MUSIC AND A LIBERAL EDUCATION

A liberal education is usually taken to include a certain No known guise or trapping familiarity with the sciences, philosophy, history, literature, and the languages. However, even an intimate acquaintance with all That it may come and in its entirety. these fields will not insure that a person will pass for having a liberal education, let alone enjoy the more important things which when one man speaks and another comes from joy and pleasure, those benefits which a liberal education confers. Pouplar opinion has failed to include in its con- And the words that are uttered ception of a liberal education the requirement for a knowledge of And the words that are heard

The purpose of a liberal education is to teach one to be at home A city man stands on a lone hillton in all lands and situations, to enjoy associations with any group, and to thereby be able to live life more fully. A liberal education ought to enable one to see broadly and widely even while confined to the routine of the ordinary daily task. At the same time it should cultivate those desires and habits which will make leisure spirit, moments times of wholesome refreshment for the upbuilding of Which in his heart finds no answer.

Music could without any apologizes be included in the requireare liberally educated. Although to be dogmatic would be entirely contrary to the spirit of liberalism which we desire to advocate we do quote with approval from an article written originally for the Wesleyan University Alumnus by W. E. Woodruff. He wrote:

"I say with confidence and without exaggeration that music should be considered a necessity, not merely a luxury, in the lives of our people. Among all possible agencies for understanding and enjoying the beauties that lie around us, beauties of sound and the loom, beside his fellows—

As a tired man be comes, tired with the thoughts of age

Thus Amos to himself, pondering.

So he comes down to his place

At the loom, beside his fellows—
the thoughts of age

What response shall I make?

What things shall I hold back sight, written music is the readiest, the most adaptable, the most apparent. That a material, bustling age needs much beauty to balance life seems to need no argument. We do not hear its voice Who, eyes lowered, stoops, bending enough, or understand its message enough, or reach the ecstasies of it which ameliorate life's rough places and add to the color of To the passage of threads in lively our joys.'

YEAR ROUND COLLEGE SPIRIT

Now that football and basketball seasons have become matters of history probably we can more soberly consider the subject of college spirit in its truer light. We can forget for a time at least As the young laborer bends to his the high pitched emotional enthusiasm generated in well disciplined mobs under the direction of high strung cheer leaders.
Perhaps we can find a definition for that elusive term known as college spirit. Thomas M. Thompson of Colgate University explained the term in the following manner:

"Without attempting a dictionary definition of college spirit, I should like to suggest something like the following as expressing And with dull eyes cast downward; that much-talked-of, but little-thought-about, concept. College spirit is that background of ideas, ideals and attitudes toward one's alma mater which is the dominating and directing force with the wind still sobbing in his behind all one's acts with respect to her. Such a concept of college spirit gives it tangibility, but its greatest value lies in the fact that it makes college spirit a guiding and directing force in the college life of a student.

Mr. Thompson goes on to suggest that if this definition were more generally accepted that possible library books would be safe; that rowdism would disappear from college campuses; that college students would be distinguished as ladies and gentlemen; and that collige spirit would become a more elevating concept than it is now taken to be.

A WET ARGUMENT

The sun has come out, May Day has passed, and springtime at Willamette is in the height of her glory, soon to pass on to a warmer and more glorious summer. With the passing of these events the campus thirst has been arising apace, and has been inquiring about refreshment. The rise of thirst has been inevitable; the requests for refreshment have been the logical consequence.

As we have observed on former occasions, a graduating class left a drinking fountain on the Campus. As we have further observed, this fountain has fallen into disuse, not because it could not fill a useful place on the Campus, but through neglect. We need not repeat campus opinion as to whose neglect has caused this, for experience with college people—and by this term we do not mean students alone—college people are the champion buckpassers of the world; if not the most adroit, they are at least the most persistent. Neither do we need to point out that this neglect is obscure. Both are as plain as a bandaged nose

However we will repeat the observation that the agitation for the repair of the fountain is becoming more widespread; that the cause for this agitation is just; that, since the fountain must be repaired sometime, it might as well be done now. There is an increasing need for the service that the fountain can render. As the need increases, so will the demand for that service increase.

EDGAR B. PIPER

To be able to select a life work and then to pursue it with success and pleasure is one of the greatest satisfactions which can be the lot of any man. College students which are puzzled when confronted with this problem ought to realize its seriousness.

The death of Edgar B. Piper has been commented on from many different angles but we would like to give another point of view. Several years previous to his death the former editor of the Oregonian wrote, "If I can leave behind me the good opinion of all that I did my best in my chosen profession, and was not lured away from it by mistaken ambitions to be something else . . .

Mr. Piper had early in his career fixed upon the profession of journalism. He found in it material rewards and spiritual satis-

The biography of every notable person has in it something of value and this little sidelight on the life of a great journalist might cause us to pause as we select our vocation or to continue in it with greater effort once we have determined upon it.

May Day was one of the most successful that was ever put on at Willamette. We extend our congratulations to Frank Van Dyke and his assistants who so ably managed the event.

LECTURE

When Dad was a "Modern Youth"

RICYCLES, stereopticon lectures, D and the "gilded" youths with their horses and carts; at night the midnight oil burning in student lamps while the gas lights glared and flickered across the campus—the gay nineties when Dad was in college seem primitive to us to-day. Now it's sport roadsters, the movies, and radios. At night the MAZDA lamp replaces the midnight oil in dormitory rooms, while modern street lighting sheds its friendly glow over the campus.

Without electricity we would have none of these improvements. To-day's marvel of electrical invention becomes to-morrow's accepted utility. In the coming years, by taking advantage of new uses of electricity you will be able to go so much farther that the "tearing twenties" will seem just as primitive as the "gay nineties".

Scientists in the research laboratories of the General Electric Company keep G.E. a leader in the field of electrical progress, Skilled G-E engineers develop each latest invention. The G-E factories carry out the engineers' designs with bigh-quality material and expert workmanship.

LINFIELD TRACK MEN AVENGE OLD DEFEAT

Linfield Takes Early Lead and Gaines Decisive Vitory Over Bearcats

The Linfield track squad fully avenged their defeat of last year, when they decisively beat the Bearcats on May Day by the score of 73 to 53. Flashing unexpected form, Linfield gained the lead early and were never headed throughout the rest of the meet.

Rodgers, Hathaway, and McCormick, proved the main point gatherers for Willamette Rodgers won the ft, 10 in., one half inch from the school record held by Stolzheis. Fred also copped first in the 220 yd. dash and third in the 100 yd. dash. Hathaway easily won the two mile and had enough left to tie for first in the pole vault and take second in the half mile. McCormick had little competition in the mile and took that event in a time of 4 mi. 50 sec. He also took third in the half mile.
