"ALPHA"

Foreword

CONVENTION has dictated that the foreword or preface of any publication should apologize for its appearance, so we apologize for presenting this 1914 "Wallulah." Convention has further dictated that, in publications of this sort, we would say something about being repaid for our days of work and nights of toil if "in after years as you gaze at these pages fond memories of college days" — etc. And convention reminds us once more that we should thank each one who has in any way assisted in the preparation of this volume—and so we do most heartily. We wish to thank all of those who responded so willingly to our requests for assistance, and also those who would have been glad to assist if we had asked them. Particularly we wish to thank Miss Florence Page and Miss Ruth Owen, and especially Miss Margaret Gill of the Art Department, for their contributions to our art work.

The Name "Wallulah"

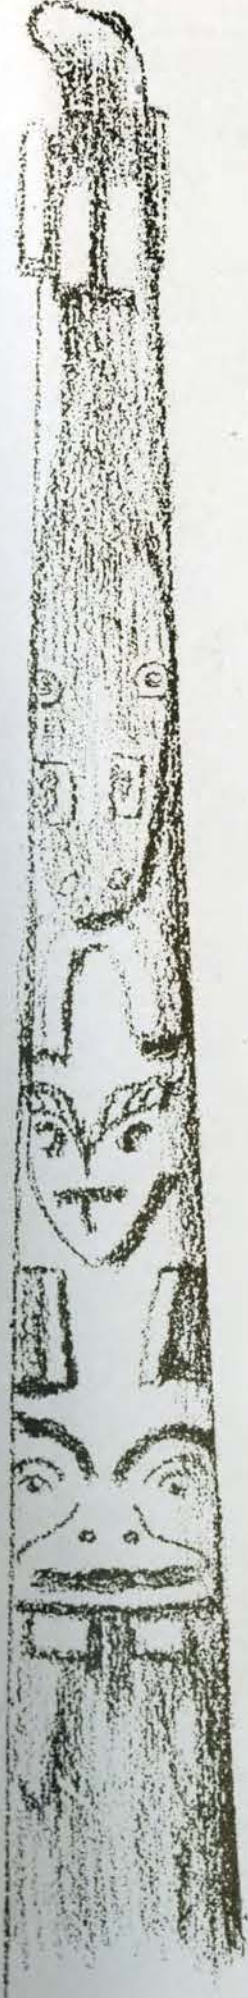

THERE has been some inquiry as to the origin of the name of the Junior Annual, the "Wallulah." Of course all who are familiar with the Indian legends of Oregon, and particularly with Balch's, "The Bridge of the Gods," appreciate at once the significance of the name, and its peculiar relation to the name of the University. According to tradition, Wallulah was an Indian maid, the daughter of old Multnomah, the powerful chief of the Wallamets," (which is the original spelling of the name) the tribe which occupied this section of the Pacific Northwest, and which held many other tribes under subjection. This was in the days when the fabled bridge of the gods spanned the Columbia at the place which is now known as the Cascades. An ancient prophecy said that the power of the Wallamets should be unbroken as long as this bridge stood.

Cecil Gray, a white man, came out from the East as a missionary to the Indians, and the beautiful Wallulah fell in love with the pale face. But, altho he loved her, he felt that he could not be true to his mission if he married her, so he forced himself to give her up. His work stirred up much animosity among the redskins, so much indeed, that he was finally condemned to death by a council of the chiefs; but according to the story the Great Spirit took him before the ordeal.

Troubles began to arise for the Wallamets, and at the same time a volcanic disturbance arose, during which the great bridge fell. This was taken as a sign from the gods, and the power of the Wallamets was broken. Wallulah was given to a Cayuse chieftain, Snoqualmie, a man whom she hated. While he was taking her up the Columbia to his tribe, the canoe was capsized in the newly-formed rapids at the Cascades, and the unhappy Wallulah was drowned.

The girl whose picture is used as the frontispiece is a Umatilla Indian. Her English name is Miss Anna Kash Kash, and she is the granddaughter of the old war chief, Peu-Peu-Mox-Mox, who was killed by the whites during the battle of Walla Walla in 1856. "The Wallulah" is indebted to Mr. Lee Moorhouse of Pendleton for the picture of Wallulah, so beautiful and so appropriate.

THE INDIAN MISSION SCHOOL

A Glimpse at the Past

THE romantic story of Willamette University from its beginning in 1834, when Jason Lee, his nephew Daniel Lee, and Cyrus Shepard, pitched their tents on what is still called Mission Bottom, located about ten miles below Salem, and decided that there they would build an Indian mission school, is unparalleled in the history of educational institutions. All are familiar with the succeeding events, how they built a log cabin, how they gathered in the Indian children, how Lee went back to New York for reinforcements, how in 1839 nineteen families came around Cape Horn in the ship Lausanne, and how on board the boat, in celebrating the centennial of Methodism, a collection of $650 was taken to start a school for white children. These were the first steps, and show how important the early settlers considered the subject of education.

In 1842 at a meeting in Jason Lee's home in Chemeketa, as Salem was originally called, it was definitely decided to start a school for white children, which they resolved should grow into an academy and later into a college. It was decided to name the school the Oregon Institute. Their next step was to find a location for the school.

Meanwhile the site of the Indian school had proved to be low and unhealthy, so Lee had procured a section of land, located in what is now the center of Salem, and had built a $10,000 frame structure, later known as the Institute Building, near where the University Gymnasium now stands, and had moved the Indian school to this new location. But the school did not prosper; disease had gained a foothold among the Indians and many died, while many of the others became superstitious and went back to their savage homes. On account of these circumstances, it was decided to sell the property to the trustees of the newly-organized "Oregon Institute." This was done and the school was immediately opened for white children. Thus ten years after Jason Lee had first set foot in the Willamette Valley, Willamette University was in actual operation.

The beginning was small, but the school grew rapidly. At first Mrs. Chloe Clark Willson, who will be mentioned later, was the sole teacher; but soon primary and academic departments were organized and the teaching force was increased. Finally in 1853, by an act of the Legislative Assembly of the territory of Oregon, Willamette University was formally chartered with the Oregon Institute as a preparatory school. In 1859, the year that Oregon was admitted to the Union, the first class, composed of Miss Emily York, was graduated from the College of Liberal Arts.

The next chapter is a story of hardships and of self-denial. The pioneer community of Salem was not wealthy and money was very scarce. Often the teachers served without pay, and even gave donations to the school from their own very limited resources. But the dark days brought out the heroes, such men as "Father" Waller, Parrish, Leslie, Hines and others. It was during these hard times, when the school was only kept running with difficulty, that our present Chapel Building was constructed. Probably to A. F. Waller more than to any other man, is the credit due for the success of this undertaking, so what name could be more appropriate for this sacred old building than Waller Hall! The building was started in 1864, and three years later the student body marched with great rejoicing from the old Institute Building into the new "Waller Hall." For nearly fifty years it has stood, a monument to the early pioneers.

But there is another side to Willamette's early history, a black page, stained by the story of false friends and of misplaced confidence.

THE OLD OREGON INSTITUTE

WOMENS COLLEGE

CAMPUS IN 1886

There are two characters which stand out in bold contrast in comparison with the unselfish pioneers who toiled and suffered that Willamette might live.

As mentioned above, when the trustees of the Oregon Institute bought the property from the mission school, it consisted of 640 acres situated in what is now the very heart of Salem. This was in the days before the territory was established, and under the laws of the provisional government, there was no provision made by which a corporation could hold land, and consequently there was serious danger of the Institute claim being jumped by unscrupulous persons. It was decided that the land should be turned over to some reliable person to be held in trust. William H. Willson, who was one of the trustees, a member of the church, and whose wife taught in the Institute, as was mentioned above, expressed his willingness to act as trustee. His offer was accepted and he was placed under bond of $100,000 to hold in trust the 640 acres of the Institute. Under certain restrictions he was permitted to sell portions of the claim, but there was a plot of 60 acres, including the campus of today, as well as the land lying between it and Mission Street, which constituted the Institute Reserve, no part of which could be sold. The remaining tract was to be laid off for a townsite, thus to the University is Salem indebted for its broad and sightly streets. Provision was also made for the donation of blocks for public purposes, thus to the University again is Salem indebted for the parked blocks, extending thru the center of the city, on which now stand the Court House, the Post Office and the State Capitol.

In 1848, the bill making Oregon a territory was passed, and contained in this was a provision legalizing all bonds and obligations valid under the provisional government, so the friends of the school felt secure. But in 1850 the donation land act was passed, which provided that one-half of the land donated to a husband should enure to his wife. It was at once apparent that Mrs. Willson, not being a party to the bond, could take advantage of a technicality in the law and claim half of the land held by her husband in trust.

It was about this time that she ceased teaching in the Institute, and it soon became evident that she meant to exert her "rights." In 1853 Mr. Willson received the certificate of final proof, and immediately he and his wife had the Surveyor-General divide the tract in half; and utterly ignoring the moral obligations of the bond, Mrs. Willson boldly took what the law allowed. She endeavored to get possession of the half which contained the Institute Reserve and buildings, as that was considered the more valuable portion, but the Surveyor-General, doing what he could for the school, made her take the half which lay nearer the river, the part which now contains the business section of Salem. In vain the friends of the church and of the school pled with her—she was obdurate. The poor missionary girl had assumed a new role.

Mr. Willson was a willing party to the transaction, as shown by his efforts to repudiate the bond which held him for the remaining half of the land which he had held "in trust." But his efforts were futile and he was forced to turn over what was left to the trustees of the Oregon Institute. The Willsons and their heirs have grown wealthy from their ill-gotten gains, and today the lovely park, "Willson Avenue," which lies across the street from the University campus, bears the name which will ever carry with it unsavory memories.

If Willamette University had not thus been defrauded of one-half of its resources in the very beginning of its career, it would be today what its founders had intended that it should be—the biggest and the wealthiest school on the Pacific Coast. It would not have had the struggle for existence which it has had, nor have had to seek an endowment, as it is doing today, to secure an unquestioned perpetuity.

JASON LEE'S GRAVE IN THE MISSION CEMETERY

The Endowment Campaign

AN ENDOWMENT of over half a million dollars, $300,000 in cash and $200,000 in secured subscriptions, is the result of the campaign which has been strenuously waged for the past four years; and for the first time in her history, Willamette University is on a firm financial footing. In this happy culmination of a hard, uphill fight, comes the realization of a desire which has long filled every supporter of Old Willamette, that there might be absolute assurance of permanence for the University.

It has been five years since President Homan took charge of affairs, and at once recognized the necessity of an adequate endowment, if Willamette were to do her work properly and maintain her place in the world of education. With this conviction predominant, he began to lay plans for advancing the interests of the University from the point at which his predecessor had left them. For it must be recognized that the remarkable advance of the past five years could not have been possible but for the foundation laid by President John H. Coleman in the period between 1902 and 1907. Coming just after a time when the question had actually been whether Willamette University should really be continued or not, he assumed the heart-breaking task of lifting a $40,000 debt and almost literally raising the school from its grave. The fact that he left it free from debt, with the medical, theological, and music buildings added, with over $100,000 endowment, and with no doubt as to its place in the educational circles of the Northwest, bears eloquent witness to the results of his labors.

It was at this point that President Homan assumed the task of making the University's future assured and her standards unexcelled. In the face of widespread pessimism among friends of Willamette as to its advisability, he persuaded the trustees to launch a campaign for a $500,000 endowment. The erection of Eaton Hall, the gift of Hon. A. E. Eaton, gave a strong impetus to the campaign in its inception. The subsequent announcement that Hon. Robert A. Booth of Eugene, who has ever been the closest friend and most valued counselor of the University, would give the last $50,000 to half a million endowment, and an additional $50,000 to start a Pioneer Memorial Hall, hushed the opposition and fanned into flame the enthusiasm which has carried the movement through. With approximately $325,000 to raise, President Homan outlined a thorough campaign. Rev. Dr. E. H. Todd, a prominent Seattle pastor and former field secretary of the University of Puget Sound, was elected Vice President of the University and charged with raising funds for current expenses, while Dr. Homan gave his entire time to the endowment work.

It is not necessary to recount the details of the campaign, but a few of the landmarks stand out prominently. In the spring of 1910 came the offer of $50,000, conditional upon raising $250,000 by January, 1913, from James J. Hill, who had become interested in Willamette on a visit to Salem. Plans for 1911-12 were more intensive. Vice President Todd transferred his energy to endowment work, and Dr. John Hancher, counselor for Methodist colleges, was secured to lead the campaign in Portland and Salem. It was in March, 1912, that success was assured the campaign when Peter W. Severson of Portland added $100,000 to the fund. Smaller subscriptions in Portland amounted to nearly $100,000, and in Salem to about $65,000. The latter months of 1912 were devoted to turning subscriptions into cash to meet Mr. Hill's condition that the $250,000 must be in cash or in gilt-edge securities. Before the time was up the trustees were able to send the papers showing that all his conditions had been met. This was very largely due to the fact that upon the approach of the time limit, Mr. Booth paid in $50,000, altho his conditions had not yet been met.

While there is at the present writing over half a million dollars in pledges and cash, some $50,000 is unproductive, and Mr. Booth's $50,000 for the building fund will not be forthcoming until the productive endowment is half a million. President Homan and Vice President Todd are now engaged in clearing up the remaining amount, and will doubtless have this accomplished very shortly.

The completion of this half million endowment fund has been perhaps the greatest forward step in the history of Willamette University. It has been accompanied by a growing student body, a healthier student spirit, more general recognition from the outside, and general progress in all lines. But the end is not yet. Those who have made this campaign a great success have no intention of sitting back with laurels won. They will be content with nothing less than the most adequate support and the highest efficiency for Willamette. The raising of half a million dollars has been a big stride in that direction, but the goal beyond still beckons.

The Affiliated Colleges

THE year just past has been a year of progress and of prosperity to Willamette. As has been mentioned elsewhere, the endowment campaign has widely advertised the school, as well as helping it financially. The College of Liberal Arts, which is the very heart of the University, is much larger than it has ever been before, its Freshman Class alone numbering about 85. Additional courses have been added and the faculty increased. The progress of the whole school is dependent upon the progress of the College of Liberal Arts.

The College of Law has also the largest enrollment that it has ever had. It was highly honored recently in the appointment by the Governor of its Dean, Charles L. McNary, as a Justice of the State Supreme Court.

The College of Medicine, which is closing its forty-sixth year of instruction, will probably be consolidated with the medical department of the University of Oregon, and be moved to Portland in September. This is the tentative action taken by the deans of the two schools. Friends of the school will be sorry to lose this department, but all feel that by this action it can do a better and broader work, and more nearly realize the hopes and ambitions of its founders.

The Kimball College of Theology, altho but seven years old, has already made itself felt in the religious life of the Northwest. Many students who have not been able to graduate, have profited by its instruction, and better fitted themselves for their work.

The School of Music is one of the strongest departments of the University. Under the able direction of Dean Mendenhall thorough training in piano, voice, violin, or organ may be secured. The various musical organizations of the University, such as the Ladies' Club and the Glee Club, are under the direction of the School of Music, and thus give valuable training to their members. The biggest event of the past year along musical lines was the presentation of the opera, "Chimes of Normandy," which was highly successful.

The School of Art, under the direction of Miss Margaret Gill, gives all students a chance to educate their aesthetic sense along with their regular college course. Probably there is no study which more amply repays for the time expended than does the study of art. Courses are offered in sketching, china painting, water colors, and in any special work which may be desired.

A new feature of extension work has recently been taken up in the organization of a Summer School in Eastern Oregon. It is situated near Joseph on the beautiful Wallowa Lake, and bids fair to become a very popular and a very profitable enterprise.

MAY DAY

"The of way" Sept. 1880

May Day

MAY DAY is a day of uncertainty—what will the Frosh spring on us? Will it rain, and what's the exit price on the Y. W. Breakfast? May Day is always, always, a balmy, springy, jaunty sort of day, Pfaff and the weather trust notwithstanding. Dawn stealing thru the pantry window at old Lausanne sees a medley of cooks, aprons, butcher-knives and dishwater entangled with each other in mad anticipation of fleecing the public. In fact,

“The shower had begun in the gloaming,
And busily all the night,
Had been heaping the kitchen and laundry with shredded wheat, unusually fresh eggs, waffle irons, and center-pieces.” Most persons not engaged in frying eggs, ham or waffles, or making biscuits or washing dishes are palming off the treasures on the weather-beguiled public. The tables on the lawn rock in a tide of mirth and hilarity. The waitresses, when not smiling on those besieging parties who need encouragement, are worthily engaged. Town people patronize liberally, and the professors and their wives and throngs of students flock to the Grand Disappearance.

The last dish washed, the noonday University lunch prepared, and the final artistic punches administered to the landscape by the campus-workers, the W. U. Commonwealth disposes itself in the shade around the tennis court. The game having fallen, of course, to the Cardinal and Gold, to eat again is obviously the proper stunt.

At the hall, rally again the well-recruited forces. Such a feeling of cheer incases the salad, sandwiches and beans, that one gaily sits on a paper plate in lieu of a cushion, and stirs coffee with the finger with never a murmur.

All this time the Queen's maids have been flitting distractedly about, worrying their hair straight and otherwise serving their country. The Royal Personage herself is not visible. But presently, when the crowd has reassembled near the dias, a herald approaches proclaiming her coming forth. Her Highness is preceded by the high grandees of the realm, and surrounded by the ladies in waiting. The little pages and the courtiers complete the retinue. The stately procession winds across the unshiny turf to the platform. Here, after the men and maids sing the beautiful "Queen of May," Her Majesty is solemnly crowned to the satisfaction of the arch-bishop and camera people.

The winding of the may pole is next successfully accomplished in spite of difficulty in "doing the step." The weaving of the Cardinal and Gold through the hazy, glowing sunlight and checkered shadow is particularly beautiful. As the exercise closes there is a frantic rush for the grandstand. Here the boys follow intently the track performers, commenting superiorly on the distances and records, while the girls compare manicuring and dates for the evening event.

Immediately that the track meet, with its glorious victory or manifestly unfair defeat, is over, the tug-of-war across the mill race becomes the attraction. This is always exciting, especially if the opponents, Freshmen and Sophs, be well pitted. Hoots and hisses, shrieks and sarcasm fill the air and urge on the strugglers. The losing side is pulled in or ducked, and the class yell ascends some fifteen feet in air.

While the noble heroes are hanging themselves up to dry, the crowd quickly disperses, for they just have time to smile at a morsel of bread and then make the final splurge. Everybody goes to the Opera House to see that famous, long talked of Junior Play. The villain is properly hissed and kisses showered upon the hero and heroine, and then away for the Spa, and then,—May Day is over before home is reached.

Long may May Day live! Its blessings are manifold. It pleases the Profs, it pleases the Freshmen, and makes the grocers giggle.

The Freshman Glee

THE FRESHMAN GLEE is a unique contest which is distinctly Willamette's. Originated by the Class of 1912, in their Freshman year, it has become a traditional event. Every year the Freshmen challenge the three upper classes to write songs, the words and music being original with members of the class. This song thus composed must be rendered by the whole class, and the one winning is presented with a large pennant furnished by the Freshmen.

This year the Sophomores took the pennant with one of the best songs that has ever been given. The Freshmen did themselves proud in the management of the contest this year. The pennant which they gave was an elegant one, and the decorations in the chapel were magnificent. Little and Russel, members of the class, had charge of the decorating. The Freshmen themselves were a close second to the Sophomores in the contest.

The quality of the songs composed for these contests is excellent and Willamette is thus getting a large number of college songs which are distinctly her own. No doubt a Willamette song book will be published before many years.

The Class of 1913

THE several excellent bulletins of Willamette University show the trend of student life and class histories, but there seems to be room for a more detailed report of one class, that of '13, a report designed for college students and other people wishing a general survey of class activities. This is not a contribution to the literary productions of the English Department of the Institution, but is frankly based upon the best authorities of recent years. Following is the report, with a brief discussion of the most salient features:

Commencement (of life work)

As Freshmen, the class members were proud of their personnel. They were represented on the athletic teams and in the State Oratorical Contest, and the May Queen was a Freshman. As Sophomores, all studied hard, and, when the Glee Contest came, carried off the honors. As Juniors, they were busy with the maintenance of upper-class dignity. There were traditions to follow and new customs to be inaugurated. As Seniors, they are glad of their strength, they are proud of their classmates, and they are loyal to their Alma Mater.

JUNIOR PAGE

IN the latter days of September in the year of our Lord 1910, there were no comets seen blazing in the sky, no earthquakes were felt, in fact there were no great manifestations of nature as the incoming Freshmen bashfully stated their ages and gave the registrar the note which mother had sent. With no serious commotion they began strolling along the well worn paths of learning, and wearing more deeply the historic threshold stone at the Chapel entrance. The Sophomores counted them and then counted their own number—and left them in peace. They wore the headgear of their own choice and stepped off the campus walks for no man—but always of course for stout co-eds. In the annual tug-of-war they quickly pulled the Sophs into the mill race and filled their boasting mouths with water.

As Sophomores they tried to keep their younger classmen happy and contented. It is claimed that they put generators, which sent forth most disagreeable fumes, beneath the floor of the Gym when the Freshmen were having a party, but this is very doubtful. They did, however, feel that the roof of the grandstand should be painted if it were to be preserved, so their numerals stand today as a monument to their unselfish labor. It is also a matter of history that in the early dawn of May Day glaring green posters, which made fun of the most prominent and most highly respected members of the younger class, were found plastered all over the city and campus; but nobody knows who did it.

As Juniors, the class has had to assume heavy responsibilities. The maintenance of upper class dignity had to be looked after. Then their members had to attend to the various student body activities, furnish men for the different athletic teams, Glee Club, etc. The Collegian had to be edited, and The Wallulah published, the Junior Play staged, and the Seniors banqueted. As to the success of these undertakings, they are big enough to speak for themselves.

As Seniors—but ah! we are blinded by the brilliancy of the prospect.

The Sophomore Song

(Winner in the Glee Contest)

In the Westland stands a college
That in the by-gone years
Near a river's course was founded
By the sturdy pioneers,
Whose visions for the future
Of their beloved land
Led them through trials and hardships
With a firm and steady hand.

CHORUS

So here's to thy gold and cardinal,
And here's to thine ancient lore,
And here's to the hearts that beat for thee,
Loyal forevermore!

Now the same old dauntless spirit
Still burns in every breast,
Urging on to new achievement,
Calling us to do our best;
And so within her portals,
While hearts are light and free,
Let's fill our cups o'erflowing
For our dear old 'Varsity.

In the golden future gleaming
The mystic hand we see
Of success, bright and alluring,
Beck'ning to our 'Varsity;
We vow we'll heed her message
With hearts inspired anew,
And win the offered laurels
For our old Willamette U.

KATE BARTON, '15.

The Class of 1915

IT is really unnecessary to contribute a verbose eulogy to the unprecedented success, or to enumerate the glorious attainments of the Class of 1915, but as it is customary so to do, we shall make a few modest statements of fact. It was distinctly a new era in the history of Willamette when the Class of 1915 entered her portals. Accompanied by unmistakable omens of natural phenomena, the career of this class and the glory it was soon to bring to its Alma Mater, were prophesied to the world.

It is a significant fact that the membership of this class was more than twice as large as that of the one preceding it. Yet, quality was not sacrificed to quantity—far from it. The attainments of the class have been unparalleled. Altho but half of the college course is yet past, Sophomores have already graced nearly every available position in the Student Body.

Individually, members of '15 have been interested in various branches of activity—music, art, literature, debate, society and athletics. Last year's debaters were all loyal sons of 1915, and this year three of the four 'Varsity debaters and both of Willamette's orators were cheered on by the cheers of '15. This year the Freshman Glee pennant came as another trophy to her genius.

Having set such high standards in all lines, it is reasonable to look for a great future for Willamette. Indeed, the influence of such a class upon all succeeding classes is inestimable. The class which is following us have worked hard and are striving to maintain the standard of excellence set before them.

So shall it be in years to come. And this thing alone will insure a Greater Willamette.

FRESHMEN

Freshman Song for Glee

On the margin of the river
Touched with parting rays of gold
Where the dying sunbeams quiver
In the sky and on the wold;
Where the morning sun, with gildings,
On the towers in glory falls,
Stand Willamette's stately buildings—
Oregon's oldest halls.

CHORUS

Oh, come and let us loudly sing!
Sing old Willamette's praise!
The mem'rys dear that 'round us cling,
The joys of college days;
The days of toil, the nights of fun,
Our athletes tried and true
Sing all her glories, one by one—
Willamette! Grand old U!

Born in faith and reared in striving
In the dim days of the Past
By that strong faith surviving
Shall our Willamette last.
High ideals and grand traditions
Of this magic western clime
Have marked thy slow transitions
From the Past to Present time.

But while thy past is glorious,
Shaped by men and women true
May thy future be victorious,
Alma Mater! W. U.!
May thy heroes' olden story
Ever thrill us thru and thru,
Make us heroes for thy glory,
Dear old Willamette U!

J. R. BAIN, '16.

The Class of 1916

A LONG in the fall of 1912, just before school began, many strange figures were seen furtively hovering around the Campus; and many strange faces peered shyly around the corners of buildings and peeked out from behind trees and bushes. Bill Schreiber, Senior, saw these signs and recognized them for what they were, the advance guard of the long-looked-for and now-famous Class of 1916. So Bill met the incoming Freshmen and welcomed them to Willamette, and has ever since considered the Freshman Class a result of his hospitality and Senior foresight.

But when the Freshmen met and saw their number, no further Senior help, nor any other help was needed—for the “infant class” suddenly became conscious of the power that needs no aid. A permanent organization was effected, colors and yells were adopted, a goodly portion of Willamette spirit was absorbed, and the infant class immediately became a sturdy youngster, exhibiting that headstrong self-will so peculiar to healthy youth. This was soon manifested by the mysterious appearance of a big sixteen on the roof of the grandstand, and the yearly Soph-Fresh excitement was on.

The Freshmen have not been entirely useless to the University even in this, their year of preparation for better things. They had four men on the first football squad, three on the basket ball squad, one of whom, Crawford Young, won his “W,” and in track and baseball several Freshmen made the first squads with ease and did good work for Willamette. In forensics, Charles Ohling, made his “W” in debate; and several other Freshmen showed up well in both debate and oratory. Also there have been four or five Freshmen on the regular staff of the “Collegian” all year. The Freshmen caught Willamette spirit early and took an active part in all rallies, furnishing the Varsity a very able assistant yell leader. In every branch of student activity the Frosh have played their modest part and are looking forward to a rosy future.

THE Associated Student Body of Willamette University, composed of the registered students in all departments of the University, is the very heart of student life and of every student activity. It is the biggest and by far the most important student organization. In its meetings are discussed the vital questions pertaining to the welfare of the many enterprises under student control.

The amount of money passing thru the Student Body in one year is very large, and the financial aspect is a very important one. It is a source of satisfaction that, notwithstanding the many adverse circumstances, no obligations will be left unpaid at the end of the present year. Miss Jessie Young has again demonstrated the entire competency of woman to fill the most responsible positions.

This year has been one of advance and progress. A great deal of improvement has been made upon the athletic field and tennis courts. Much additional equipment for the athletic teams has been purchased. A big debate was successfully managed. Tennis has been taken under Student Body control. Teams have been supported in every branch of athletics. Indeed, in every way, the year has been progressive and successful.

PROHIBITION sentiment has ever been strong among the students of Willamette University, and the Prohibition Association has been no small factor in crystallizing this sentiment into definite work. The recent action of the Student Body, in sending telegrams to the Oregon legislators at Washington, urging support of temperance measures, is perhaps an unprecedented example of college spirit along temperance lines.

That an orator from our school took second rank at the last national contest, is no petty honor. Yet of more practical value is the training that has been afforded for service and leadership in temperance conquests. This year, under an experienced and efficient instructor, a very beneficial study class in the fundamentals and methods of the great reform is being conducted. Not content with past achievements, however, the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association confidently hopes by another year to have a one-hour course in the science of temperance reform introduced into the college curriculum, thus giving the subject more nearly its adequate attention, and enabling more students to spare their time for it.

THE EATON CLUB of Willamette University is a co-operative boarding club, incorporated under the laws of the State of Oregon. Its purpose is to furnish "eats" to the young men in attendance at college, away from home with its associations and good food. It not only strives to develop the physical man, but also aims to enlarge the mental capacities and to promote good fellowship by the close association among its members.

The flow of soul which accompanies the passing of victuals makes that ailment, known as dyspepsia, a phantom which never rises on the horizon of the members' thoughts. It usually happens that the "blues" accompany indigestion and vice versa. Such a condition cannot exist where jolly good fellows meet around a common festive board. Home sick? Well, such a thing might happen, and perhaps it does to most college boys, but it never happens at the Eaton Club.

The manager transacts all the business of buying, hiring, and paying. Both the manager and the treasurer are under bonds for the money that comes to them, thus assuring judicial use of the same. An auditing committee goes over the books regularly, and reports to the club concerning the financial condition. The officers form the standing executive committee.

Kloshe Klub

PRESIDENT	ERROL C. GILKEY
VICE-PRESIDENT	MERWYN E. PAGET
SECRETARY	J. STANFORD MOORE
TREASURER	GEORGE A. ODGERS
MANAGER	HAROLD B. JORY

GREECE had its Council of the Four Hundred, Rome had its Senate, France has its Cabinet, Germany its Bundesrath, England its Privy Council, New York its Tammany Ring, and Willamette University its Kloshe Klub. Heré is the unseen power behind the throne. Here are gathered the brains and the wit of the school. Here, the great questions of public policy are discussed and solved. Here the fiery speeches and funny stories are rehearsed before being cast upon the unsuspecting public. The meetings of the Student Body, the meetings of the Faculty, the meetings of the Trustees are merely held to formally ratify the action which the Kloshe Klub has previously decided upon.

Altho the club is a strictly men's club, yet occasionally they hold open house in order not to lose all knowledge of civilized customs. The club is a co-operative boarding club, and is incorporated under the laws of Oregon.

To a great many fellows a club of this sort gives a very tangible part of "college life." They are democratic in the extreme. At their tables many lessons are learned which would never have been learned in the sheltered atmosphere of the home. Promptness becomes a necessity if a person desires to retain his butter, pie, and other necessary adjuncts to a good meal. One learns to give and take, mostly take—anything from bread crusts to "bawl-outs." Such institutions are in a class by themselves, and in a class which is very popular about three times a day, from six minutes after seven in the morning to five minutes before six in the evening.

KIMBALL COLLEGE OF THEOLOGY is affiliated with Willamette University, yet its Student Body is thoroughly organized. Altho the college is but seven years old, yet over eighty students have profited by its course of study, and every year there is a widening circle of friends deeply interested in its work.
Already twenty have graduated and have gone forth both to home and foreign fields for Christian service.

The regular course of study covers three years, at the end of which any person graduating will receive the degree of B.D., providing he has already obtained an A.B. degree from some college of liberal arts; otherwise he shall simply receive the diploma of the College. To assist those who may not have had sufficient education to take the regular course, a four-year course is offered, enabling them to make up needful preliminary work.

Intercollegiate Debate

E. PAUL TODD

Debate Manager, who did more than anybody else to revive an interest in intercollegiate debating at Willamette

ANY contest which has for its aim the development of rapid, logical thinking, and the concise, forceful expression of ideas, is an activity which ought to be fostered by every institution which is fitting men and women to take their place in the world of affairs. Intercollegiate debate undoubtedly stands first in this classification, and it is rapidly coming to its own at Willamette.

Five years ago occurred the last of the debates of the Triangular League, which consisted of Whitman College, Pacific University, and Willamette University. Since that time there has been one debate with Albany College, and several successful teams have been put out by the Law School. But the year of 1913 will be remembered among the students as the time of the real revival of forensic contests. On April fourth a dual debate took place between Willamette University and the University of Idaho, in which Glen McCaddam and Paul Smith, negative, and Seth Axley and Charles Ohling, affirmative, ably upheld the cardinal and gold. The contest resulted in a victory for the negative team of each institution. Both debates were close and exciting, and much well-prepared argument was presented by each team. The Student Body loyally supported the debate at Salem with a splendid lot of enthusiasm. The distinguishing feature of this occasion was the student banquet, a distinctly college function, which is destined to become an annual event in connection with intercollegiate debate.

Intersociety Oratorical Contest

IN 1906, to promote interest in oratory, and to give vent to the keen spirit of rivalry existing among themselves, the four college literary societies decided to hold an annual intersociety oratorical contest. The winning society was to be presented each year with a large silver cup, to be held permanently by the society winning it for three consecutive years.

The first two contests resulted in victories for the Philodorian Society. However, in 1908, the cup was saved from passing into their hands permanently by being won for the Websterians. The next year the Adelantes took it. Again in 1910 and 1911 the Philodorians won, and it was only by the hard efforts last year of Miss Grace Edgington, who represented the Philodorsians, that the cup was saved again from the Philodorians.

These contests, usually occurring near the commencement season, are a very important event in the year's calendar.

Football Season 1912

MERWYN
E. PAGET
Manager of Football

THE football season of 1912 was largely a "dreams come true" for Willamette's popular coach, Dr. Sweetland, for every loyal student, and for the football enthusiasts of Salem. Not since the famous team of '05 and '06 has Willamette cheered on such an aggregation. The afternoon of September 26th saw a large squad of "braves" out on the field in full war paint. An intense interest was at once manifested, and it never lagged until the last whistle was blown on Thanksgiving Day. The old men, Bolt, Blackwell, Bellinger, Homan, Erskine, Francis, McRae and Watson, were the nucleus about which "Doc" started to build up the team.

With less than a week's practice occurred the annual game with the Alumni. Never before has the 'Varsity failed to defeat the "has-beens"; but the exceptionally heavy weight of the latter, combined with the lack of experience of the "would-bes," resulted in a 7-7 score.

October 12th found the Willamette men on the University of Oregon field, pitted against a team which outweighed them on the line, which had a faster backfield, and which had had two weeks more practice than themselves. The game was a splendid exhibition of football, and the score, 12-0 in favor of Oregon, was not considered a bad defeat under the circumstances. McRae and Francis were the stars in the defense, and Erskine in the offense.

"CROSSING THE BAR"

However, this defeat proved to be the crisis in the 1912 season. Men were shifted to new positions, new plays were learned in order to give versatility to attack, and team work was perfected. The Chemawa Indians were the first to fall victims to this new machine, when on October 19th they were defeated in a 29-0 game.

The next game was staged at Forest Grove, October 26th, with an old rival, Pacific University. Pacific had a plucky team, but it was entirely outclassed. When once Willamette started, there was no stopping her until a score of 40 had been piled up.

The Vancouver game, scheduled for November 5th, had been awaited with some misgivings because of the splendid showing which the soldiers had made against Multnomah earlier in the season. But "Doc's" bunch were in the pink of condition, and their opponents were somewhat crippled by previous games. The result was an awful massacre of the soldiers, the final score being 71-0 in Willamette's favor.

A game much needed to fill the gap between November 5th and Thanksgiving Day, was made possible by the liberality of the students, many of whom went down into their pockets to finance it. The team selected for practicing upon was Whitworth College, which held the Washington non-conference championship. They were easily defeated to the tune of 67-0. Thus for the third consecutive season Willamette gained the undisputed title to the Northwest non-conference championship.

The long-looked-for and really big game of the season was held on the local field on Thanksgiving Day, with the University of Montana. College spirit and enthusiasm reigned supreme. The day was ideal and the game started with a zip. In less than four minutes Montana secured the first touchdown. Willamette immediately recovered from her "stage-fright" and from then on kept the bleachers and grandstand in an almost continuous roar of applause by her brilliant and bewildering plays. The final score was 30-9 in Willamette's favor. This game proved very decisively that Willamette is in conference class when it comes to football; and that Dr. Sweetland is in a class by himself when it comes to coaching.

A record of the football season of 1912 would not be complete without special mention being made of the excellent work done by the second team. Under the able coaching of Ralph Homan they had a most successful season. Besides constantly bucking up against the first team, they played six games and were not defeated once. They met the Woodburn Athletic Club twice, Salem High School, Independence High School, Chemawa Second Team, and Albany High School. Eleven men of the nineteen on the first team were products of the second team, thus showing that the training is valuable and worth while. The strength of this year's second team indicates another strong first team for the 1913 season.

The Team

CAPTAIN McRAE

Left End

Weight 175 lbs.

Junior Medic

"Big Mac" came to Willamette from Everett High School with a brilliant record in football, basketball and baseball, and for three years has maintained that record in the University. "Mac" began the 1912 season in splendid form, but came out of the Oregon game with so many serious bruises that he was unable to re-enter the game for some time. This, together with class work and his work as interne in the Salem Hospital, kept him out until the Montana game, when he again showed up in splendid style. For the past two seasons "Mac" has been forced to play in the backfield, instead of at end, his natural position, but in spite of this fact, Fawcett, in picking the all-northwest team, declared him the equal of Niles of Whitman in everything except punting. Never has a more all-around athlete nor a better-hearted fellow fought under the Cardinal and Gold than "Big Mac."

CAPTAIN-ELECT FRANCIS

Right End

Weight 185 lbs.

Senior Law

¶ "Prunie" hails from Eugene, where he played on the high school squad for three years. Since coming to Willamette two years ago, no little credit is due him for her splendid successes. Fawcett, who picks the all-northwest team, styled him "without doubt the best end in the northwest." He introduced the famous ballad, "Around her neck she wore a yellow ribbon," into University circles.

BLACKWELL

Center

Weight 163 lbs.

Junior

¶ "Blackie" is among the veterans of the team, this being his fifth year on the first squad. In fact he has the distinction of making the regular team without first serving a term as a scrub. He is a very steady player and an accurate passer. Blackwell was captain of the 1911 squad.

BELLINGER

Weight 171 lbs.

Left Guard

Senior Medic

¶ "Doc." was unable to play the full season on account of heavy school work, but was used to good advantage when in shape. He is the oldest man on the team. If Willamette only had seven men on the line like "Doc.," she would need but one man behind the line to bring the ball along. He recently demonstrated his belief in co-education.

HOMAN

Weight 162 lbs.

Quarter

Junior

¶ This was Paul's third season on the squad, and he is now considered one of the best quarters in the state. He is especially good on receiving and returning a kickoff. Made a splendid field general for the season, filling Billie Booth's place most successfully.

BOLT

Weight 194 lbs.

Right Tackle

Sophomore

¶ "Ben Bolt" comes from Marshfield, Oregon, where he played on the high school team. He won his "W" his first year in the University. He is the heaviest man on the squad, and he knows how to use himself to the best advantage. He is modestly developing into a punter and drop-kicker.

ERSKINE

Weight 152 lbs.

Right Half

Senior Law

¶ "Chas." played three seasons at Oregon on the first squad. He is strong in both offensive and defensive work, and makes a practice of pulling off one or two 25-yard runs every game. His favorite stunt is grabbing forward passes, intended for an opponent, and running away for a touchdown.

ROWLAND

Full

Weight 151 lbs.

Junior Law

¶ "Curly" is one of the very few who played the whole time in every game. He first went in at half, but was shifted to fullback position for the latter part of the season. Rowland has always turned out for football, and this year made the first squad easily.

STEARNS

Left Half

Weight 141 lbs.

Junior

¶ Stearns came to Willamette from the University of Iowa in his Sophomore year without any previous knowledge of football. After a year of consistent work on the second team, "Doc." selected him for left halfback. He is the lightest man on the team, and an exceptionally good runner on a broken field.

WATSON

Weight 177 lbs.

Left Tackle

Junior Law

¶ "Hippo" is from Salem High where, for three years, he did splendid work on the line. "Hippo" does not weigh 177 lbs. for nothing, and the way he hit the opponents' line was pathetic—for them. Is strong at either offense or defense.

DAY

Weight 179 lbs.

Right Guard

Senior Law

¶ For three years Robin has turned out for football, and this year he became the regular man for the right guard position. He played a good game and showed the results of the past training which he had received. He is a consistent player and a hard worker.

DRAKE

Weight 165 lbs.

Sophomore

¶ Drake played his first football with the second team last year and was taken on the first squad at the first of the present season. He was used quite regularly at the left guard position and put up a good game. With this year's experience and the development of a little more aggressiveness, he is practically assured of a line berth next year.

HEPP

Weight 144 lbs.

Junior

¶ This was "Looie's" second season on the squad, but was the first in which he has been worked with any regularity. He played left end most of the time, and acquitted himself in fine style. He is a very strong defensive man, and broke up play after play for his opponents. He missed making his "W" this year by a very narrow margin.

BOOTH

Weight 146 lbs.

Sub. Quarter

Academy

¶ "Toots" has turned out for football ever since he entered the Academy four years ago. The past two seasons he served in the capacity of substitute quarterback, and although he has had but very few chances to demonstrate his ability, he has always delivered the goods.

LUND

Weight 161 lbs.

Sub. Guard

Freshman

¶ Lund has played on the second team for two seasons. He was taken on the first squad early in the season as a substitute guard and got into several games. He is a strong man, plays well, and made a very creditable showing whenever he was put in the game.

YOUNG

Weight 155 lbs.

Sub. End

Freshman

¶ "Red" is a Portland boy, and gained his previous football experience at Lincoln High School. Altho a little slow for an end position, he will undoubtedly be a valuable man in another year or two. He is an aggressive player and a consistent trainer.

SMALL

Weight 131 lbs.

Sub. Half

Freshman

¶ "Smallie" is a product of Salem High. During the past season he has been worked at both quarter and half. He is a brilliant player, and a few more pounds would make him a stellar football man. He is a wonder when it comes to open field running.

TALLMAN

Sub. Half

Weight 133 lbs.

Junior Law

¶ "Shorty" came to Willamette from the University of Washington, where he played with the Freshman team of that school two years ago. He is fast and always made trouble for any opponents that might come his way. His nerve was unlimited and he would tackle the largest man on the team as soon as the smallest.

YODER

Sub. Half

Weight 144 lbs.

Freshman

¶ This was Yoder's first year in school, and although he started the season with the second team, he soon made the first squad as a substitute halfback. He did not get to work very much, but will undoubtedly show up strong in another season. He is a fast man and willing worker.

Basketball

Season 1913

ROLAND PFAFF
Manager of Basketball

THE basketball season for 1913 was rather short. The expenses of last year's season were exceptionally heavy, as several conference teams were played on the home floor; and so for this reason, and also since an early start in baseball was desired, basketball had to die an untimely death. The team was chiefly composed of new material and did not show up well at the first of the season. However, patience and strenuous practice developed what proved to be at the close of the season a team of no small ability.

When the season was finished by playing O. A. C. a 14-16 game, with Willamette leading her opponent until the last three minutes of play, it proved that the 'Varsity was still in conference class, and that Willamette had a team of which it need not be ashamed. Incidentally, after the game, Dr. Stewart, the O. A. C. coach, was overheard to say, "My team had but two open shots the entire evening." This shows that every man in the team was on the job from start to finish.

The members of the squad were Homan (captain), Tallman, Shisler, forwards; Hepp, Young, guards; Drake, Pfaff, center. Those receiving their letters were Homan, Tallman, Hepp, Young and Pfaff.

The entire squad will be back next year, and so with these men and with the new material that can be expected in the fall, Willamette should turn out an exceptionally strong team. Such men as Lund, Gates, Chalcraft, Bain and others should receive credit for their untiring work on the second team squad.

The season ended with a big banquet given by Manager Pfaff. At this time Louis Hepp, the sturdy guard, was elected captain for the 1914 season.

The 1912 Baseball Season

LOUIS HEPP
Manager of Baseball

FOLLOWING two seasons in which Willamette had been compelled to build a team from the ground up, the 1912 baseball season showed a remarkable advance, and placed the Willamette nine in the class of the best college teams of the state. Under the captaincy of "Brick" Harrison and the able coaching of Dr. Sweetland, who was able to give his entire time to the work, the large squad of candidates was simmered down to an experienced and smoothly working combination with the following personnel: Catcher, Steelhammer; pitchers, Drake and McIntire; first base, Hewitt; second base, Oakes; shortstop, McRae; third base, Harrison; left field, Tatro and Gates; center field, Ross; right field, P. Homan.

For the first half of the season this lineup worked splendidly, and especially in the Multnomah and first Oregon contests showed exceptional skill at playing the national game. Just preceding the second Oregon game, however, a series of mishaps threatened to break up the team entirely. Ross and McRae left at the closing of the Medical School, Hewitt quit, and Steelhammer took sick. In the general shifting of players which followed, Homan landed on first, Erskine took Steelhammer's place, Booth went to short, and Lund to right field. The new combination, with three inexperienced men, was materially weaker than the first, but at that was able to administer a 4-2 defeat to O. A. C. later in the season.

For all-round work in the field, honors must go to McRae and Harrison, "Brick" especially covering himself with glory in his last year with the team. His position at third and that of Jimmie Oakes, twice captain, at second, will be difficult ones to fill acceptably after such capable handling. At the bat, Homan was well in the lead, with an average of slightly over .300, Oakes following with an average of about .250. Up to the time of their leaving, McRae and Steelhammer were among the topnotchers, both hitting well over .300.

The 1913 Season

The 1913 team has only four "W" men as a nucleus — Homan, McRae, Steelhammer and Gates. The present lineup has the veteran battery, Steelhammer and Drake. On the infield are Hamilton on first, Homan on second, McRae on third, and Booth at short. Gates in left, Howard in center, and Lund in right, make up the outfield. The team has been working well, the principal weakness being at the bat. Lack of extra men on the pitching staff has been a handicap, but new recruits are being trained, the best prospect being Young, a Freshman.

The schedule for the present year has been seriously broken into by the weather, the local games with both O. A. C. and the University of Oregon having been forestalled by rain. Up to the present writing, the following games have been played:

Willamette University .	4	Chemawa . . .	5
Willamette University .	3	State Penitentiary .	2
Willamette University .	2	Chemawa . . .	4
Willamette University .	1	Chemawa . . .	11
Willamette University .	0	University of Oregon	3
Willamette University .	2	State Penitentiary .	4
Willamette University .	8	Chemawa . . .	5

The schedule for the season includes games with O. A. C. and possibly Multnomah Club, besides further series with Chemawa and the State Penitentiary.

FOR several years track work lay dormant at Willamette, but with the advent of Dr. Sweetland, and the consequent revival of interest along all athletic lines, the University has again taken a keen interest in track and field work. In the two meets held last year with Pacific University, Willamette showed that she had much good material and was on a par with the best teams of the state. Several new men did brilliant work, particularly Francis in the low hurdles and McInturff in the dashes.

Last year a new system of coaching was inaugurated. A special coach and trainer, who gave his time to track alone, was secured, thus leaving Dr. Sweetland free to handle baseball. Mr. H. Zopher Tharp, a man who had had several years experience in track work and coaching, and who was in the Medical College, was chosen; and it was largely thru his efforts that such splendid work was done by the track men.

The 1913 season has shown up some more excellent material, the "biggest" find being Brazier Small from Salem High, who has done very good work in the sprints. Only one meet has been held so far, and that was with Pacific University on May Day. It resulted in an easy victory for Willamette, the score being 79-43.

Annual Interscholastic Track and Field Meet

Willamette's first interscholastic track meet was held in May, 1912, and was a great success, six schools being represented. The local high school won the meet by a large margin, which was somewhat of a surprise. Gold, silver and bronze medals were given for the first three places respectively in each event, with a banner for the winning relay team.

The success of the meet was largely due to Dr. Sweetland and the student managers, Robert Minton and Paul Smith, who worked for weeks before the event. Dr. Sweetland having established a similar meet in the Middle West, knew how to handle such an event, giving the University the benefit of his experience. Another thing that made possible the success of the meet was the reconstructed track, a smooth clay surface of a full quarter-mile. The six high schools having men entered were Salem, Corvallis, Junction City, Lebanon, Dayton and Vancouver.

ERIC BOLT REPRESENTS W. U. AT ORATORICAL

Eight Delegates and Several Students Will Go to Newberg Friday.

MISS EAKIN TO GIVE VARSITY TOAST

Delegates Take Train at 1:05 over Dallas, Falls City Line from Southern Pacific Depot.

The state oratorical contest will be held at Pacific College Friday evening at 8 o'clock and a number of Willamette students besides the eight delegates and Eric Bolt, Willamette's representative, will attend. Eric Bolt, who represents Willamette, was in the local report the latter part of January.

Mr. Bolt will speak on "National Unity," and the oration which he gave before the local audience and that which he will deliver in Newberg Friday evening will be hardly distinguishable as the same production. The oration has been worked over and coaching of the delivery has not been neglected and Willamette will have a contender for high honors again this year.

Eight delegates will accompany Mr. Bolt to the scenes of the tour; and several other students have signified their intention of attending the contest. The delegates will receive entertainment and their tickets to the banquet, which must secure reservations in advance for their banquet tickets, which will cost one dollar.

Willamette is proud of her showing in past years, and will look forward to the results of this contest with keen interest and she will be well represented by Mr. Bolt.

Captain-elect Has Served on Squad Three Seasons—Manager Pfaff Gives Big Boost.

Louis Hepp, stellar guard on the 1912 basketball team, was chosen captain of next year's squad at a dinner which Manager Pfaff gave Saturday evening for the members of the squad. Hepp, who is a Junior Liberal Arts, won his "W" for the first time this year, although he has for two seasons previous been a member of the first squad. His work this year has been far better than ever before. Besides being a never-tiring, skin-tight guard, he is a good long-range shot and has a habit of bringing the bleachers to their feet. Hepp has played at and on the Varsity football team for two years, barely missing an award last fall. He has also served as manager of basketball.

The election came at the close of a most successful "feed" which Pfaff had set up in the Eaton Club dining room for the "most" kindness 47, which had been shown him by the

Dr. Sheridan Lays Plans for Gathering of Epworth Leaguers Here During July.

At a conference held last Wednesday in the president's office between Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Sheridan, general secretary of the Epworth League, President Homan, and the members of the Oregon Conference Commission on League institute, it was decided that an Epworth League institute should be held in Salem next July. Plans for making the institute a success, the personnel of the leaders, and kindred matters were discussed. A tentative list of leaders was drawn up and the date set for the first week in July. In all probability the University buildings will be used as the meeting place.

The institute, following the general plan of such gatherings, will consist of ten days of Bible and mission study, sports, talks on vital religious topics, and training in effective Christian leadership.

THE WILLAMETTE COLLEGIAN, the official University newspaper, enters next year upon its twentieth year of publication. The paper, established in 1889 as a monthly literary magazine, had as its first editor B. L. Steeves, the present mayor of Salem; as associate editor, James F. Ailshie, now chief justice of the Supreme Court of Idaho, and as the first manager, N. M. Newport, a prominent attorney of Lebanon. The paper retained the magazine form until 1902, when it was changed into a four-page, four-column weekly newspaper. With the exception of one year, when it appeared bi-weekly, the Collegian has since been published weekly. The present five-column, four-page paper has, in the past, been sufficient to cover the field, but the increased volume of news and the introduction of more advanced journalistic methods will doubtless make it necessary in a year or two either to increase the size of the paper or to issue it more frequently.

The Collegian aims to cover adequately the news of the University, to give to those outside a correct impression of the life and spirit of Willamette, and to serve as a constructive force among the students themselves. From year to year this has been done, and every year the scope of the paper has broadened until now it ranks as a representative college paper, one of which Willamette is justly proud.

THE WALLULAH STAFF HOLDING COUNCIL

The Wallulah

A WILLAMETTE BOOSTER
WITH THE 1905 WALLULAH

IT WAS along in 1903 that the University, after passing thru a dark and discouraging period, began to establish itself more firmly and to take on new life. One of the first results of this new spirit was the publication of the first Wallulah by the Associated Student Body. It was a big undertaking, but a successful one. Two years later, in 1905, appeared the next Wallulah, it also being published by the Student Body. It was a very creditable volume, but a series of unfortunate circumstances combined to make it a big loss financially. For this reason no annual was published for several years.

However, in 1911 the Junior Class decided to undertake the task of publishing a strictly "Junior" annual. In this they were highly successful, for the 1912 Wallulah was one of which any school might well be proud. Last year the Junior Class felt that it would not be wise to attempt another regular annual, but they assisted the Collegian management in putting out a Junior Annual Collegian, as it was called, which was well received.

Last spring the class of 1914 felt that, in line with their general progressiveness, the only thing to do was to publish another Wallulah, and so an editor and a business manager were elected, and the work began. The members of the staff have worked hard and they feel that this book is not unworthy to take its place alongside of its predecessors.

Besides the work done by the members of the staff, many special assignments have been given to persons who were not on the staff, and in all cases they have responded very readily. Mr. Paul Homan in particular, altho being very busy with his own work as editor of the Collegian, has been of very great assistance to the editors of the Wallulah.

EDITORIAL NOTE:—Appreciating the importance of cultivating a closer acquaintance between the University and its alumni, we have reserved this section of the book for the alumni. We are indebted to Mrs. Lila Swafford Moser, '05, and to Miss Sophia Townsend, '03, for the following article.

IT HAS been Willamette's boast that her children have made good. Merely to mention the names of her Alumni who have won distinction in various fields has been sufficient to justify this claim. Her friends are ever ready to call attention to Sam L. Simpson, Congressman Hawley, Chief Justice Ailshie, Judge Robert Eakin, Miss Minnie Frickey, and scores of others whose achievements have brought honor to the name of Willamette. But those who are most often named as Willamette's illustrious sons and daughters belong to the earlier years of her history, and their records have already found a place on the pages of the Wallulah. Her only right to continued existence lies in the fact that she is still producing men and women prepared and ready to meet the demands of society upon them. Altho the time since their graduation has not been long, yet the graduates of the twentieth century have already given fair promise of a future which will not detract from, but rather enhance, the name and fame of Willamette.

The Alumni Association of Willamette University includes in its membership only those who have taken degrees from the College of Liberal Arts. Altho the graduates of the other colleges are equally worthy of mention their names do not occur in the annals of the Association unless they have also received the academic degree.

Not a few of the graduates of W. U. have used their collegiate training as a foundation for a professional course, and have thus increased their efficiency as lawyers and doctors. Robert S. Eakin '09 is now practicing law in La Grande, his father's old stand; James W. Crawford '11, after some practical work in the Attorney General's office, has gone back to Yale for further study; Albert Minton '12, the latest addition to the list, has hung out his shingle in Salem, where Glenn Unruh '09 has been practicing for some time and James Heltzel '08 has recently won from his county a seat in the State Legislature; Sidney Graham, a brilliant member of the class of '10, is practicing law in Portland; Murray D. Shanks '09 and Clark R. Belknap '10, both completed the Law along with the Liberal Arts course, and James W. Eckersley '10 and Chas. H. McKnight '07 were among the law graduates of 1911.

The class of '00 has two illustrious members who chose to continue work along college lines, Wm. Albert Manning, who, with the degree of Ph.D. from Stanford University, now holds the chair of Mathematics there, and Walter J. Shepard, who took his advanced degree from Harvard and is now assistant in History in the University of Ohio. The class of '03 adds to the list Erma Clarke McCall, B.L. from Ohio Wesleyan University, who previous to her marriage had charge of the History department of Salem High School; Sophia E. Townsend, A.M. University of Washington, who also taught in Salem High School and is now in Tacoma High School, and Samuel A. Siewert, A.M. Willamette University, who is pastor of a church in Seattle. Others who returned to their Alma Mater for their graduate work are—Frances Cornelius Siewert '01, Lila Swafford Moser '05, Ellen Anderson Fisher '09, Mabel Glover '09, Mary Gittens Mishler '09—all of whom assumed the role of pedagogue,—and George Oscar Oliver '09, another addition to the ministry. Edward Winans '07 followed his work in Willamette with three years at Oxford, England, as a Rhodes Scholar and now holds the chair of English Bible in the University of Pekin. Orytha Gatch '09 took advanced work in Woman's College, Baltimore; L. Marie Whipple '04 took her A.M. from University of Puget Sound, and is now teaching in Ridgefield, Wash., High School; John Reichen '08, recently deceased, and Wm. A. Schmidt '09 chose the University of Washington for their advanced work, the latter now being principal of the High School at Wilbur, Wash.

As a Christian college, Willamette might be considered to have failed had none of her children chosen their life-work along definite religious lines—but here too they have met the requirements. Nellie J. Clark '03 spent four years as a missionary in Nanking, China, but was forced to return on account of her health; Royal D. Bisbee '08 is in the mission field at Baroda, India; E. Kinney Miller '05 has been in Y. M. C. A. work ever since graduation, in Tacoma and Spokane, and is now General Secretary in Eugene, Oregon; Alma Hales Hunt '07 now living in Berkeley, was for some time Social Secretary in the Portland Y. W. C. A.; Guy Woods '11 is General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Doty, Wash.

In addition to those already named as ministers are, Gabriel Sykes '01, District Superintendent of Walla Walla District; Clarence A. Housel '02, R. B. Wilkins '03, J. J. Patten '04, D. L. Fields '09, and George R. Morehead '01.

It is natural to expect a goodly number of college graduates to follow teaching as a profession, and Willamette University has proved no exception. Besides those already mentioned one may cite a score or more, among whom are: Geo. W. Aschenbrenner '01, who taught in Oregon and in the Philippines and is now growing rich off of oranges in Southern California; Theodosia Bennet '11, Elva Smith '09, Frances Pohle '12, now holding positions in Salem High School; Annie Pigler Woods '10, recently a teacher in the same school; Ethel M. Fletcher '00 and D. Gans Gale '01, also Salem teachers; Burgess Ford '05, principal of the Estacada High School; Frank L. Grannis '06, in the Marshfield schools; Edith Kuney '09, teaching Modern Languages in Oregon Agricultural College; Mattie Leavitt Reed '00, teaching in Vancouver, Wash., for several years, and now living the same city; Beulah Clarke '11, Cynthia Hornibrook '10, Mabel Magness '12, Gussie Randall Pollard '06, Sylva Jones '06, Bessie Cornelius Elliott '08.

The University publications were benefitted by the journalistic proclivities of several students who, after graduation, took up newspaper work as for example, Edgar F. Averill '05, for several years in newspaper work in Pendleton; Edgar F. Wood '01 and Edgar Merisse '03, of "Ginger Can" fame, the first editor of the Wallulah.

Two of the recent graduates of Willamette have taken up civil engineering and are making a success of their work, John A. Elliott '07, of Seattle, and Austin Price '08, connected with the United States Reclamation Service at Boise.

We have spoken of those who have taken up work of a more or less public character, but this is by no means the largest part of the duty of a college graduate. If the everyday life of the home, the social circle, the business community, in which our graduates live, does not feel their influence, if their college training is not used to enrich the lives of less favored ones about them, their four years of college life has not born the fruit it should. But here, too, Willamette's graduates measure up to the standard. Lena Schindler Cramer '07, and Laneta Young Nace '08, are home makers for men whose work is a strenuous and trying one. The Whipple brothers, Eugene '05, and Lloyd '07, with their sister Ruth '08, are doing unusually fine work along this line, in a community where their efforts are needed and appreciated.

The highest tribute which any of us could receive—and we hope that it may be truly said of each—is "He hath done what he could."

The Alumni Directory

THERE has never been published a comprehensive directory of the Alumni of Willamette University. In fact, no record at all has been kept of the graduates of some of the affiliated colleges. Feeling the need of such a directory, which should embrace all departments of the University, an attempt was made by the Wallulah to compile one. The sources of information have been very meager, and it was impossible to discover the location of a great number of the Alumni, largely from the Medical School, and doubtless many of the addresses which we do have are incorrect. But, however, we feel that altho the directory may be very incomplete and far from accurate, yet it may be of some service—for if it does nothing else it will at least show the large number of graduates which Willamette can claim, as well as their wide distribution. The Alumni are listed alphabetically under the names of states, or countries, and cities.

BOOK IX

“Ugh”

Humorous, Semi-Humorous and Otherwise

EDITORIAL NOTE:—This section of the book has been managed exclusively by the Joke Editor. For obvious reasons the party desires to remain incognito. Any suits for libel or slander will be attended to at the proper time.

CULLED FROM THE EDITOR'S MAIL

To the "Girls' Affairs" Editor:

Can you assist me upon a point of social etiquette? I am naturally very bashful and retiring, but the other day a boy who has sat near me all year in Rhetoric class picked up a book for me which I had dropped. Three days later he met me in the P. O., and spoke to me, and I spoke back. Did I do the right thing? Kindly let me know at once as I'm afraid he will think me bold. Very bashfully,

RUTH BOYER.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am just going to be afraid to look at the Wallulah when it comes out, because I know it's going to have so many jokes about me. I confess that I do say the most perfectly foolish things in class. You won't put in very many, will you, Mr. Editor? Thank you. Very sincerely,

MISS KRENNING.

Dear Editor:

Have you any recent recipes as to the best way of fixing shrimps? Some shrimps can be made into salad and some are nice when they are roasted, but I find some shrimps which are very hard to do anything with. Can you advise me by return mail? Very truly,

GERTRUDE EAKIN.

Dear Editors:

It has come to my knowledge that you have a certain picture of me taken on the steps of Lausanne Hall. I want it understood that that picture must not go in the annual. It is not a fair picture of me, because the way the light shone in my face, it made me look cross, and I really wasn't cross; I never am. Trusting you will give this your attention, I am, very truly,

MISS PENNINGTON.

P. S.: Did anybody hand in that salt joke?

Editor "Girls' Affairs":

Dear Madam: I am not a girl, but I am interested in them, in a general way. In fact, this spring I have become interested in them in a more particular way. In fact, I am laboring under the impression that I have felt the first pale thrills of true love. But how can I be sure? I appreciate the seriousness of this matter, and am very anxious to know for a certainty that I have met my affinity before plunging into the realms I know naught of. Very earnestly,

J. R. BAIN.

Dear Old Pal:

For the sake of personal friendship, please see that that picture of me with my arm around that girl doesn't go in the annual. You know I love you and would do anything like that for you. I don't care for myself, but think how the girl would feel. And if you don't put it in I'll buy an extra Wallulah, because I wanted to send one to my little queen back in Bellingham. Remember, I live in the same house that you do. Affectionately,

CHAPPELL.

To the Editor of The Wallulah:

I am very anxious to know if you are going to run a beauty department in your book. If so I should like very much to know if you have any satisfactory way of reducing the size of people's feet. I understand that molasses and powdered alum are good. Am I correct? Kindly let me hear from you at once. Very truly,

RUTH HODGE.

Dear Editor:

For Heaven's sake, man, cut out those everlasting crude "wooden" jokes about Oakes and Holly's being worth so many Pearls, etc. After as many repetitions as they have had in the Collegian and other places, they get stale. In haste, HOLLINGWORTH.

P. S.: Waldo asked me to tell you to cut out the Mills-Mark jokes, too.

Dear Joke Editor:

I noticed in last week's Collegian that Tobie handed in the best list of jokes. Please find enclosed another joke, one of my best—don't you think this will change the result? Very anxiously,

OPPENLANDER.

"THE LADIES' CLUB"

FAMOUS FACULTY PHRASES

Dr. Patterson: "I shall now proceed to call the roll of the absent members." "I did not say so; some things I don't say." "Is it or isn't it? It is, isn't it? I think so." "Let us get the author's point of view."

Prof. Kirk: "We must not open the window as it will vitiate the efficacy of the heating system."

Miss Reynolds: "You all should learn self-control."

Prof. Von Eschen: "Oh, I know you're bluffing; you can't fool me."

Prof. Matthews: "Did you sleep well last night?" "Now if all the little girls and all the little boys will look this way—thank you."

Prof. Walsh: "Now, please, please, don't make such a mistake again." "Let's wake up and get busy for the rest of the year." "Now girls, don't marry a man unless you love him."

Miss Pennington: "Now, you must get that." "Now don't forget 'Pity Sakes'." "Now, I fail to see just why."

Miss Krenning: "Thank you."

Prof. Peck: "It isn't just known exactly what the function of that is."

Prof. Cooley: "That's very good, I'm sure; very good, indeed." "I am sure that this hour has been very profitably spent." "When I was in Michigan, I remember a certain preacher in Detroit—"

Miss Chappell: "I just love mean boys."

Dr. Lisle: "Would you mind speaking a little less loudly?"

Dr. Sweetland: "I say it without any mental reservation whatsoever." "I can say it without fear of successful contradiction."

Heard in Prof. Kirk's class room: "Judging from the roots, an optimist must be a person who looks after your eyes and a pessimist one who looks after you feet."

MOORE AT THE TELEPHONE

"Give me Main 602, please."

"Hello; is this Lausanne Hall?"

"May I speak to Miss B.?"

"Hello; is this Miss B.?"

"This is Stanford speaking. I wanted to know if I might take you to the reception Friday night?"

"Oh, is that so? I'm very sorry, too. Well, let me see; would you mind calling Miss J. or Miss T. to the telephone? It doesn't matter which."

"Oh, neither one there? Well, I'll call up later. Goodbye."

AN EXTRACT FROM ONE OF "RED'S" LETTERS HOME

Dear Father: You know we use hymnbooks for chapel service. Every student has to buy his own book. Since I am going to be in school for four years, I want to buy a good one, leather binding and india paper. I expect it will cost about $5.50. Very affectionately, CRAWFORD.

P. S.: Please don't send the hymnbook; send the $5.50, as I am planning to buy it here.

AT LAUSANNE

Ray: "Say, er—could you take a joke?"

Gertrude: "I might; why? Are you thinking of proposing?"

THE WAY WE SING IT

"Fo rour dea rold Willamet tu,
The Var su ty loved so well;
Thec ollege leadin gal lothers,
As sour conquest snobly tell.
We shall liv vand die for W. U.
And do it wi tha will
So here stew the bes tin nall the West

MOSHER THE TAILOR SINGS IT

"We shall live and 'dye' for W. U."

Hans Schroeder: "I vant to buy some talcum powder."

Druggist: "What kind? Mennen's?"

Hans Schroeder: "No, Vimmen's."

EXTRACT FROM AXLEY'S DEBATE

"The lion and the lamb lay down together—but the lamb was not together."

Queeny: "You mustn't hug me in public."

Chappell: "That's all right; the law allows freedom of the press."

"WILLIE" KNOWS

Not long since Prof. Kirk stopped at the White House and ordered fried eggs. The waiter, recently from the South, desiring to know whether they were to be fried on one or both sides, asked the conventional, "Ovah, suh?"

"Ova?" echoed the Professor, surprised at the waiter's apparent familiarity with Latin. "Certainly, that's what I ordered—ova gallinae."

Oppenlander: "Why do you sit on all my jokes?"

Gilkey: "I wouldn't if they were pointed."

In the Anthropology class not long ago Dr. Patterson was making some suggestions for supplementary reading: "I am sure we have 'Primitive Culture' in the library, and I think most of you can find a 'Prehistoric Man' around the University somewhere."

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Brazier Small: "Have you heard of the trained fleas? Aren't they wonderful?"

Beryl Holt: "Oh, I don't know. Down at Newport last summer we had mosquitos that would eat out of our hands."

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

FROM A NEWLYWED

Lola Bellinger (in Comparative Politics): "A one-man government is best—if you get a nice man."

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Dr. Cooley: "Now, isn't it a fact, Mr. McDaniel, that music is usually used to elevate the mind and soul into higher realms of æsthetic beauty?"

Ivan McD.: "Perhaps so; but I thought it was usually used to elevate the feet."

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

IN THE SPA

Gilkey (reading): "Vanilla ice cream, loganberry sherbet, chocolate mash—you know, I can't go these mashes."

Emma L.: "You can't? I just love them—you know there are different kinds of mashes."

For Tomorrow Ye Die

REFRESHING ONE-ACT COMEDY IN MANY SCENES

SCENE I

Just without the door of the Kloshe Klub, 6:27 P. M. The board of directors, Marsh, Chappell and others of the common rabble. It rains. A crowd gathers.

Chappell: "Gee, but I'm hungry. I wish they'd open up."

Chorus: "Uh-h-h! Yum-oo-gee!"

Oppenlander tries the window. The crowd begins to yell for the door to open.

Marsh: "Say, we change tables today, don't we?"

Chorus: "Do we? Good! I hope I don't get the big table."

Schreiber: "That's right; the board of directors will meet around the corner."

Schreiber, Jefferson and Tobie step around the corner and arrange numbers for drawing. All draw. The door opens and all rush in.

SCENE II

Interior of Kloshe Klub rooms, 6:30½ P. M. Hungry mob tears wildly around to find new places. The three directors are all accidentally seated at the best table. Silence. All bow their heads.

Proebstel (seeing some soot in his plate): "Say, what kind of a mess is this?"

Secretary Moore: "Proebstel, will you say grace, please?" (Silence.)

Vice-President Paget (entering, seeing everybody standing): "Young." (Silence.)

President Gilkey (entering, seeing everybody waiting): "Mr. Bullock."

Grace is said and a general splurge follows. Bain calls for the meat while still straddling his chair. Chappell says he had eggs for breakfast, and has been feeling rotten all day. Gilkey follows with the oxtail story, and Bolt with the green goggle yarn. Young calls for more butter, and Bill Schreiber spills some soup on the table cloth. Noise of lapping, crunching and munching is heard. Waiter comes and goes, pouring tea and water upon different people.

SCENE III

Second course; stage setting the same.

Enter George Schreiber. He doesn't like his soup and begins to argue spiritualism with Stocker. They are soon joined by Bain, Proebstel and Raines. Oldenburg posits an axiom in which he disagrees with all of them.

Exit Jefferson. Wieder pours some cream out of the pitcher and drinks it. He then cracks a joke. Paget laughs. Ball wipes off his smile with his handkerchief.

Oppenlander: "I move that a committee of three be appointed to go outside and laugh."

Bolt spoils the joke with a few feeble remarks, at which Marsh charitably smiles.

SCENE IV

Third course; stage setting the same.

Paget: "I'll give anybody a nickle for their pie."

Oldenburg: "You can have Holly's."

Hollingworth arrives. Numerous remarks, one of which is funny. Holly lets loose his customary bray.

Holly: "Haw Haw-ha-a-a-a!!!"

Doane (in the kitchen): "Haw Haw-ha-a-a-a!!!"

All: "Haw Haw-ha-a-a-a!"

Members begin to leave. Booth and Young throw crackers at each other.

Schreiber: "Well, somehow I don't feel quite as hungry as I did."

Chappell: "Well, boys, I feel just as good as if I'd had a square meal, and don't forget the Y. M. C. A., Sunday at 3."

Ohling: "Mr. President, I move that we do now have fifteen minutes parliamentary practice with Mr. Wieder in the chair."

Gilkey: "Lost for want of a second. The noes have it."

Manager Jory: "Mr. President, may I make an announcement? I have noticed lately that several of the fellows have been indulging in cow fruit as a beverage. Now, that would be all right if everybody did it, but if those who do are going to be fair to those who don't, it will be well hereafter for everybody to abstain from the use of any intoxicating beverage whatsoever. I also noticed that somebody has put their elbow thru the window in our door. The one who did it ought to help the club pay for it. I think that's all I have to say."

Several go out. A few stop to pay up their long-overdue board bill. Roughhouse starts in kitchen between Moore and Doane. Bolt goes to investigate. Receives a glass of water in the face. Gilkey wears a hole in the tablecloth pounding for order. Noise subsides. More exeunt.

SCENE V

Stage setting the same.

All are gone except Bain, Stocker and Tobie, who are still eating. Exit Stocker.

SCENE VI

Stage setting the same.

Bain and Tobie are still eating. Exit Bain.

SCENE VII

Stage setting the same.

Tobie is seen foraging at the different tables.

SCENE VIII

Stage setting the same.

Tobie is still eating.

CURTAIN

SOME SNAPS TAKEN FROM REAL LIFE

Our Advertisers

STUDENTS, it is up to you now to patronize the advertisers that have made this book possible. The business firms whose ads. are shown here, are the same firms that are always back of Willamette University in all her enterprises, no matter whether they think it will pay them financially or not. As a student body it should be shown that we appreciate their support. The proper kind of support on our part would do away with the one objection that is met most often by advertising managers of student publications, and that is, "It won't do me any good, but I guess I can help you out a little." Of course you will notice that some firms which are heavily patronized by students are not represented in this Wallulah. It is not because they did not have the chance, but because they thought it wouldn't pay. Show them, if possible, that they are decidedly wrong.

In the publishing of this book it has been necessary for it to pass thru four processes, any one of which might have spoiled it if any carelessness had been allowed. But as we see it coming from the press now we feel that we should express our sincere thanks, and voice our appreciation of the work done by the different firms.

First came the photographers, W. A. Bullock and H. S. Carter. The work turned out from the Bullock Studio is most satisfactory. They knew their business, and made the best of a very difficult and trying situation.

Next came the making of the cuts by the Beaver Engraving Company of Portland. At this point we met with a most pleasant surprise. This company not only turned out an excellent set of plates for us, but their promptness in handling such a large order in small cuts has not passed unnoticed. We would feel free to recommend this company, along with all the others, for student patronage.

The Statesman Publishing Company was the next to handle the Wallulah. Here it again fell into good hands. They have spared no pains to make the book a perfect volume. Their attention to even the smallest details has been very noticeable; and it is due to them that the work of the photographers and engravers has shown up so well.

From the printer the Wallulah next passed thru the hands of the Rodgers Paper Company. Altho it cannot be told at this writing how well they have done their work, yet it will be evident to you as you examine this book. We have every confidence in the bindery and know from past experience that they will deal kindly with the 1914 Wallulah in dressing her for her "debut."

RALPH HOMAN, Business Manager.

*Printers of
"The Wallulah"*

Too Crude to Print

NOTE:—The following "items" were handed in to the Wallulah for jokes, but as they were entirely too punk for using, they have been discarded entirely:

ACHINESE JOKE

Chu says George is a better sport than Bill because George has a girl, but he thinks that George will get old and then Bill will get Young, maybe.

Teacher: "What is joint education?"

Bright Boy: "Gymnastics."

The Joke Editor dreaming about some of the jokes that were handed in.

Farmer: "I see they have a new wagon called the 'Bain'; what do you think about it."

Freshman: "It is properly named I think, for all Bains have wagging (w a g o n) tongues."

(The idea is a good one.)

NEW JOKE ON AN OLD SUBJECT.

"Speaking about jewels, you may not know it, boys," said Oakes, "but there's a whole lot of difference between 'Pearl' and 'Mother of Pearl'."

A SAMPLE LIMERICK.

(There were seventeen verses—this is the best.)

Homan, D.D., is our president;
Of Salem he is a resident.

He's very fine, but
If you're tempted to cut
Classes, you'd better be hesitant.

(This is the worst.)

A nice young lady called Chappell
Adorns the front platform at chapel;

Thinks the spooner a goose—
For him has no use—
When one tried it with her, gave that chap'ell.

Miss Thompson: "I wish I could sing with ease."

Mr. Jory: "I wish I could sing with Grace."

Miss Boyer: "What is your favorite color of hair?"

Odgers: "Red."

Elmo: "You think pretty well of yourself, don't you, Oscar?"

Lund: "Well, I think I'm not far from an angel."

(Does anybody think Lund said that?)

AN OPPENLANDER "JOKE."

Gerhart: "What do they call lemons in England?"

Ball: "I don't know."

Gerhart: "Lemons, of course."
(Ha! Ha! Ha!)

What would Louis Hepp do if the fire whistle were to blow while he was enjoying his "annual"?

Todd: "Was Rome founded by Romeo?"

Miss Krenning: "No; it was Juliet who was found dead by Romeo."
(Oh, slush.)

ONE OF TOBIE'S PREFERRED STOCK.

Why is Sunday at college like a saloon? Answer—Because it is full of whines, ails, and sham pains.
(Ouch!)

AT THE EATON CLUB

The President of the Club: "Mr. Hepp, will you say grace?"

Hepp (taken by surprise): "Er—I pass."

"What a man seweth that shall he also rip."

"Is a kiss nothing divided by two, or two divided by nothing?"

NOTE: — There are twenty-four more pages of similar matter which the Wallulah will gladly give anyone who will cart it away.
