PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

"FOR WILLAMETTE,
BEING 'FIRST' IS NOT
AN END IN ITSELF,
BUT, FOR ALL OF US WHO LOVE THE
UNIVERSITY, A MEANS
TOWARD AN END."

Because this issue of the "Annual Report" marks the first of my presidency, it seems particularly appropriate that we should highlight a few other "firsts" we celebrate at Willamette, in a series of vignettes about the extraordinary people and events which have increased the stature of the University over time.

As I read these essays, I felt great pride in being associated with an institution that has so often been at the forefront of educational innovation and excellence, even at the earliest stages of its founding. In a society that often views change with apprehension, the leadership of Willamette University has chosen to regard the opportunity for success as a greater value than the risk of failure — an attitude of confident belief that dares to accomplish what had only been imagined before.

Just a few of the results that have been achieved by means of this attitude are commemorated in the pages that follow. Today, we build on the achievements of our predecessors throughout the academic community: in our classrooms, science laboratories, libraries, computer stations, rehearsal halls and athletic fields — not to mention the Bistro and Goudy Commons, where good ideas are also born and thrive.

When we speak of "being the first" in any endeavor, the image may evoke a sense of triumph and honor, ovations and renown. But as with all worldly recognition, there is a counter-balancing force, a sense of obligation that accompanies good fortune. There are duties to be fulfilled and expectations to be met, especially by those whose endeavors have met with notable success. This is the sense of noblesse oblige that education, more than ancestry, truly bestows.

For Willamette, being "first" is not an end in itself, but, for all of us who love the University, a means toward an end. Our enterprise is education, and our outcome is the education of the students who will leave this beloved place with a sense of civility, love of humanity and adherence to the principles of social justice. We cannot — and we would not want to — remain complacent with the "firsts" that are listed on these pages. Today our obligation is to build on the accomplishments of our predecessors, opening new doors for tomorrow's students and sharing our successes with them so that they can better achieve their own.

This year Willamette has begun using the slogan, "the first university in the West." It is a phrase, I believe, that in its complexity compels attention. Initially, the words conjure images of the University's long and successful history; next, they serve as an ongoing reminder of our obligation to the future and our responsibility to share our good fortune with successive generations of students.

As you read this edition of the "Annual Report," I hope that you will share my feelings of pride in Willamette University and the accomplishments of its faculty, students and alumni. And finally, most assuredly, I thank each one of you for your continuing commitment to Willamette, "the first university in the West." There is much recorded here, in these pages, for all of us to take pride in.

Sincerely,

M. Lee Pelton

Nationally competitive grants and awards were earned by a record number of Willamette students during 1998-1999. They included juniors Erin Dougherty and Erik Van Hagen who were among 65 Truman Scholars named nationwide. Warren J.L. Wood '99 was one of 300 recipients of a Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship. Heidi Hausermann '99, Laura Brian '99 and Atkinson School student Laura Florl all received J. William Fulbright grants.

For the first time in school history and as a member of NCAA Division III, a Willamette man and woman both won national track and field championships in the same year. Beth Fitzgerald '99 won the 800 meters and Jimmy Watts '99 won the decathlon.

Former congressmen John Rhodes (R-Arizona) and Jerry Paterson (D-California) visited Willamette for three days as part of the Congress to Campus program.

Hallie Ford Professor of English and Writer-in-Residence Virginia Furtwangler, who writes as Ann Copeland, began, along with other faculty, a weekly lunchtime short story reading. Students and professors were invited to read their favorite stories.

Jill Ker Conway, former president of Smith College and author of two books of memoirs, discussed writing at an Atkinson Lecture honoring President M. Lee Pelton's inauguration.

The Willamette University College of Law Law Review held a conference on conserving and managing North Pacific fisheries.

Literary readings on campus included authors Morton Marcus, whose latest book is titled "When People Could Fly"; Sandy Diamond, author of "The Hunchback"; and Robin Hemley, author of "Nola, A Memoir of Faith, Art and Madness."

Jeremy Hall '98 was named one of 18 recipients of the 1998 President's Service Award for his work establishing a community garden for low-income Salem families. He traveled to Washington, D.C., to receive this award from President Clinton.

Willamette featured noted speakers such as Michael Parenti, Rami Khouri, Dmitri Nikulin and Vincent Bugliosi. Topics ranged from the Middle East to the Clinton impeachment. Dennis O'Connor also delivered two talks: "Why Read J.D. Salinger?" and "Religion and Spirituality at the U.S. General Accounting Office."

As part of their core curriculum, Willamette University Atkinson Graduate School of Management students began a new project called P&CE (Private, Public and Community Enterprise), which involved the creation of business enterprises that in turn gave profits and volunteer hours to Salem-area not-for-profit organizations.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE YEAR

President M. Lee Pelton was inaugurated as the 22nd president of Willamette University in February 1999. The ceremonies included a lecture on "Liberal Arts Education in a Populist Culture," with Leon Botstein, president of Bard College and director of the American Symphony Orchestra. Botstein's topic was based on his recent book, "Jefferson's Children: Education and the Promise of American Culture." Other inaugural events included the running of the President's Mile, a race around the Willamette campus, and a performance by alto-saxophonist Phil Woods.

Civil rights leader Myrlie Evers-Williams delivered the commencement address at this year's graduation ceremony and received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree. Other honorary degree recipients were Chai Ling, a student activist leader from the 1989 Tiananmen Square protests; Bill L'58 and Norma L'62 Paulus, for their years of service to Oregon in various capacities; and Arthur Mitchell, founder and artistic director of the Dance Theatre of Harlem.

The Hallie Ford Museum of Art opened in October. The museum is the second largest in Oregon. As part of the opening week, James Cuno '73, director of the Harvard University art museums, delivered a lecture about the role of art museums in the coming millennium.

The Mary Stuart Rogers Music Center opened in March with a week of concerts, including a performance of "Voces Vergilianae," an opera-oratorio composed by John Peel with libretto based on Virgil's "Aeneid," translated by classics professor M.D. Usher. The music center was designed to have acoustics on par with the great symphony halls of Boston and Vienna.

U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna E. Shalala and Congresswoman Darlene Hooley spoke at a University Forum.

History professor William Duvall received the 1998 Oregon Professor of the Year award, the sixth time in nine years a Willamette professor received the award. Several other annual awards recognize teaching excellence at Willamette University. The United Methodist Award for Excellence in Teaching went to Roger Hull, professor of art history. The Jerry E. Hudson Distinguished Teaching Award recipient was Valerie Vollmar, professor of law. Linda Bowers, associate professor of English, was named Mortar Board Professor of the Year.

Bearcat women's soccer outdid the prior year's stunning performance by advancing to the NCAA Division III national semifinals before losing to the eventual national champion, Macalester (Minn.), 1-0. Their record was Willamette's best at 19-1-4.

The Distinguished Artists Series featured a performance of the Emerson String Quartet and a duet by Malcolm Bilson on the fortepiano and Anner Bylsma on the cello. The series also received a permanent endowment of $300,000 from The Collins Foundation, and is now known as the Grace Goudy Distinguished Artists Series.

The East Asian Film Series featured films each week, including several in honor of renowned director Akira Kurosawa.

essay on the invasion of the humanities by various group ideologies and studied some of the new editions of Shakespeare.

Rosalyn Edelson, education, fall and spring. Edelson helped the newly founded Florida Gulf Coast University develop a Master of Teaching curriculum. Her work focused on student assessment and trends in national, state and local standards. She also examined the moral dimensions of teaching and preparing teachers.

Richard Ellis, politics, fall and spring. Ellis completed a book titled "Founding the American Presidency" and continued studying the rise of popular executive leadership in Great Britain and the United States from 1828 to 1920. He also began a book on the initiative process and wrote several short pieces and reviews.

Peter Harmer, exercise science, fall and spring. Harmer made three trips to Japan to study sumo wrestling and the cross cultural psychology of sport. He also studied muscle energy techniques at Ursa Institute in Edmonds, Wash., performed an extended clinical rotation at Mercy Orthopedic and Sports Therapy in Nampa, Idaho, and studied laboratory techniques with other professors from Central and Western Washington Universities.

Stephen Hey, sociology, fall and spring. Hey spent the year living in Chicago in the Hyde Park community, located near the University of Chicago on the South Side. He conducted research with the Save Our Jobs Committee, a group of former-steel workers from Wisconsin Steel. He is in the process of creating an oral history about this group. In addition, he has developed a course called Chicago Sociology for Willamette's new General Education program.

Thomas Hibbard, economics, spring. Working with Professor Don Negri, Hibbard testified before the Oregon House of Representatives regarding a proposal to revise Oregon's truck taxes. Their study examined how the existing and proposed tax burdens on different types of trucks compared to their road wear. Finally, he studied the consequences of converting Oregon Health Sciences University from a unit in a state agency to a public corporation.

Sally Markowitz, philosophy, fall. Markowitz revised her book plan after realizing that what had been the first chapter in the book as originally planned deserved far more explication than she could give it in a single chapter. Her original book has become two books, with the first based on that first chapter. During her sabbatical she revised this chapter into a journal article, "Pelvic Politics: Sexual Dimorphism and Racial Difference," which has been accepted by "SIGNS: Journal of Women in Culture and Society." The book now concerns the relationship between the modern Western idea of sex/gender difference and that of racial hierarchy and the development of this relationship historically since the 18th century.

George McCowen, history, fall. Seeking to study a historical event that includes his family history, McCowen researched the migration of the Scotch-Irish from Pennsylvania to Georgia during the 18th century. He then followed the group's history through the Civil War. McCowen hopes to record his discoveries in a monograph.

Robert L. Misner, law, spring. Misner conducted research both here and in Australia regarding mercy in the criminal justice system. In an ongoing project, he is developing guidelines to help prosecutors, legislators, police officers and others determine when mercy is an appropriate course and how to apply it.

Don Negri, economics, fall and spring. Working with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Negri studied the effect of global warming on agricultural production. Unlike other studies that only use the annual mean temperature, Negri's study included temperature extremes that cause droughts, floods, hurricanes and other events that would affect production. He also worked with Professor Tom Hibbard evaluating a proposal to revise Oregon truck taxes and testified before the Oregon House of Representatives. On the side, Negri developed Internet resources for the Economics Department and his classes.

John Peel, music, fall. For the opening of the new Mary Stuart Rogers Music Center, Peel composed an opera-oratorio called

"Voces Vergilianae" based on the story of Dido and Aeneas in Virgil's "Aeneid." Professor M.D. Usher provided the words, taken from Virgil's epic poem and sung in the original Latin. This piece was performed by the Willamette Chamber Choir, the Willamette Master Chorus and the Salem Chamber Orchestra.

Richard Sutliff, English, spring and fall. Sutliff traveled to Jordan this spring to improve his Arabic and deepen his understanding of Middle East culture and literature. He is living with Bedouin tribes as part of a project to study their history. His sabbatical will extend through fall semester, when he plans to conduct further research in Paris at L'Institut du Monde Arabe.

James Thompson, art, spring. Thompson created 20 paintings and drawings on canvas and paper using visual images from Medieval art. He pieced together these images, along with others, to create new compositions. His work has been shown in several galleries in Portland and reviewed in "Artweek," a national journal.

FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

Willamette University's financial results for 1998-99 included continued strong growth reflected by the above graphs representing total net assets and market value of total endowed funds. The largest element of that growth has been income and capital gains on long-term investments. For the 1998-99 fiscal year those gains totaled over $18.3 million. The portion of income and gains used in support of the operating budget was over $7.6 million and the portion reinvested in endowed funds totaled over $10.7 million. The net increase in endowed funds including new gifts and investment gains, less the amount spent for student aid and other operating costs was over $18.4 million. While financial markets have been volatile, Willamette's Trustee Endowment Committee has fostered a conservative and well-diversified investment portfolio that has outperformed more than 75 percent of similar funds over the last five years.

The next largest element of net asset growth after investment gains has been new gifts. For 1998-99, gift income measured on the accrual basis totaled over $11.3 million, which included major gifts for construction of the Mary Stuart Rogers Music Center and for endowment of operating costs and completion of the Hallie Ford Museum of Art, as well as large contributions for endowed programs and scholarships.

As has been the case for 22 consecutive years, a positive balance from the operating budget also contributed to the increase in net assets. The budget surplus of $264,000 or approximately one-half of one percent of the operating budget was set aside for projected facilities repair and improvement needs.

Student financial aid, particularly scholarship aid, is the fastest growing operating budget element in both size and importance. Willamette provided its students with over $15.8 million in grants and scholarships, amounting to more than 36 percent of tuition. With college costs continuing to grow and with increasing competition from publicly funded colleges, the need for additional endowment funds devoted to student scholarships is critical.

Willamette's financial statements reflect a long trend of growing financial strength. They also reveal some of the pressure to raise additional resources for pursuing the University's goals. In addition to publicly funded colleges, Willamette competes with some independent colleges that have greater endowed resources per student. The University's endowment, in addition to providing student scholarships, provides for faculty positions, building maintenance and program enhancements. Willamette must continue to improve its financial position and to use its strength to foster even better educational programs, a more effective and beautiful educational environment, and to preserve those benefits for students from diverse backgrounds.

CONTRIBUTIONS SUMMARY

Willamette University is grateful to the donors who have made contributions during the 1998-99 fiscal year. Matching gifts from employers have been included when determining the appropriate giving society memberships. Titles have been omitted wherever possible to save space. If you are a donor, but your name does not appear in the "1998-99 Annual Report of the President," one of two things may have happened: 1) your gift may have been received after Willamette's fiscal year ended May 31, 1999; or 2) in the process of generating the annual report lists, your name was inadvertently excluded. Inquiries or requests for further information should be directed to: Marnie Noble, Director of Donor Relations, Willamette University, 900 State Street, Salem, OR 97301, Phone 503-370-6726.

Step Society

The Step Society commemorates the historic old step at Waller Hall, worn down over time by the feet of so many people. The society honors individuals who contributed $500 to $999 to Willamette during the fiscal year. Contributors to the Step Society provide vital support for the academic footing needed by new generations of students who cross Willamette's threshold.

ANNUAL GIFTS REPORT

FIRST WOMEN

Willamette's first graduate was Emily J. York, who earned a degree in English literature in 1859. As she told an interviewer, she was also first in her class: "As I was the only graduate, I was the valedictorian." Less known is the long history of other pioneering women who followed her and set their own firsts.

Many early women received medical degrees from Willamette, then went on to become doctors for Oregon's frontier towns. Ella A.J. Ford was the first, in 1877. Others followed, and eventually Dr. Mary (Bowerman) Purvine '03 recorded her experiences in a collection of short stories. She came to Willamette from a Quaker farming family, knowing "nothing of the world except that one worked for a living, that it was a sin to lie, and that the worst thing in the world was a drunkard." She practiced medicine in Oregon for several decades, managing a smallpox quarantine, delivering babies and accompanying insane patients on a train to New York City.

As early as 1898, women earned law degrees at Willamette. Olive Stanton England, Gabrielle Clark and Anna M. (Carson) Rafter were the first. In 1995, the College of Law celebrated these women and honored its living alumnae from the first half of this century.

Willamette women continue to break barriers. Last year, soccer star Liz Heaston '99 kicked two extra points for the Bearcat football team, becoming the first woman to play collegiate football and the first to score.

Emily York, long celebrated as a Willamette first, was not only the first graduate, but the first of many women of achievement. Hers is a heritage Willamette is proud to have kept.

FIRST SISTER UNIVERSITY: TIU

In 1965, Japanese college president Taizo Kaneko wrote to 50 colleges and universities throughout the United States, offering to send eager students to live and learn in America. Thirty-five colleges responded; only one unconditionally and immediately accepted Kaneko's offer. That one reply came from Willamette University's President G. Herbert Smith, a reply that led to Willamette's first sister college.

The next year, 23 students from Tokyo International University (TIU) traveled to America to spend two weeks studying conversation and history. As the program developed, the number increased to 35.

Willamette faculty also crossed the Pacific, and in 1972 Willamette students first spent a semester in Japan. In 1973, TIU began the Japanese Study Program, which hosted foreign students interested in learning about Japanese language and culture.

Then, in the late 1980s, Del Monte closed its cannery next to Willamette and, unable to sell the derelict property, gave it to the University. Willamette sold it to TIU, and in 1989 the modern buildings of Tokyo International University of America opened.

Since then, students from TIU have come to Willamette for a 10-month program of study. They learn the English language, study American culture, and finally, near the end of their stay, take regular Willamette courses. Many Tokyo International University of America (TIUA) students live with American roommates.

Richard Yocom, executive vice president of TIUA and former executive assistant to Willamette's president, credits this first sister-college relationship with Willamette's current international reach. Willamette now sends more than 100 students each year to foreign countries.

1842 Society

The 1842 Society recognizes individuals who contributed $150 to $499 to Willamette during the fiscal year. The largest giving society, the 1842 Society commemorates the year of the University's founding and represents the base on which the future Willamette will be built.

FIRST RHODES SCHOLAR

Willamette's first Rhodes Scholar was a young man named Edward J. Winans, who graduated in 1907. During his time at Willamette, Winans was deeply committed to his faith, which he expressed by serving others. Besides being active in several clubs, he led Bible studies and reported YMCA news in the "Collegian."

His Oxford years were spent studying theology. On a trip in 1909 to Palestine and Syria, he decided to become a missionary, and after graduating from Oxford in 1910, he traveled to China to begin a life's work. He married his wife, fellow missionary Josephine Fearon, in Beijing in 1914. Together they delivered their witness, in various locations and various roles, returning home for brief intervals during times of danger, until 1948, when they had to flee advancing communist armies, and never returned.

In the United States, Winans found ways to continue his ministry by providing hospitality to foreign college students. Later he taught English and Bible at Aoyama Gakuin University, where he described himself as a "China missionary on loan to Japan." But Winans stayed close to Americans during his lifetime, and after 47 years of mission work, he returned to southern California, where he served his local church until his death in 1974. In 1960 Willamette awarded him an alumni citation.

Since Winans, three other Willamette students have received the Rhodes Scholarship. Paul T. Homan '14 used his education to teach economics and, later, to serve as a consultant for the Ford Foundation. Tom Bartlett '51, who completed his A.B. and Ph.D. degrees at Stanford, served as chancellor for the Oregon and State University of New York (SUNY) systems of higher education. Hikaru Kerns '69 studied law at Oxford but upon graduating followed an interest in journalism. He now owns and operates the largest Japanese-language newspaper in Southeast Asia.

R.A. Booth Society

The R.A. Booth Society was established in 1990, honoring the trustee who in 1908 pledged $100,000 to boost the University's endowment. Members have affirmed the University motto "not unto ourselves alone are we born" by establishing planned gifts which benefit the University. In the spirit of the society's namesake, these members will provide for future generations at Willamette University through bequests, life insurance policies, life income trusts and life estates.

If you have named Willamette University as a beneficiary in your will or a life insurance policy, but are not listed, please let us know. We would like to express our thanks. At their request, some members' names are not published here.

FIRST PRESIDENT

Willamette's first president, the Rev. Francis S. Hoyt, was only 28 when he came west to serve as principal of the school that would become Willamette. He had to adjust quickly to frontier life. After arriving by ship in Portland, he discovered there were no roads to Salem, though if he was willing to wait — and he had no choice — he could probably employ a passing local to row him to Oregon City. From there he hitched a wagon ride with a Mrs. Parrish and her son. Mrs. Parrish, unfortunately, was only going to Howell Prairie, so Dr. Hoyt had to procure and ride his first horse the rest of the way to the institution that eagerly awaited his leadership.

He served the school for a decade, earning the admiration and praise of his colleagues. He helped Willamette receive its charter in 1853 and provided stable guidance during a time when the leadership of most frontier schools was notoriously transient. He showed solicitude to the students and personally arranged their housing with reputable families. Gustavus Hines, a member of the board of trustees, wrote, "As a teacher ... he was decidedly popular and efficient, gaining not only the good-will and affection of the students generally, but also their highest respect."

His most memorable act, however, may have occurred 36 years after he left office. He was 62, the presiding elder of his church, and visiting the parsonage of his pastor, the Rev. John Matthew Baxter. The minister was ill, and Mrs. Baxter found hosting the elder difficult amidst the racket of her four-year-old son. Without hesitation, Dr. Hoyt turned young Bruce over his knee and delivered a good spanking. Bruce Baxter, who never forgot the incident, went on to become a bishop of the Methodist Church and the 15th president of Willamette University, a place, evidently, with a lively heritage.

FIRST MEDICAL SCHOOL IN OREGON; WU'S FIRST PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL

It is gone now, having served its purpose in the days when frontier doctors had little or no formal training — a brief apprenticeship at best — but the Willamette College of Medicine, founded at the request of the governor, was the first in Oregon and the third west of St. Louis.

The original plan, in 1865, was to start a school in Portland. The board of trustees granted the charter, but the school never materialized. The following year, the board revoked the charter and established the school in Salem. The first classes of the Willamette University College of Medicine began in 1867. Eventually the college relocated to Portland. In the 1880s its attendance was higher than any other Willamette professional school. As medical knowledge and techniques progressed, the school recommended a third year of study.

Then, in 1895, the Portland hospital passed into the hands of a group of homeopathic physicians who resented Willamette's skepticism toward their practice. They closed the hospital to students and faculty. The professors, stymied, voted to suspend the College; the board of trustees resolved to save it. In a decade when Willamette was stooped with debt, they managed to find buildings and staff in Salem, and the school continued.

Willamette's first new building of the 20th century went to the medical college, and in 1905, the College moved from its rented rooms off campus to a new, comfortable hall, well-lit and furnished with modern apparatus.

The school continued there for several years, but as medicine became more and more advanced, the college found that it could not keep up without large endowments or state support. In 1913, the board of trustees agreed to merge the College with the University of Oregon, and it closed as the West Coast's oldest continuously-operating school of medicine.

PUBLIC AND PRIVATE MANAGEMENT

Can someone be good at business and good at public administration? How do the two overlap? Can a single school teach them both? The people at the Atkinson Graduate School of Management believe a school can. The Atkinson School has the first (and only) program in the nation to earn accreditation from both the International Association for Management Education (AACSB) and the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration (NASPAA). Its Master of Management degree provides the benefits of an MBA and MPA combined.

With the MM degree, graduates have a broader horizon for their future. The business part of their education gives them a strong foundation in finance, organizational analysis and human resources. They study legal, international, negotiation and ethical issues of management. The public administration part of the management degree addresses the political, regulatory and fiscal issues of the public sector.

Graduates can run better businesses if they understand how government makes decisions and how those decisions influence business. They can accomplish more as public and not-for-profit administrators if they have finance, marketing, teamwork and computer skills — skills commonly neglected by programs that focus exclusively on public administration. The Atkinson School is training better managers, whatever field they choose.

Rated one of the top business schools in the nation by "Business Week" and "U.S. News and World Report," the Atkinson School helps its students learn by its commitment to teaching and its many career development opportunities: mentoring, internships, job search workshops and employer databases. The professors are experienced in business and they are accessible. Students at the Atkinson School are challenged, and have an opportunity to achieve a first-rate education.

FIRST HISTORY OF WILLAMETTE

Citing one's sources is a good practice, so here's the source of many of the facts in this year's "Annual Report": Willamette's first history, "Chronicles of Willamette," chronicling the University's first 100 years. It is a book with ample heft, bound in red, coarse cloth — and out of print. Robert Gatke took 23 years to write it, amidst teaching politics and history, and finished it in 1942, the year of Willamette's centennial.

Gatke is the source of much of the school's lore. It is from him that we learn, for instance, that the first building on campus was never actually completed, although it served as a classroom for years. He tells us the vision of the church leaders for their new school: "It is ardently hoped that this Institution is destined to wield a powerful influence in molding the mind and heart of the medley mass with which the valley of the Columbia is so rapidly filling up." We also learn that by 1888, the fences around campus were pulled down, as they were no longer necessary to protect against grazing cows.

But "Chronicles" is more than just a compendium of esoteric, quaint tidbits. The history tells of the first Methodist missionaries to come to Oregon, led by Jason Lee, and the faith that helped them persevere through the sickness, loneliness and hardship of the frontier. It paints rich portraits of the men and women who built the foundations of Willamette and nurtured the school in its later years. It describes dark days of debt and times of economic prosperity. And it describes student life across the decades, with the early literary societies, the slow advent of the Greek system, the spontaneous birth of Glee, and the ups and downs of the football team. It is a record of the rich heritage of the first university in the West.

FIRST IN LIBRARY TECHNOLOGY

In 1979, people still built computers in their garages following mail-order instructions. Only a few years after the first personal computers, and five years before anyone had conceived of a mouse, Willamette began computerizing its library holdings. That project, completed in 1986, made Willamette the first academic library in the Northwest with a fully computerized card catalog and circulation system.

Since then, the library has continued to improve its technology. Recently, the library staff developed software for one of the first completely integrated infostations — a single application that combines many search tasks traditionally spread across separate computers. From a single computer, users can search Willamette's catalog, the catalogs of other libraries, local newspapers and hundreds of periodical indices. Again, there were few precedents. The library staff had to develop its own software which works with Netscape to create a unified, neat and easy-to-use environment.

Next year the Hatfield Library will add another innovation: citation searches. A citation search is one of the most powerful search capabilities for research, because it enables a researcher to start with one article, then review all the articles that cite it. It's something that is only possible with computers: the reverse of looking in a bibliography. Citation searches let students and professors trace the development of thought on any given idea, always sure that they are seeing all relevant scholarship.

Citation searches are provided by the Web of Science, and the Hatfield Library will be the first and only library in Oregon to subscribe to all three citation search indices. With the Science Citation Search Index, the Social Sciences Citation Index, and the Arts & Humanities Citation Index, the Web of Science includes over 19 million articles, with 23,000 new articles added each week. Since users can search any combination of indices, they can easily cross disciplines, discovering relationships between, for instance, Milton and buckminsterfullerene (recently discovered stable molecule made of pure carbon) or Demosthenes and superstring theory.

CENTER FOR DISPUTE RESOLUTION: FIRST IN THE NORTHWEST

Environmentalists wanted 31,000 acres. The timber industry was willing to give some — but not that much — in exchange for logging rights elsewhere. Ten years of arguments had produced no decision about Opal Creek. Striving to conclude the issue before his retirement, Senator Mark O. Hatfield turned to Willamette University's Center for Dispute Resolution for help.

The center was founded in 1983 as a place to mediate community conflicts and educate people about resolving disagreements. It was the first dispute resolution center in the Northwest and has since become a national model.

Students of the Center for Dispute Resolution come from Willamette's law and management schools, and sometimes community members join the program. Graduates earn a Certificate in Dispute Resolution after completing rigorous training in negotiation, mediation and arbitration.

The Center for Dispute Resolution's Neighbor to Neighbor program encourages community members to handle disputes themselves rather than resorting to the courts; its training programs on peer mediation help high school students manage and resolve their own conflicts.

Environmentalists, timber companies and scientists — 24 parties in all — came together to form the Opal Creek Working Group, mediated by Willamette's Center for Dispute Resolution, where they could clearly express their positions and discuss various compromises. With the recommendations of the Working Group and other citizen testimonies gathered by the center, Senator Hatfield drafted legislation, which was later adopted, to protect Opal Creek.

FIRST "COLLEGIAN"

The prose was intelligent and vigorous, though often overstated. No indication of the University's financial troubles appeared in its four optimistic pages. A poem headed the first column, followed by editorials and news with a blend of Victorian, collegiate and frontier flavors. Ironic and self-effacing humor mingled with more serious themes. That was the September 1875 "Willamette Collegian," the first issue.

The students had much to say about education. Public schools became the indispensable bastion of freedom: "Without them no republican government can long exist and flourish — with them, ... no tyrant's sway can long continue." One article said educators should be more encouraging and classrooms more pleasant; another praised practice over theory. Students took jibes at pedantry and intellectual vanity, as in the story of a professor driving a carriage downhill, insisting that he, on account of his prodigious knowledge of mathematics and momentum, could handle the carriage better than the horse.

Brief news items reported on school and community events: the new pastor, preparations for the state fair, people traveling back East. Literary societies, then prominent in student life, reported their schedules and elections. Several columns of advertisements helped finance the first newspaper; marketing caps, cakes, crockery, valises, "the finest hotel north of San Francisco," glassware, cigars, lamps, gold pens, loans, pianos and umbrellas.

Willamette students have published the "Collegian" for 124 years now, maintaining the paper as Willamette's primary forum for news and intellectual discussion. Some things have changed, such as focus and writing style; other things are the same, like the umbrellas.

Corporate Matching Gifts

Many individuals are eligible to have their gifts to Willamette matched by an employer or a spouse's employer. The University deeply appreciates the additional support, which increases the impact of an individual's gift while counting toward a membership in the giving societies. The date on which a matching gift is granted may not coincide with Willamette University's fiscal year. This list includes donors whose gifts were matched during 1998-99 (denoted with a + here and throughout the Annual Report) as well as donors who requested matching gifts.

NEW TRADITIONS: FIRST LIGHTING OF THE STAR TREES

It is a tradition 55 years in the making. The class of 1942 planted five Sequoias at the northwest edge of campus; now towering to 125 feet, the trees form a perfect five-pointed star when you look up through the center.

During the fall of 1997, Maynard Drawson and Warren Franklin approached Jim Booth, director of alumni and parent relations, to see if he would be a campus advocate in an effort to light the Star Trees for the holidays. Booth worked with different campus constituents, from grounds crew to donor relations, and began to work on funding for the event that was rapidly approaching. When Dick and Linda Carney, along with several other sponsors, stepped up to offer their help, the idea was made possible. On Dec. 6, 1997, the Star Trees were lit for the first time, a symbol of the relationship between the Salem and Willamette communities.

Sponsors for the event included: Dick and Linda Carney, CFP, Inc.; Elwood's Tree Service; Radio 1490 KBZY; MaPS Credit Union; Boise Cascade; Oregon State Capitol Facilities; Maynard Drawson; Beta Theta Pi fraternity, and Willamette University.
