FALL ISSUE:
1987-88 ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE PRESIDENT

EXCELLENCE FOR ALL SEASONS

Jerry E. Hudson has been president of Willamette University since August, 1980. This Annual Report is his accounting to you, the trustees, alumni, faculty, staff and other friends of Willamette. It reviews Willamette's continuing progress, during 1987-88, in its quest to build on the tradition of excellence with vision to achieve yet higher levels of quality.

The tangible indications of change in our continuing march toward increased excellence were as noticeable this year as the change of seasons. The year 1987-88 was another year of success, a year of which Willamette's constituents can be proud. People, facilities, curriculum and events all deserve praise.

New or improved facilities provide the most visible changes. Smullin Hall, an exciting addition to our academic plant, was dedicated on Alumni Day in May. Named after William B. Smullin '29, it is now headquarters for the departments of Psychology, Mathematics, Computer Science, Economics, Political Science, Sociology and Speech Communication. It has classrooms, laboratories, the computing center and over 40 faculty offices. It incorporates the former library and adjoins Walton Hall, also renovated during the project.

The Mark O. Hatfield Library, now two years old, seems to fit into the campus as if it had always been here. More important, the increased use of the library and its books is testimony to its success. From 1985-86 in the old library, to 1987-88, total circulation increased 58%, to 36,816 checkouts. To support this use, a record 8,293 volumes were added in 1987-88, bringing the collection to 171,559 volumes.

A highlight of the year, blending facilities, people and programs, was the agreement between Willamette and Tokyo International University (TIU) to establish a TIU campus in Salem on property adjacent to our campus. The first phase will be constructed during 1988-89. Willamette and TIU have been sister universities since 1965. Over 1,000 TIU students have spent time at Willamette since then. Every two years since 1973, Willamette students have spent the fall semester in Japan.

Twenty-five, accompanied by Prof. Jim Bjorkquist and Dr. Patricia Bjorkquist, spent fall 1987 there.

The new Salem TIU campus will strengthen our ties and open still more opportunities to students and faculties of both universities. The program is intended to bring 100 students to Salem each year, from April to December. These students will study intensive English during the first semester. Then, if their English is sufficient, they will take courses through our curriculum during their second semester. Willamette students interested in pursuing more intensive coursework in Japanese language or culture will be able to take classes through TIU as well.

The agreement with TIU reflects Willamette's increasing recognition of the significance of international and intercultural education and particularly of our region's ties to the Pacific Rim.

Willamette students now choose among Japanese, Chinese, Russian, French, Spanish and German languages; every year approximately one-third are enrolled in foreign language classes. About 50 percent of our students earn Bachelor of Arts degrees, which require demonstrated competence in a language.

A new sister university agreement with Simferopol State University in Salem's sister city of Simferopol in the Crimea, U.S.S.R., was signed in November. The agreement provides for the exchange of faculty and students between the two universities.

A summer study tour to the East China Institute of Politics and Law in Shanghai, People's Republic of China, was conducted by the Law School in June, 1987, for the fourth year. Of the 27 persons participating, one-third were Willamette law students. Others have been from as far away as Belgium.

Receipt of a grant from the Fred Meyer Charitable Trust both affirmed Willamette's leadership in international education and provides for improvements. Through the three-year project, Willamette will upgrade language laboratories, expand international student scholarships and resource materials and provide conferences, seminars and scholars-in-residence.

The grant will assist Willamette in both its emphasis on Pacific Rim opportunities and its continuing traditional international experiences.

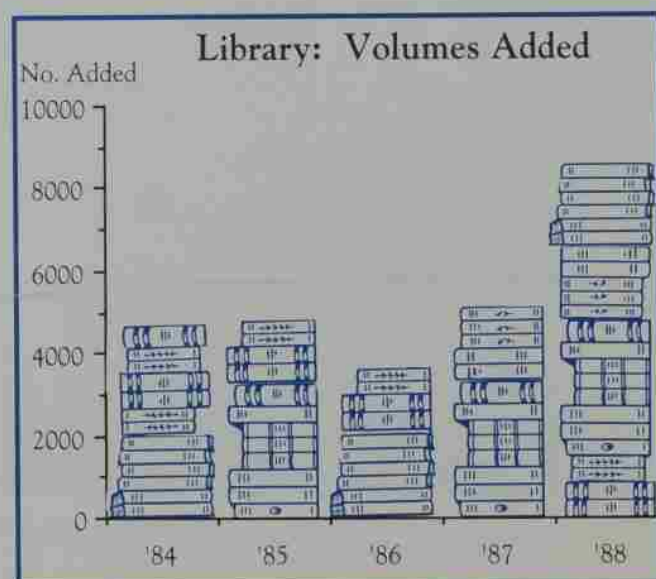

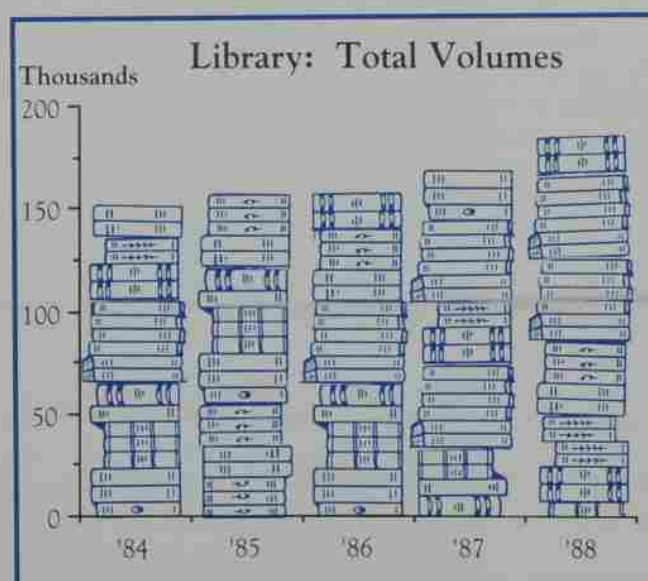

The lifeblood of the University is its people. Directing our attention first to students, we can observe that, statistically, the entering freshman g.p.a. was 3.4, with Scholastic Aptitude Scores averaging 1120 in the fall of 1987. We also had 17 National Merit Scholars, while just five years ago, we had three in our entering class. Faculty members corroborate the quality suggested by these statistics, indicating that these students seem to be brighter, more intellectually curious and more motivated. We have always had excellent students, but we are pleased to be attracting even more of them now.

Willamette students accomplished much in both academic excellence and related activities during 1987-88.

The Willamette Singers, 15-member vocal jazz group directed by Prof. Wallace Long, performed upon invitation at the regional convention of the American Choral Directors Association in Seattle and the Music Educators National Conference in Indianapolis.

Willamette Law School's client counseling team placed first in national competition in New Mexico. Carol McGary and Kevin Hendricks then went on to international competition in London, England, where they placed second.

Forensics students competed with distinction in National Individual Events tournaments. Cyndi Burwell was the Northwest's top qualifier in Extemporaneous Speaking. Karyn Phillips qualified in Expository Speaking.

You can obtain an education in the classroom—and a very fine one at that—but it's the people who make up the Willamette community who give me the real education.

—Shawn Patrick, a biology major class of '89, is from Redmond "where we don't have too many people sitting on the corners reading poetry."

NAIA Scholar/Athlete recognition was earned by six Willamette students: Tracy Thom, women's basketball and soccer, and Donna Kalama, women's basketball, were named for the second year. Others were Sherry Neumeister, swimmer; Richard Ash, men's basketball; Scott Bigham and John Powell, baseball.

To ensure that we challenge our changing students, we have seen an increasing focus by faculty and administrators on strengthening the academic curriculum. More attention has been focused on integrating academics into the life of students and focusing on liberal education as a lifelong pursuit.

As a result, World Views, a new mandatory freshman course was introduced in the fall of 1987. The course started the day students arrived on campus, as an integral part of orientation. It centered on the Humanities, but was taught by 24 faculty members from across the disciplines. Students read works by a variety of authors from the Victorian era, including Dickens, Darwin, Marx and Mill. They discussed how the thoughts and ideas of that time affected the way we think today.

As part of Prof. Sharon Schuman's Craft of Writing class, freshmen reflected on the World Views course:

"Loneliness. No friends. No one even to recognize. I thought college was supposed to be fun...I tentatively approached a group of people eating lunch beneath a tree. I was afraid to join them, but I made myself speak up...All we had in common, really, was the World Views class. So we started to talk about Pygmalion...We were still talking at two o'clock. The only thing we agreed about was that it was going to be hard to write this first college paper. It was. But we weren't alone anymore."

"What was the best book? Just try to get three freshmen to agree on an answer..."

"...it occurred to me that Tagore's world still exists. That day in class we learned from someone who had lived what we were studying, and sometime during that discussion I realized that this must be what education is all about."

In other curricular changes, computer science was offered as a new major in the fall of 1987, replacing the combined computer science-mathematics major. Additional course credits accompanied the name change, but the emphasis remains on ideas and logical thought.

A Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) degree program was approved, to begin fall 1988. The four-year education major will be phased out.

The first endowed chair in the Law School was established and recruitment begun. The chair was named after Thomas B. Stoel, past chairman and life member of the University's Board of Trustees.

Willamette's faculty, administrators, staff and trustees, as well as our students, accomplished much toward achieving excellence and receiving recognition for themselves and for Willamette.

Gordie James was named NAIA District 2 Coach of the Year in his first year at Willamette. He led the men's basketball team to their first outright Northwest Conference title in 28 years.

Several policy changes to recognize and encourage faculty excellence were approved during the year. These include:

- An improved sabbatical leave policy, allowing greater time flexibility and increased support;
- A clearer merit salary increase policy;
- Creation of an Independent Scholar status.

Additional permanent support for innovative academic programs, special faculty development needs and programs of institutional renewal became available this year through a special presidential discretionary program. A $250,000 challenge grant from the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation enabled the university to raise support for this $1 million endowment, which represents yet another resource for Willamette to encourage excellence.

Our alumni also continue to be a great source of pride and support for Willamette, as we follow their achievements and note the positive impact they have made upon our society. The Salem community this year recognized Eric Lindauer L'66 and a Trustee as Salem's First Citizen. Mary Ann Harty MM'87 and Leslie Dana-Frigault MM'87 received the Small Business Institute Award for Oregon from the U.S. Small Business Administration. The award was for outstanding work as consultants to small business while they were GSM students.

I took advantage of its being a liberal arts school and minored in the history of art, an interest I've retained all my life. I also effectively majored in chemistry and math as well as in physics which probably wouldn't have been possible in many other schools.

—Frank N. Bash '59 is Frank N. Edmonds, Jr. Regents professor of astronomy at the University of Texas, Austin.

In trying to summarize 1987-88 we have merely hit the highlights, but capturing the essence is much more difficult. Willamette is a mature institution (it should be since we are approaching the 150th anniversary of its founding) with stability and strength. Our vision is clear: to prepare persons of competence, conscience and commitment for leadership roles.

The excellence with which we achieve this vision is directly related to the united effort of all the university's constituencies. With pride tempered by humility we face the future with confidence and anticipation. Pleased but not satisfied, we solicit everyone's continued cooperation and participation in this partnership of excellence.

Financial Stability Sustains Quality

Willamette University's academic excellence continues to be sustained by the prudent stewardship of our resources. Financial stability was maintained in 1987-88 through prudence and planning, combined with the generous contributions of our alumni and friends.

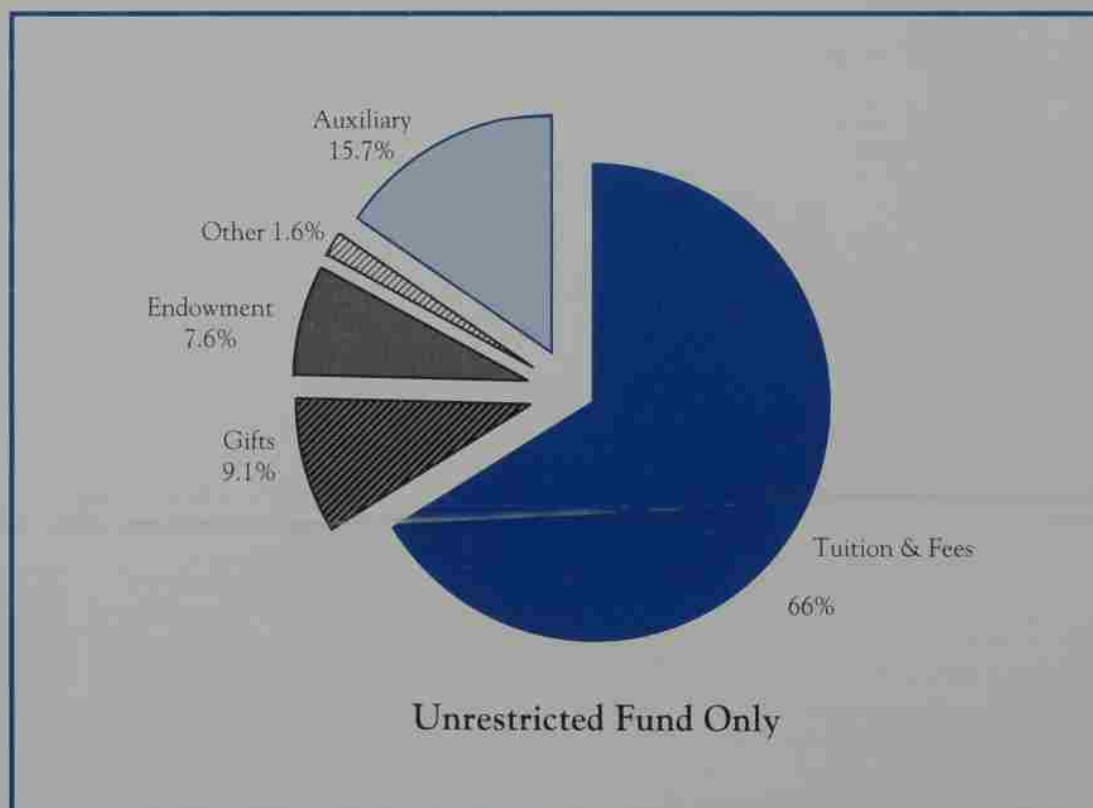

The 1987-88 Annual Gifts Report which begins on page — recognizes the many donors whose support during the year reflects their commitment to Willamette. Thank you for your generous gifts and grants which provided over nine percent of our operating budget and supported special projects that sharpened Willamette's competitive edge. A record number of alumni and friends participated—over 4,500 of you. Among these gifts was the largest unrestricted bequest in the history of Willamette. This $857,000 bequest came from Pauline P. McIntire, widow of Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire '12, who served as President Franklin D. Roosevelt's physician. These gifts help ensure that Willamette can concentrate on excellence and innovation without struggling for financial survival or compromising standards.

The financial statements on pages 16 and 17 provide a thorough picture of changes during the year and the financial condition at year end. But several items stand out in my mind:

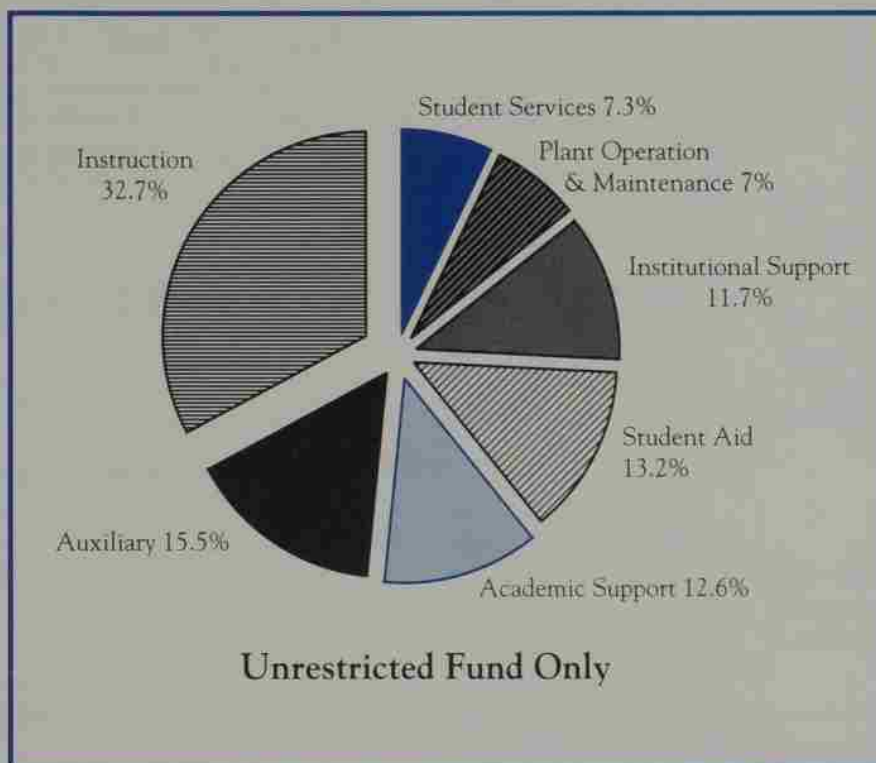

- The University's endowment, which at fiscal year end had a market value of $70 million, contributed $1.89 million in unrestricted income to the operating budget, as well as a substantial sum for various restricted purposes.
- Instruction and academic support cost $10.2 million, our largest unrestricted fund expenditure. Student services and student aid costs were $4.6 million.
- Although our Balance Sheet understates the value of assets, with endowment at book value and buildings at cost, our assets increased by $8.4 million.
- For the eleventh consecutive year, Willamette ended 1987-88 with a balanced operating budget.

With this sound financial base, Willamette can continue to focus confidently on its educational mission.

Annual Gifts Report 1987-88

If money doesn't grow on trees, then where did Willamette University's $7.7 million in gifts and grants for 1987-88 come from?

It came from people who share Willamette's vision for education and who believe that the University can successfully carry out its mission. It came from donors who feel they can accomplish more in partnership with Willamette than they can apart from Willamette.

A record number of alumni, trustees, parents, friends, foundations and corporations contributed to the University this last fiscal year. Over $700,000 was raised through Willamette's Annual Funds, providing critically needed operating revenue for the institution's educational budget.

I am very grateful for each one of you who gave to Willamette University during 1987-88 and for each one of you who volunteered to encourage others to give as well. The strength and progress of the institution is directly related to the value and the trust which you place in it.

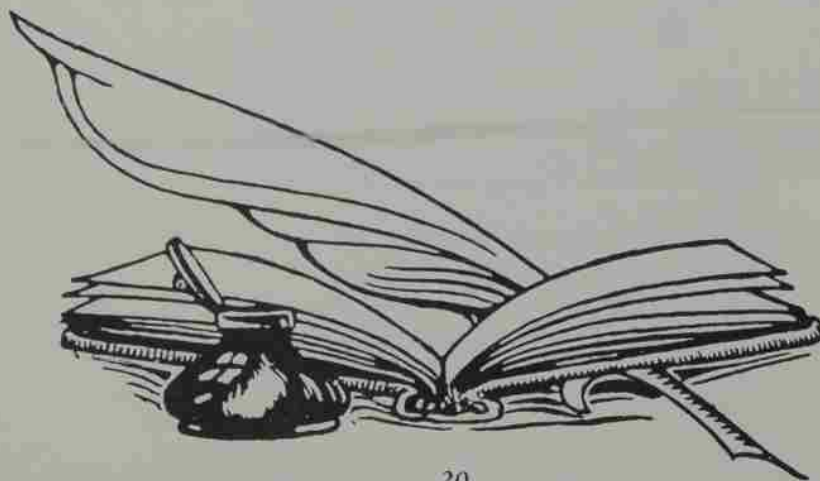

I am also excited by the improvement which your gifts have made possible. Collectively, contributions to Willamette last year helped to balance the operating budget, provide scholarship support for deserving students, build endowment, and improve the physical plant.

Thank you for your partnership with Willamette. The whole is truly greater than the sum of the parts!

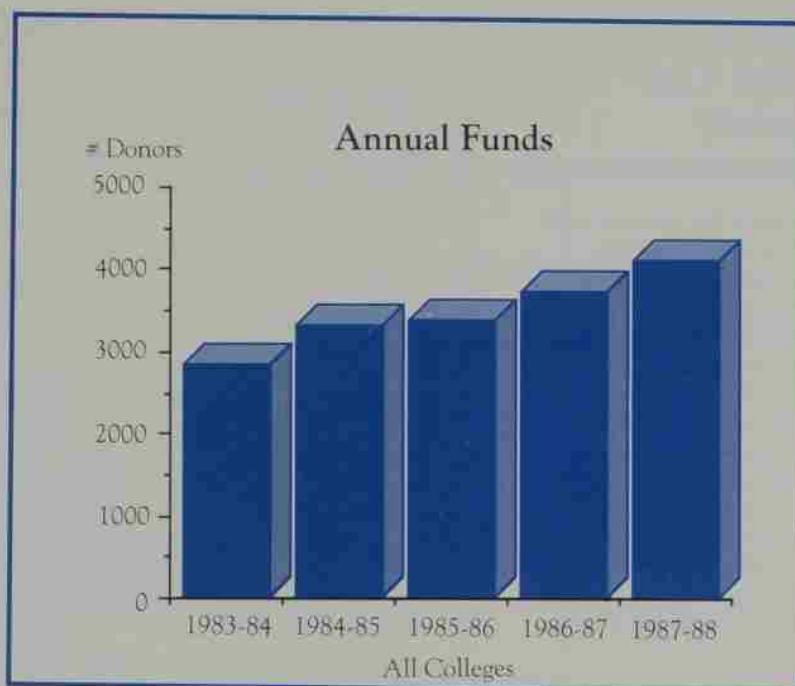

Sincerely,

The Jason Lee Society

The Jason Lee Society is the highest of Willamette's contributing organizations. Named for the principal founder of Willamette University, this organization honors donors who contribute $1,000 or more annually to the University.

Gustavus Hines, an early trustee, tells of the sacrifices that saw "many of the persons cheerfully giving from one-quarter to one-third of all they possessed in the world" that the Oregon Institute, Willamette's forerunner, might be established in 1842. Lee himself made the ultimate sacrifice, dying while traveling in search of financial support. His entire estate was left to the school, and his gift continues to affect the lives of young people attending his beloved school almost 150 years later. This contributing organization honors donors who believe in education and who are committed to supporting their beliefs with major financial gifts. Their gifts reflect the generous sacrifices and commitment of the early pioneers as exemplified by Jason Lee.

The Waller Society

The Waller Society is named for Alvan F. Waller, who carried on the tradition of service and devotion begun by Jason Lee. This society honors those donors who contribute $500 to $999 annually to Willamette. It was Alvan Waller, as a trustee, who bore the responsibility for developing the financial well-being of Willamette as the University grew. It was he who found the funds and supervised the construction of what is now known as Waller Hall, completed in 1867 and the physical cornerstone upon which the University has grown over the years. The Waller Society, like the Waller name in Willamette's history, represents a solid commitment to the financial support of the University and a building block upon which the future of the University can be secured.

The Century Club

The Century Club honors those donors who contribute $100 to $249 annually to Willamette. It is the club in which a tradition of annual giving to the University is built and from which the other contributing organizations flow. As the backbone of donor support for the University, the Century Club represents a most valuable base upon which the future of Willamette will be built.

illamette has prepared people well to face changes in society...and take risks. That's the single greatest benefit Willamette gave me. I'm going to drop everything one of these days and do something different, and I know I can do it.

f a person had a tendency to an arms-length view of community, Willamette certainly challenged that, and still does.

—Mark W. Teppola '60, president of a Portland hardware firm, has served on the boards of numerous community organizations including 1000 Friends of Oregon, the Salvation Army, United Way of Portland, the City of Portland Energy Policy Steering Committee, and the city's business license appeals board. He is also a trustee of Willamette University.

No one goes to college where I come from, and for me it's been rough academically at Willamette. I've stuck it out because of my commitment to myself and to the faculty and other people here who've helped me out. I feel I owe them a lot.

—Hugo Chavez, class of '89 from Los Angeles, plans a career in trial law.

I came to this school to learn about myself, not to "get an education." So I value those moments when—flash!—I learn something about me I hadn't known before.

—Bill Wilkerson, class of '90 humanities major from Boise, one of whose learning projects for 1988-89 is co-managing the campus Bistro.

The school instilled a set of ethical values. Professors and others had a certain moral stance...that affected how they taught. They'd spend just hours with students and have them in their homes. I think all that individual attention probably led me to teach in a private school myself.

—Elvy L. Fredrickson '43 taught mathematics for 34 years at Lewis and Clark College.

I have had many advantages over my peers [at Cornell Law School]... The analytical skills I picked up at Willamette have helped me immensely... But more importantly the writing skills I was taught... lifted me head and shoulders above my peers
