canoe trip down the Cedar River. They followed the water courses into the Mississippi and eventually wound up at Vicksburg. Morton's diary contains this entry: "It was hard work and we were getting tired and the autumn was coming on; so we sold our outfit to some wharf roustabouts and took the train for New Orleans."

The journey continued from there by fruit steamer to British Honduras. The original destination was Yucatan, but the Indians there had taken in the welcome mat and were in no mood to receive visitors. Many specimens from this trip were added to the Peck collection.

Returning to Ellsworth, Professor Peck found among his students a certain Jessie Grant, who shared his enthusiasm for all forms of wild life. Immediately after their marriage in 1905 the pair started on another expedition to the jungles of Central America, forming a research team that endured for more than fifty years and contributed notably to their chosen scientific field. Plants gathered on this trip were sent to Harvard and duplicates were distributed from there to some of the world's greatest collections, including New York Botanical Gardens; Kew Gardens, London; and Royal Botanical Gardens in Berlin. Other specimens are owned by the University of Nebraska. Birds and mammals from this expedition are now in the Peck collection at Willamette.

They lived primitively for many months in the teeming tropical wilds. Mrs. Peck's most vivid memories, it seems, are of insects rather than science. They had none of our present-day chemical protection. "We doped ourselves with kerosene," she said, "but this was more annoying to us than to the bugs."

How did they get their birds without damaging the plumage? Mrs. Peck walked to a corner of the library and brought out an old double barreled shot gun. Into one of the barrels, she explained, they inserted an auxiliary tube that would receive small shells, loaded with whatever grade of shot they needed, down to "dust shot" for humming birds.

In 1908 Professor Peck came to Willamette University as professor of biology. His father had decided to "migrate" to Oregon three or four years previously because Iowa was becoming too civilized and many of the birds that formerly passed that way were no longer seen. The collection was sold to Ellsworth College for three hundred dollars, and the Pecks spent most of one summer transporting the exhibits and setting them up at the college. In Oregon, Professor Morton Peck and his wife embarked on their fifty-year labors and Father and Mother Peck lived for many years in the home they had established, surrounded by the woods south of Salem.

Willamette students of an earlier day well remember the return of Morton and Jessie Peck from their summer expeditions loaded down with plants, many of which represented species discovered and named by Professor Peck. Dr. Helen M. Gilkey, Curator Emeritus of the Herbarium at Oregon State University, has written of him, "Throughout his active years, field work was his delight and during his fifty-one years in Oregon he built up a collection of its plants and a knowledge of its furthest bounds probably unequalled by any other student of the state's biological riches."

Professor Peck never had an academic degree higher than a master's, though he received two honorary doctorates. Nevertheless, his scientific colleagues rated him, and still do, as the supreme authority on Oregon plants. His "Manual of the Higher Plants of Oregon" is the standard work in its field.

As an author he had another side. Out of his modest, gentle and introspective personality came many poems of high merit, now collected but as yet unpublished. It was an avocation that he followed from boyhood. Dr. Gilkey has characterized his poetry as "deep, philosophical, and expressed in singing words."

And now comes a short sequel.

Gary Heyden, a graduate architectural student in Iowa, chose as the subject for his thesis the pioneer homes in the region. He remembered a night he spent in an old log cabin as a Boy Scout, and returning to the site he found the Peck workshop, unchanged. In delving into its history he uncovered the Peck story and made it a part of his thesis. The Iowa Historical Society has preserved the thesis as a document of historic worth. If their plans mature the workshop will become a memorial to George D. Peck and his son, Morton E. Peck.

Mrs. Peck gazed thoughtfully into the distance and said, "Nothing in the world would have charmed him as much as that."

Mrs. Peck in her home, and, below, Professor Peck on a field trip.

This log cabin was fashioned with axe and adze by George D. Peck in the 1880s. It is the workshop in which the amateur taxidermist assembled his priceless collection of wild life, now owned by Ellsworth College.

A basic home reference library for the college graduate

Books for all rooms chosen and annotated by Lawrence Clark Powell

Your basic home reference library will be determined by who you are, what you do, and where you live. Lawyer, banker, doctor, writer, realtor, housewife; east, west, north, south; each will need his or her own books of reference. Is there such a thing as an average man or woman college graduate and a library to suit? I think not. Individual differences in taste and needs are infinite; regional interests are extremely varied.

So any choice of 25 basic home reference books is arbitrary. My selections are mostly orthodox, although I have salted in a few eyebrow-raisers. Alice in Wonderland and Anderson's Fairy Tales, for example — just to make you ask, how can he call them reference books? I'll tell you. Because I've found myself referring to them again and again through the years since boyhood, using them in the aging process as touchstones, measuring sticks, and lodestars. Isn't that a good enough definition of a reference book?

I have suggested locations for these books — living room, kitchen, study or den, and bedroom. You may prefer to shelve the Modern Home Medical Adviser in the rumpus room. Some people read in the bathroom, if not actually in the tub. I don't. But I do keep a few reference books in my car, to read when tied up on the freeway.

The secret of a good reference library is to have the books always there. Lend not your books. Don't try to compete with the public library. The paperback revolution has brought thousands of good books down to purse level. Architects, particularly of tract houses, seem to be unaware that people are buying books as never before. Although I own hundreds of paperbacks, my reference books are all in hardbound copies for the hard wear they get.

All of the 25 reference books in the following list are in print and can be bought at, or through, your local bookstore. If there isn't a bookstore in your community, you are lacking one of the hallmarks of civilization. Church, school, library, park, bookstore — the essentials for cultural living.

The basic things in life are of the brain, the stomach, and the heart, and my reference books relate to all three. He who lives and reads not is no more alive than he who reads and lives not. I remember what that great public librarian, Joseph L. Wheeler, retired head of the Enoch Pratt Free Library of Baltimore said when queried as to why he had thousands of books shelved in every room and on the stairs of his home: "Books are cheaper than wallpaper." And who was it who said, "Books! Next to mother's milk the best food."? See item 5. Use your reference books!

LIVING ROOM

1. Webster's New International Dictionary of the English Language. Third edition unabridged. G. C. Merriam Co. $47.50, plus $32.50 for the little wheeled truck to hold it.
Along with stove and bed, this is basic household equipment. Keep it centrally in the house, with smaller dictionaries in the other rooms.
2. The Columbia Encyclopedia in one Volume. Second edition with 1959 supplement. Edited by Bridgewater and Sherwood. Columbia University Press. $35.
If you haven't shelf and purse for one of the great multi-volume encyclopedias, this is the best single-volume work. When things get strained domestically, gather the family in front of the fireplace and read from the encyclopedia. It soothes and distracts.
3. A Dictionary of Contemporary American Usage. By Bergen Evans and Cornelia Evans. Random House. $5.95.
A witty gloss on words and phrases, good and bad, which can be used as a tool by writers and as a conversation piece by readers.
4. The Reader's Encyclopedia. An Encyclopedia of World Literature and the Arts. Edited by William Rose Benet. Crowell. $47.95.
Includes all manner of things, themes, people and places, encountered in reading, with 19,008 articles on 1,270 pages. Excellent for students' homework.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Lawrence Clark Powell, Dean of the School of Library Service at UCLA, holds the B.A., and Litt. D. degrees from Occidental College and the Ph.D. from the University of Dijon, France. From a bookstore job he went into public-library work and then joined the UCLA staff in 1938, serving as chief librarian from 1944 to 1961. He has been Lecturer in English since 1954 and became Dean of the School of Library Service in 1960.

Dean Powell is an author and editor, and he writes a monthly magazine column on Western books and authors. Among some 20 books he has written are The Alchemy of Books (1954), A Passion for Books (1959), and Books in My Baggage (1960).

If you want to know the 100 paperbacks he has selected for the library of a sophisticated family, or if you are going abroad and want his list, "Around the World in Sixty Books," send him ten cents in coin or stamps for each list. His address, School of Library Service, University of California, Los Angeles 24, Calif.

5. Familiar Quotations. By John Bartlett. Thirteenth and Centennial Edition. 1955. Little, Brown & Co. $10. Who, where, when.
6. The World Almanac and Book of Facts. Edited by Harry Hansen. New York World-Telegram. $2. This famous annual originated as a newspaper office handbook. If you are addicted to quizzes and contests, chain this book to you.
7. Documents of American History. Edited by Henry Steele Commager. Appleton-Century-Crofts. $6.50. Here, in full, are the fundamental sources of American history, from the time of Columbus to the present, which are more read about than read.
8. Home Book of Verse, American and English. Compiled by Burton Egbert Stevenson. Ninth edition. 2 volumes. Henry Holt & Co. $25. First published in 1912, this massive compilation of familiar and conventional poetry is arranged in broad subject divisions as Love and Death. I have an early single-volume edition, given to me by my mother on my ninth birthday, and it doubles nicely as a doorstop when it's windy in my study. Companion volume is Stevenson's Home Book of Modern Verse. $10. The compiler, who died last year in very old age, was librarian of the Chillicothe, Ohio, Public Library.
9. Rand McNally Cosmopolitan World Atlas. Rand McNally Co. $14.95. "I should like to rise and go where the golden apples grow," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson in A Child's Garden of Verses. A good atlas is just as poetic a book. If you have traveled, it will show you where you went; if you plan to travel, it will guide you. There are many atlases; this one is excellent for its large, clear maps and its wealth of statistical and other supplementary data.

KITCHEN

10. The Joy of Cooking. By Irma Rombauer and Marion Becker. Bobbs-Merrill. $4.95. Flip a coin for this or Fanny Farmer, and whichever comes up, you will get one of the two best cookbooks according to la cuisine americaine. This is another book to be chained — to your wife, of course, who is already secured to stove and sink.

11. The Cookout Book. With an introduction to the techniques of barbecue cooking and entertaining. By Helen Evans Brown and Philip S. Brown. Ward Ritchie Press. $7.50. Imaginative and appetizing recipes for barbecuing meats, fowl, and seafoods, in a volume that was chosen by the American Institute of Graphic Arts as one of the year's most beautiful. Incidentally, the Browns agree that the best cooks are of the male sex — outdoor cooks, that is.
12. Larousse Gastronomique. The Encyclopedia of Food, Wine and Cookery. By Prosper Montagne. Crown Publishers. $20. The first English translation of this huge French classic. The accent is on that country, for there is no denying the French leadership in the world of food. The articles and illustrations cover everything relating to the subject, including places, plates, partridges, and parsley.
14. Hortus Second. A Concise Dictionary of Gardening, General Horticulture, and Cultivated Plants in North America. Compiled by L. H. Bailey and Ethel Zoe Bailey. Macmillan. $13.50. This is a revised and enlarged second edition of the classic American work on green growing things. If you are lucky, you will have a kitchen garden with lettuce, parsley, herbs (and snails), and Hortus will be your bible.
15. Modern Medical Adviser. Edited by Morris Fishbein, M.D. Garden City Books. $4.95. Written under Dr. Fishbein's direction by various medical authorities, this is a good book to have around just in case.

STUDY, DEN, AND BEDROOM

16. Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass. By Lewis Carroll. Grosset & Dunlap. $2.75. The older one grows, the better it reads. This edition includes the original illustrations by John Tenniel. The author, whose real name was C. L. Dodgson, was a professor of mathematics who lived for 45 years in the same bachelor quarters at Christ Church, Oxford, none of which accounts for this work of genius.
17. Fairy Tales. By Hans Christian Anderson. Grosset & Dunlap. $2.75. Here again it's a coin flip as to whether it be Anderson or Grimm. I flipped, and the Great Dane won. This edition has illustrations by Arthur Szyk.
18. Islandia. By Austin T. Wright. Rinehart & Co. $5.95. This is a long utopian novel, written in secret by a law professor and published posthumously. Throughout the world a body of readers have organized and called themselves Islandians, sans dues or by-laws. This novel is the standard reference work by which they live.
19. The Portable Emerson. Edited by Mark Van Doren. Viking Press. $2.95.

Though he lived and wrote a hundred years ago, he is more modern than we are, his prose seeded with time bombs, set to go off in succeeding generations. If you are timid, conservative, and a slave of the status quo, don't let this book in your house.

20. The Portable Thoreau. Edited by Carl Bode. Viking Press. $2.95. Here is another Yankee radical who whipped progress, conformity, togetherness, and all the other dogmas which bite our heels. This too is a subversive book which should be given to the young and kept from the old.
21. The Portable Melville. Edited by Jay Leyda. Viking Press. $2.95. Includes the best of the novels, stories, poems, and letters of the great mariner-mystic, who won popular fame, and lost it, and won it again — posthumously. Melville was born and died in Manhattan, and that island community has yet to erect an appropriate memorial to him.
22. The Portable Whitman. Edited by Mark Van Doren. Viking Press. $2.95. The good gray Quaker poet's Leaves of Grass stays forever green through the years which wither most things. "Who touches this book, touches a man."

23. The Portable Mark Twain. Edited by Bernard de Voto. Viking Press. $2.95. Includes Huckleberry Finn, that revolutionary novel which points to the ultimate reconciliation between white and black.
24. Shakespeare's Complete Works. Edited by W. J. Craig. Oxford University Press. $4.50. Next to the Bible, and counting out the dictionary, this is the most basic book in English. I have chosen this from among many good editions simply because I have lived with my copy for 30 years and worn it beautifully smooth.
25. The Holy Bible. King James Version. Oxford University Press. $9.75. Choice of a Bible is a personal matter. You may prefer a modern translation. I don't. Give me the organ music of the King James. This edition is leatherbound, a handy size, with concordance and index. Keep it by your bed, to be read first thing in the morning and the last thing at night.

WHAT HAPPENS ON THE CAMPUS

summer time?

Coe Institute

One of the smallest, most earnest (and also quietest) activities on the campus this summer was the six-weeks session on American Studies sponsored by the Coe Foundation of New York. Twenty-nine hard-working high school teachers, all recipients of Coe Fellowships, devoted themselves to recharging their batteries and enriching their professional backgrounds.

Only two complaints were heard: (1) so little time into which to cram so much material, and (2) the food was too good — they were getting fat.

The Summer Institute of American Studies was directed by Dr. Theodore L. Shay, head of the Department of Political Science at Willamette. He was assisted by Dean Gregg in History, Dr. Stillings in Public Administration and Political Science and Dr. Gillis in Economics.

In addition to classroom sessions and much, much "home work", the students visited the various departments and institutions of the state government, listened to many visiting lecturers and (under Dr. Gatke's guidance) visited some historic sites.

Participants came from all of the Northwestern states and one from North Carolina. This latter far-traveler was accepted by three Coe Institute colleges, but chose Willamette because of the program offered and because of the opportunity to visit the Northwest.

"These students," commented Dr. Gregg, "have such varied and rich backgrounds and such interest and eagerness that they virtually teach each other."

The group consisted of eight women and 21 men, representing 23 colleges. They lived on two floors of Doney Hall and had their meals in the Doney dining room. Their hostess was Mrs. R. Hurdon, Sigma Chi house mother.

Girls' State

Once again Willamette was the home for Girls' State this summer, hosting 270 high school coeds and 35 adult leaders from the sponsoring American Legion Auxiliary, June 10-16.

Girls' State first moved onto the Willamette campus in 1948, shifting from Silver Creek Falls camp grounds to take advantage of the university's proximity to state government facilities. The program has been based at Willamette ever since.

As in the previous years, the girls were introduced to the intricacies of state, city and county government and conducted mock conventions and elections on all three levels. Chosen leaders performed the duties of their offices just like their official counterparts.

The purpose of the whole program is to help the participants gain an understanding of the democratic form of government so as to be effective in community politics and forever strive to preserve our form of government.

The girls experienced the two party system under the guise of Nationalist and Federalist titles, and with the help of interested state officials were able to experience government in action in very true-to-life fashion.

Visiting dignitaries supplied first hand reports of their duties. Included in the program were Governor Mark Hatfield, Attorney General Robert Thornton, Mayor Willard Marshall (Salem), and Salem City Manager Kent Matthewson among others.

Miss Nancy Kirkpatrick, state representative from Lebanon, was the official chairman of Girls' State, while Willamette Business Manager Dave Lewis was the university representative. Both were quite pleased with this year's program, indicating that the girls had an enjoyable as well as rewarding experience.

JESSI—for young scientists

There was something markedly unusual about classes in such subjects as anthropology, chemistry, mathematics, physics, radioisotopes and zoology at Willamette this summer.

These courses, usually dominated by boys, were attended only by girls—high school students participating in the Junior Engineers' and Scientists' Summer Institute (JESSI) held on our campus June 16-29.

This is the second consecutive year in which Willamette has been a host school in the JESSI program, which started at Oregon State University eight years ago and has since spread into a nation-wide organization directed from its Portland headquarters. This summer there were eleven host colleges, three for girls and eight for boys. JESSI-for-Girls sessions were held at Willamette, Tennessee Polytechnic and DePauw. Oregon State University offered one of the JESSI-for-Boys sessions.

JESSI drew 131 girls to Willamette. They came from Oregon, Washington, California, Alaska (all the way from Point Barrow), Montana, Idaho and Nevada. All will return to high school this fall, about half juniors and half seniors. All are exceptional students selected by their high school teachers. The girls had a cumulative high school grade point average of 3.5 (in "solid" subjects, it was emphasized). Over 20 of them had earned straight A's in high school.

The purpose of JESSI is to acquaint high school students with various areas of learning in science and engineering, and to help them decide whether or not they should plan a career in those fields.

Richard A. Yocom, Registrar and campus director for the JESSI program, said, "Many girls have written to tell me that JESSI convinced them that science is their field. On the other hand, some said that JESSI did just the opposite—convinced them that science is not for them. Without JESSI they would not have made this discovery until they were in college and would have wasted a lot of time."

Uncovering students' negative reactions is one of the basic functions of JESSI, explains Stanley H. Shirk, executive secretary of the national organization.

"JESSI does not attempt to propagandize students into choosing scientific or technical careers," said Shirk. "It is not a sugar-coated exposure of the sciences and engineering, but a sincere effort to give the students information that will enable them to make their own decisions with intelligence and confidence."

The JESSI curriculum is college-level, taught by regular faculty members of the host colleges. Students are given no choice as to classes. They follow a schedule planned by the host college, designed to expose them to a wide field of subjects.

Vera M. Haberer, Dean of Women, worked with the girls on study skills and advice to the college-bound. "It was an excellent program and a rare opportunity for the girls," she said. She expressed high respect for the quality of the students enlisted by the JESSI organization.

After the girls had gone we wandered into the book store to talk to Mrs. Zitzewitz. She smiled. "Business boomed while they were here," she said. "They bought books (not only texts but many others), gifts, souvenirs and lots and lots of white sweat shirts with a bold Willamette across the front." This latter was plainly evident every afternoon as the girls trooped across the campus from Belknap for a swim at the Y.

Summer Sessions

Willamette's Summer Session is keeping 97 students and 19 professors busy as students strive for undergraduate college credit, teacher certification, credit for advanced degrees or for proficiency in special interest areas.

Dr. James R. Lyles, Jr. is once again directing the summer school that is offering courses in education, English, history, music, philosophy, political science, psychology, speech and various foreign languages. Sessions are planned to allow students to take eight weeks, six weeks or two weeks of summer work.

Campus Shifts and Renovations

Baxter Hall and Fraternity wing residents will find added comfort to their collegiate living when they return in the fall, as the university has installed new bed-loungers to replace the old spring beds. After a restful night, the bed can be easily converted into a davenport arrangement. In addition, new doors and frames have been added to all rooms in the Baxter area.

Elsewhere on campus, certain offices have new sites. The admissions offices are now grouped around new Dean of Admissions Richard Yocom, occupying the former Dean of Students area. In turn, the personnel deans have moved to Waller to occupy the former Alumni offices, left vacant when the latter switched to the first floor of University House. The publicity office has new quarters on the second floor of the University House, moving from the gymnasium.

Methodist Conference

For the second year the Oregon Conference of the Methodist Church chose the Willamette campus for its four-day annual meeting, June 4 through 7.

This was by far the largest group to use campus facilities this summer. All of the rooms in Matthews and Belknap were occupied, although fewer than half the delegates used on-campus accommodations. The All-Conference banquet was set up in the gymnasium, covering the entire floor. Other meals were served in the Matthews dining room. A special dinner for the ministers' wives (always a highlight for the ladies) was held in the Baxter dining room.

The main sessions of the conference convened in the Fine Arts Auditorium, while study sections, committees and boards used classrooms in Fine Arts and Eaton and the Waller Auditorium. Worship services were held in the First Methodist Church.

Breakey's Prolific Voles

The Willamette Bearcats are well known, but how about the Willamette Voles?

Well, if zoology professor Dr. Don Breakey has anything to say about it, the Willamette voles, or field mice as they are commonly called, just may make a name for themselves . . . if not by talent, at least by numbers.

Dr. Breakey is currently the guardian of between 800-900 of the "wee beasties," a job that requires about four hours per day throughout the summer to feed, clean, sort, index and analyze. He is in the midst of trying to find a method of field identification of age of the voles so as to enable analysis of populations of "field mice." If such a method can be found, the results could have profound agricultural benefits.

The vole colony started with just 40 specimens, one of which came from Dr. Breakey's own front yard. The "family" includes former residents of Pendleton, Unity and Salem. The female vole is capable of reproducing every 20 days . . . and some are that eager . . . so the population grows in what might be called "vullies." The average litter is around five, although the record is eight. The life span of a hearty vole is something over a year in general, but seems longer when one considers that they can reproduce at six weeks.

Home for the colony is the basement of the new Collins addition, where 182 cages house the population. Bill Bliss, a 1963 graduate, is helping Dr. Breakey this summer with a job that Dr. Breakey considers "just getting going."

Students Win Blood Donor Award

"Of the nine colleges participating in the blood donor program there is one which continues to increase its blood donations each year."

With these opening words the Oregon Red Cross Blood Bank went on to cite Willamette as the outstanding college in the blood program. The citation was accompanied by the Dr. John C. Adams College Award trophy.

From an average enrollment of 1256 students 532 units of blood were collected—a student participation of 42.3 per cent, topping last year's 39.4 per cent.

The trophy was presented by Mr. Ray Navotney, vice-chairman of the N.W. Regional Blood Council, and accepted for the University by Mrs. Robert Schneider.

Alumni-Varsity Baseball Game

Spit 'n polish and a whole lot of courage were ingredients for the Bearcats' old-time baseballers when they lost a 7-2 decision to the varsity in an action filled finale to Alumni Day June 2.

The ol' glove was greased and cleats cleaned by 15 diamond stars of the past (alas, the glitter was gone), including Bruce Barker, Bill Beard, Lee Shinn, Hal Moe, Pete Harvey, Terry Ziegelman, Irv Roth, Cliff Girod, Dan Feller, Fidel Gaviola, Mike Coen, Alva Brown, Bruce Boatman, Hisao Sato and Deke Walker.

Coen, Gaviola, Feller and Harvey each took a turn at the mound, but despite Deke's help in the umpire garb, coach John Lewis' current players, second place finishers in the Northwest Conference, amassed all of their runs in the second inning and coasted to victory.

Why all colleges are concerned about the coming decade

Percent of 18-21 year age group in college { 1930 - 12%
1962 - 37%

Number of college students { 1962 - 3,850,000
1972 - 7,500,000

Percent of Gross National Product spent for higher education { 1930 - 0.65%
1962 - 1.06%

While percent of college age youths attending college has tripled, the percent of GNP devoted to higher education has grown four tenths of one percent.

"We have learned that we are quite rich enough to defend ourselves, whatever the cost. We must now learn that we are quite rich enough to educate ourselves as we need to be educated." (Walter Lippmann)

BARBEQUE ON CAMPUS AT NOON

CLASS REUNIONS

- 1943 — Mrs. Hume Downs, Chairman
- 1953 — Dr. Robert Bain, Chairman
- 1958 — Mr. Dean Short, Chairman

Willamette's football fortunes won't be entirely gLEEless this year despite the graduation loss of "all-everything" quarterback Tommy Lee (with ball) who is currently making a name for himself with the Ottawa Rough Riders in the Canadian pro football league. Lee has been outstanding in two exhibition games for the Riders, drawing daily praise from coaches and the press alike. Coaches Ted Ogdahl and Norm Chapman will have trouble replacing him, but the outlook for the upcoming season is good, with a nucleus of 17 lettermen and some outstanding newcomers expected.

REUNION DINNER HONORING SPEC KEENE. All Bearcat athletes who played under Spec Keene are invited to attend this reunion dinner. Spec will be there, although he has to miss the OSC-Indiana game at Bloomington. Notices will be sent out to all athletes of record in the Alumni office. If you know of any who have allowed their alumni contacts to lapse, please tell them.
