Blazers, degrees bring smiles to grads

Trustees merge undergraduate colleges

For the first time since the turn of the century, Willamette undergraduates will be enrolled in one college this fall.

The Board of Trustees unanimously endorsed President Robert Lisensky's recommendation to merge the College of Music and Theatre with the College of Liberal Arts.

The merger "represents a reaffirmation of the primacy of the commitment to the liberal arts and the close integration of any undergraduate professional training with the liberal arts," according to a majority opinion of a special task force requested by the faculty to study the issue.

The President offered academic, administrative and financial reasons for the merger, and indicated that it would not diminish the fine quality of the music and theatre programs. The degrees remain the same. No changes in personnel are anticipated and membership in the National Association of Schools of Music will not be affected.

Students will continue to have two degree options in the professional music program—Bachelor of Music and Bachelor of Music Education. The Bachelor of Theatre remains unchanged as well.

"This merger really expresses the true nature of our undergraduate program," said Lisensky. "When theatre was added to the College of Music in 1973, the educational objective of the combined College of Music and Theatre was to be an undergraduate professional school in the context of the liberal arts tradition."

He noted that many recent music and theatre graduates have not been exposed to the liberal arts to a meaningful extent. The College has shown less involvement in serving the liberal arts students while giving much more attention to the professional program. We need a better balance, he said.

When Lisensky first announced his merger recommendation last April, several faculty and students in music and theatre voiced opposition, particularly over their lack of involvement in discussing the issue. Dissatisfaction with the recommendation led to the formation of an eight-member task force of faculty, students, trustees, and an administrator.

"The merger should encourage more efficient administration, better use of resources, and expedite the planning of programs."

After meeting seven times for 34 hours and taking testimony from over 25 people, the task force endorsed the merger by a 5-3 margin as "enriching the total undergraduate program."

The minority report of the task force suggested that some desirable changes could be made to facilitate the integration of the undergraduate programs short of "the extreme measure of merger."

The task force majority supported Lisensky's move for a more integrated undergraduate curriculum, indicating that "more encouragement should be given to music and theatre students to take more courses in liberal arts and for liberal arts students to have more exposure to and appreciation of the performing arts."

The majority also sees a "more feasible administrative structure," adding that "it should also encourage more efficient administration, better use of resources, and expedite the planning of programs."

In considering the issue, the Trustees talked about the strength and reputation Willamette has in music and theatre. It was noted that enrichment in program, enrollment and facilities has taken place in the past four years, and "we need to enhance, protect and build on these strengths," said William Webber, long-time member of the Trustee Committee on Music and Theatre.

Another Trustee asked if the decision would have an effect on enrollment. None was anticipated, and since the June 14 decision, the admissions office has received no reaction from prospective students in music and theatre. "We reported the Trustee's decision to the 40 students who have paid their deposits and seven others who are pending. In over two weeks we haven't had a single reaction," said Admissions Director Frank Meyer.

Meyer was a member of the task force, along with history professor George McCowen (chairman), music professor Bruce McIntosh, graduate professor Kent Butler, students Gary Thede (ASWU President) and Craig Strobel (theatre), alumnus Sue Juba '52 and Trustee Joan McNamara '59.

Professor Emeritus
Ivan Lovell

History alum funds Lovell Scholarship

A former senior scholar in history who is "sold on the importance of a good liberal arts education" has found a unique way of saying "thank you."

Mark Teppola '60 and his wife Melody have established The Dr. Ivan Lovell History Scholarship Fund in honor of the emeritus history professor who served at Willamette from 1937-66.

Their intent is to provide an annual scholarship for "history majors of exceptional scholarly promise." Initially the Teppolas are providing $500 awards while building an endowed fund of $20,000. The awards will eventually be $1,000 or greater as the fund grows.

Teppola, who is associated with the National Hardware Co. in Portland, believes a liberal arts education provides an excellent background for entry into any profession or business. He appreciates his Willamette education in general and his history background in particular.

"Dr. Lovell is a super person and a great history professor. I have tremendous respect for him and wanted to express my gratitude to him and Willamette in this way," said Teppola.

First recipient of the Lovell Scholarship is Judy Relaford, a 4.0 student from Salem, Oregon.

Another new scholarship fund has its first recipient also. Kirsten Fedje, a senior music major from Honolulu, was awarded the Catherine Covert Music Scholarship. Friends and relatives of Cathi Covert established the scholarship in her memory after she was killed en route from the campus to a student teaching assignment in Salem last fall.

Margaret Mead due to speak August 31

World famous American anthropologist Margaret Mead will conclude the Opening Days program for new students with a speech at 8:00 p.m. Wednesday, August 31 in Smith Auditorium.

The 76-year-old author, ethnologist, and social critic will launch Willamette's fall convocation series. Her address is open to the public and comes the night before classes begin.

The Opening Days orientation program starts August 28. Over 450 new students are expected on campus this fall, a slight increase over last year. Parents of new students will have an abbreviated orientation program Sunday afternoon, Aug. 28.

Other distinguished speakers due on campus this fall include Alan Payton, South African author and civil rights leader; William Stringfellow, theologian and lawyer; Paul Bomoni, ambassador to the U.S. from Tanzania; Elie Wiesel, Jewish author; Roy Basler, an Abraham Lincoln scholar; and Betty La Duke, Oregon artist, feminist, and recent visitor to the People's Republic of China.

Students win $1,000 for conservation ad

The slogan "Don't Let Oregon's Future Go Down the Drain" was used by Willamette students to win the seventh annual college advertising competition sponsored by the Portland Advertising Federation.

Their efforts earned $1,000 in scholarship money for the University.

This was the first entry by Willamette in the competition which included teams from Warner Pacific, Southern Oregon, University of Portland, Portland State, and seven-time winner University of Oregon.

Radio and TV spots of 10, 40 and 60 seconds were part of the package, along with the proposed use of a printed flyer to be included with utility bills.

The campaign was aimed at showing Oregonians what they can do to help alleviate drought conditions. The Portland Advertising Federation has hired KGW-TV in Portland to produce the commercials for airing on local TV and radio stations.

New rules set for occupancy, rush

All Greek and special interest living organizations on campus must maintain occupancy at a minimum 80 percent of capacity to retain special housing privileges.

The new policy was approved this spring by the executive board of the trustees after extensive campus discussions and recommendation.

Another stipulation limits Greek rush to the orientation period before classes begin starting with the Fall of 1979.

Living organizations falling below the 80% occupancy level in a given year will have one year in which to boost membership. If the minimum requirement is not met in the second year, the living space may be reallocated by the Student Affairs Committee. Percentages are based upon fall figures following rush.

At present, 12 groups could be affected by the ruling, six fraternities, four sororities and two special interest groups. Last fall the occupancy figures were as follows: FRATERNITIES—Beta Theta Pi, 92%; Delta Tau Delta, 81%; Kappa Sigma, 100%; Phi Delta Theta, 84%; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 100%; and Sigma Chi, 72%. SORORITIES—Alpha Chi Omega, 83%; Alpha Phi, 70%; Delta Gamma, 99%; and Pi Beta Phi, 85%. OTHERS—International Studies House, 80% and Lausanne intensive study group, 100%.

Three seminars open to frosh

Three interdisciplinary seminar options, each approaching the liberal arts from a different perspective, are offered to freshmen this fall.

Each of the seminars will be team taught by four faculty members and each will carry two credits for the eight hours a week of class time.

One seminar, "Great Ideas of the Western World," will consider ideas which Renovation of the old music building into a very functional art facility is proceeding smoothly. The east wing of the fine arts building is also taking on a new interior look to accommodate eight music teaching studios and 19 practice rooms. The work is all part of about a $300,000 project due for completion before a grand opening in early September. Special appeal of the art facility is the exposed brick and large wood beams uncovered in the remodeling. At left, workmen check wiring in the loft gallery area. Below, the exposed brick shows well in the graphics room on the main level. Space allocation in the art have had profound impact on our civilization. Among some of the authors to be explored are Plato, Aristotle, Dante, Locke, Shakespeare, Marx, Freud, and others.

Another choice, "Science and Society," will explore the interactions among science, technology and society through selected historical and contemporary case studies.

The third, "Human Creativity," will focus on the evolution of human creativity in Western culture since the Renaissance. A variety of artistic media will be explored, including studio art, literature, theatre and music.

Participation in the seminars is optional for freshmen.

Renovation grant aids law library

First-year law students will be the primary beneficiaries of a recent law library renovation grant.

The Ben B. Cheney Foundation of Tacoma has given the College of Law $35,000 to turn a 40 x 60 basement storage area under the law annex into a research center. The research center will be designed specifically to facilitate teaching legal research and writing skills to first-year students.

An additional $20,000 must be raised to provide necessary equipment for the project. A completion target of September 1, 1977 has been set.

The added space of 63 seats helps the school comply with the requirement of the American Association of Law Schools to provide seating for at least 65% of the full time enrollment.

Another foundation grant helps the undergraduate library. The W. W. Kellogg Foundation has given $8,000 to enable the library to join the Ohio College Library Center. This center features the largest and most successful computerized cataloging system in the U.S. with a growing data base of over six million entries.

Willamette has a CRT terminal (combination TV screen and typewriter keyboard) linked by phone lines to the Ohio system. Data are entered by the terminal and the OCLC provides packs of catalog cards by mail, produced according to library specifications, with headings already typed, sets interfiled and alphabetized. This eliminates a great deal of clerical work.

One other feature of the system enhances interlibrary loans. Entry of a title through the terminal will yield location symbols of those libraries which own the title.

Bearcat teams high in final standings

Willamette athletic coaches hardly had time to savor their success in 1976-77 before agonizing over recruitment prospects.

For the record, the Willamette women's teams successfully defended their WCIC All-Sports trophy, nosing out Lewis & Clark by one point. The Bearcat women have won the award three straight years and were helped by a fifth straight softball title and seconds in track and tennis.

The men's teams were in contention for the NWC all-sports trophy until their basketball title was taken away on a fluke. Pacific declared an ineligible player after the season which gave Linfield two forfeit wins and the title, dropping Willamette into a tie for second with Pacific Lutheran. PLU went on to win the All-Sports trophy and Willamette finished third.

The men's spring showing was a second in golf, third in baseball, fourth in tennis and seventh in track (when injuries cut into sprint depth).

On the recruiting front, the overall prospects are good for both men's and women's teams. Women's athletic director Fran Howard is "impressed" with the interest and apparent quality of the new women athletes. Men's athletic director Tommy Lee said that "our coaches are all encouraged by the interest in Willamette."

Lee's football team has an unusually favorable homestand this season. Seven of the ten contests will be played at McCulloch, including the season-opening alumni game Sept. 10. Other home games are Chico State, Sept. 17; Pacific Lutheran, Oct. 1; Pacific, Oct. 8; Rocky Mountain College, Oct. 15; Lewis & Clark, Oct. 22; and College of Idaho, Nov. 5. Away games are Humboldt State (Arcata), Sept. 24; Linfield, Oct. 29; and Whitworth, Nov. 12.

Two Bearcats made some ripples with professional teams. All-American end Gary Johnson, this year's Booth Award recipient, was signed as a free agent by the Seattle SeaHawks of the NFL.

The Portland Trail Blazers invited 'Cat all-star guard Tony Hopson to their summer rookie camp of 15 players, but the 6-0 floor general was deemed "too short" despite scoring 16 points and playing well in the camp closing intersquad game.

Once again the world champion Trail Blazers will hold their fall camp at Sparks Center on campus. The Sept. 20-28 camp will be closed to the public.

building has sculpture and ceramics studios in the basement along with offices and work areas for welding, grinding, woodworking, plaster casting, and glazing. In addition to graphics on the main level, the space will feature the main lecture room, a seminar room, slide room, work area, rest-rooms and office. The third level features the main design studio, painting room and a studio-office, while the top level is reserved for the art gallery. An elevator and new stairway provide easy access to all areas. President plans administrative shifts

Several administrative affairs were announced by President Lisensky this spring to respond to growing external pressures.

Lisensky said "business as usual is not possible at the University" in light of the following pressures:

- potential enrollment losses because of population declines;
- greater difficulty in finding operational income because of more competition for philanthropic dollars;
- reductions in state and federal funds; and
- less interest in the values of higher education.

"Administrative structures must reflect a commitment to new priorities," he said in announcing administrative changes over the next two years.

In what Lisensky called "a transitional year," Dr. Larry Large, formerly Vice President for Student Affairs, becomes Vice President for Administration. He will assume the major task of budget development and supervise admissions, registrar, financial aid, and intercollegiate athletics in addition to his previous student affairs supervision.

As Large relieves some of the burden of budget making, Lisensky will assume greater responsibility for University-centered academic programs.

Lance Haddon has been promoted from Director of University Housing to Dean of Students to supervise housing, security, University Center, and university scheduling.

In the second year of reorganization, Lisensky said he would be working to develop a structure for 1978-79 to:

- (1) integrate academic programs and resources of the colleges;
- (2) expand and enrich our programs in continuing education;
- (3) improve our fund-raising capabilities; and
- (4) encourage the Board of Trustees to become better informed and committed to the University.

He hopes to appoint a Vice President for Academic Affairs for more centralization. Lisensky would then shift more personal attention to development and external relations, with special focus on the state legislature, Oregon Independent Colleges Association, and the Willamette Board of Trustees.

Harvey's resignation among staff changes

Besides structure changes in administration, several personnel changes have taken place.

Law Dean Larry K. Harvey has resigned effective August 31 to become special assistant to the Idaho Attorney General for appellate work. Harvey has served at the College of Law for nine years, the past six as Dean. While a search committee seeks a replacement for 1978, professor Carlton Snow will serve as Dean this next academic year. He served as associate dean under Harvey from 1973-76.

In an effort to bolster student recruitment, particularly with alumni assistance, Alumni Director Teresa Krug Hudkins '69 becomes the Assistant Director of Admissions. She will continue to work closely with Alumni Clubs, the Parents' Council, and other alumni volunteers to assist in the recruitment process. Former Alumni Director and present Associate Director of Development John Simmons will assume responsibility for the Alumni Relations program and continue to direct the annual funds. He will also direct Church Relations with Chaplain Phil Hanni and perform additional development duties.

In the student affairs area, Sally Howell has been named Director of the University Center with responsibility for the centralized scheduling of all non-classroom buildings. She formerly served as administrative assistant.

Also in student affairs, searches are in progress for two positions, one a replacement and one new post. The replacement is for Jo Siebert who resigned as Assistant Dean of Students/Assistant Director of University Residences. The new position is Director of Security to implement a new campus security program.

In the graduate schools, searches are in progress for an administrative assistant to the law dean and a Director of Admissions and Placement for the Atkinson School of Administration. The former is a replacement for Jerry Todd '72 L'75 who has resigned effective August 31. The latter is a new position.

Five faculty named, two positions open

Five of seven faculty vacancies have been filled for the 1977-78 academic year. Two of the full-time appointments are in law, four in liberal arts and one vacancy remains in the Atkinson School of Administration.

One of the appointments is unusual. A husband-wife duo has been appointed to team teach one of two openings in sociology. A search continues to respond to the late resignation of sociology assistant Cullen Hayashida. Other replacements are in chemistry and music.

Two other faculty members have received regular appointment after serving one-year assignments this past year. They are Amy Barlow, Associate Professor of Music (violin), who had replaced Charles Heiden, and D. Scott Glasser, Assistant Professor of Theatre, who was a visiting professor last year.

Following are the new appointments:
Law—James A. R. Nafziger, Assoc. Prof. B.A. Univ. of Wisconsin, 1962; J.D. Harvard Law School, 1967; M.A. Univ. of Wisconsin, 1969; Visiting Prof. of Law, University of Oregon since 1974. (Replaces Clayton Patrick who resigned to enter private practice.)

Law—Kathy Todrank Graham, Asst. Prof. A.B. Univ. of Cal. Berkeley, 1969; J.D. Univ. of Cal. Davis, 1972; Legal Dept., Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in Calif. (Fills vacancy as Carlton Snow becomes Dean for 1977-78.)

Chemistry—David E. Goodney, Asst. Prof. B.A. Austin College, 1971; Ph.D. Univ. of Hawaii at Manoa, 1976; Asst. Oceanographer at Manoa this past year. (Replaces Robert McQuate who accepted a research position with the Food and Drug Administration, Washington, D.C.)

Sociology—(team) W. Randall Ireson, Asst. Prof. B.A. Stanford, 1966; M.S. (1972) and Ph.D. (1976) Cornell Univ.; Asst. Prof. of Sociology, Univ. of Albuquerque.

Carol J. Ireson, Asst. Prof. B.A. Stanford, 1967; Ph.D. Cornell Univ., 1975; Asst. Prof. of Sociology and Women's Studies, Pomona College. (They fill vacancy left by Charles Garth.)

Music—Mary Anne Rees, Asst. Prof. B.M. (1974) and M.M. (1977) Indiana University; Associate Instructor in Music, Indiana Univ. (Replaces Stanley Butler, who retired.)

By-law revisions aid trustee effectiveness

By-law revisions to more clearly define the responsibilities and improve the effectiveness of the Board of Trustees were approved by the Board June 14.

Faculty and student representation was approved, and the committee system was reorganized.

A faculty member and student from each of the three colleges may be elected by their governing groups to attend and participate in the meetings. In recent years faculty and student attendance has been by invitation. These representatives will share in discussion, but will not vote.

Seven of the eight standing committees shall have two faculty and two students appointed by their appropriate governing boards. Faculty/student committee members have discussion rights, but no vote or motion privilege. The Committee on Financial Affairs won't have faculty or student representatives, but that Committee will meet annually with student/faculty and administrative representatives from the University budget study committee.

Each committee is required to meet at least three times during the year. A new rotation system has been adopted for committee assignments and chairmanships. Assignments will be for a period of three years or less.

A new Committee on Organization is charged with evaluating annually the effectiveness of individual trustees and the Board as a whole. It will also work with the President and staff in recruiting new trustees and orient them to the particular responsibilities of trusteeship. "Continuing education" for all trustees will also fall under this new committee—the development of workshops, seminars, and/or retreats to improve effectiveness.

A former Committee on Campus Religious Life will become a subcommittee of Student Affairs. It "shall develop broad policy in the area of religious life in the University community."

Another new committee on University Academic Affairs will integrate University policies between colleges.

The Executive Committee of the Board has been increased from 15 to 18 and is required to meet in December, April and July. That means that either the Board or the Executive Committee will be meeting every other month.

Shakespearean visit, eclipse trips set

Openings are still available for two continuing education programs for alumni and friends.

Visit the Ashland Shakespearean Festival for six plays in four days, August 12-15. A fee of $80 per person includes three nights lodging (at Southern Oregon State College), all breakfasts, tickets to the six plays, a backstage tour of the outdoor theatre, and a post-play discussion with the cast of Measure for Measure.

The other three Shakespeare plays are Merchant of Venice, Antony and Cleopatra, and Henry VI, Part Three. Two additional plays are Tennessee Williams' Streetcar Named Desire and Richard Brinsley Sheridan's The Rivals.

Call the alumni office (503) 370-6356 if you would like to join English professor Bill Braden and other Willamette folks for this tour.

See the solar eclipse at Bogota and enjoy a two-week tour of other South American sights with physics and astronomy professor Maurice Stewart October 8-21. If you haven't received the brochure which details this first class study-tour, call or write the alumni office today.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Crash claims sophomore

An auto crash March 14 claimed the life of Willamette sophomore Timothy Gesser of Honolulu and sent sophomore Bobby Lee to the hospital. A memorial plaque is planned for Lee House, Gesser's residence at the time of his death.

He was the second Willamette student traffic victim of the school year. Senior Cathi Covert was struck October 13 while riding her bike.

Fire hits Delt house

A malfunction in the recharging of a calculator caused a $5,000 fire in a room of the Delta Tau Delta house April 19. There were no injuries, but sophomores Dick Jensen and Evan Hamilton lost most of their personal belongings in the fire that was contained to one study room.

Oct 21-23 set for parents

Parents' Weekend dates have been set for October 21-23 this fall. The theatre department has scheduled the musical "Zorba" that weekend and October 14-16. The other fall theatrical production is Henry Ibsen's "A Doll's House" scheduled November 11-13 and 16-19.

Communications explored

The possibility of an interdisciplinary program in communications is being explored this summer by a campus committee and several guest experts in the field.

Among the short range of possibilities are offering some basic courses in communications arts and mass media, organizing already existing courses around communications sub-areas, and structuring internships in major communications fields.

The feasibility of developing a concentration area in the field which could develop into a major field of study is also being considered.

"D" grade returns

The "D" has returned to the undergraduate grading structure. The faculty voted this spring to reinstitute the "D" after a two-year period with A, B, C, P (for classes taken on a pass/fail basis) and N (no credit).

Earlier the faculty had voted to establish the plus and minus for further refinement of grading. An A- is worth 3.7 on the point scale and B+ is worth 3.3, for example. With the D worth 1.0 and D+ worth 1.3, the faculty also established a 2.0 cumulative grade point average as minimal for graduation.

'77 wins third Glee

The class of 1977 won the 69th renewal of Freshman Glee in March, its third Glee triumph in four years. Nearly 350 students participated in the class competition. The seniors scored 80 points, followed by the juniors with 62, freshmen with 60 and the sophomores, who had to wade the Mill Race, with 50.

Coming unglued has its benefits
if you recognize your LIFE
IN TRANSITION and respond creatively to potential future choices

by Ord Elliott
Assistant Professor
Atkinson School of Administration

Have you experienced an "identity crisis" lately? And if you have, would you be willing to discuss it the next time you invite friends for dinner? There are those who delight in any opportunity to discuss (or even create) multiple personal problems for any willing ear. Still, others (and this I believe includes the majority) are loathe to acknowledge to even themselves the uneasy feeling that often accompanies life transitions. A transition is defined as the process whereby a changing individual in interaction with a changing environment crosses the gap between one life phase and another.

A recent college alumni magazine included the following anonymous quotation: "I just turned 32 yesterday. I'm waiting to be considered for partner in a law firm and I'm bored as hell. My wife graduated from her EST course and left with the kids. I see them every third weekend. At college, no one explained this was possible. Why am I writing this? Because believe it or not, classmates, in lucid moments I realize my situation isn't so bad. I've discovered that I can just quit my job. My wife and I were thoroughly fatigued with each other. I've lost weight, quit smoking, and every so often I feel something new building—a fresh breeze. And for the first time, the very first, there's a dash of humor, real humor, because I've been there."

This person is probably experiencing a transition. According to Gail Sheehy, popular author of Passages: Predictable Crises in Adult Life, this particular kind of transition occurs during "the catch-thirties" (usually between the ages of 28 and 32). At this stage, life commitments to career or family are made, broken, or renewed.

Obviously, individuals don't always change their careers, and couples don't always break up during the catch-thirties, but some type of questioning does typically occur. This may lead to a different understanding of one's career aspirations or of a relationship and, in many cases, a renewed commitment. Even so, the passage through such a transition may be stormy and frustrating. Careers including the career of homemaker come under the same kind of uneasy scrutiny during this period.

And later, during the predictable mid-life crisis of the forties, careers and relationships are subject to a similar questioning disequilibrium, which can also lead to greater self-discovery and renewed enjoyment of life.

The importance of Gail Sheehy's book is not in the originality of her findings but in the legitimacy her bestseller lends to the hard reality that most of us can expect to experience adult crises that have implications for careers, marriages, hobbies, friends, and ultimately acceptance and appreciation of oneself. So don't be surprised if a friend casually comments to you, "I think I feel my midlife crisis coming on," in the same tone that he or she might describe the onset of a flu attack.

As a culture we have tended not to acknowledge the obvious truth that life is full of such transitions. In so doing the atmosphere surrounding change is all the more difficult for individuals in transition because they feel it is an admission of weakness or fault to openly acknowledge their particular crisis.

"... most of us can expect to experience adult crises that have implications for careers, marriages, hobbies, friends ..."

Many universities and especially professional schools are playing a strategic role in the attitudinal change that must necessarily accompany a new and more accurate view of people in transition. Chiefly, this involves universities which are willing to accept and in many cases actively search for women and men who are in their thirties, forties, or beyond who are making significant changes in their career orientations.

For example, this includes among others: (1) housewives who want now to develop professional skills in administration or law; Ginny Vance, 38, mother and former housewife and presently a student in the joint Law/Graduate School of Administration program, has this to say about her transition into professional training.

"I was 35 when I decided to go to graduate school. I felt the need to refocus my life energies because my children were outgrowing their need for me. Since starting work on my professional degrees, my perspective has changed; my self respect has grown and I feel that I am a fuller person. That comes back and helps me in relation to my children. They experience me differently; I'm more interesting to them as a person, and crowd their lives less because I realize they need room to grow."

A second group includes people already in careers who want to shift to entirely new ones, such as a policeman who has his eye on public management or a classical guitarist who decides to become a geologist.

Falling in this category is Mike Marsh, 26, a former Marine officer, and currently a first year student in the GSA. Mike says of his transition from the military, "I was at the point where I had to decide whether to make the military a career. I visited Washington, D.C., where I talked to Senator Mark Hatfield about careers in public administration. He and his aide, Gerry Frank, both recommended the Atkinson School of Administration. I was feeling that I couldn't reach my full management potential in the Marine Corps, and I wanted more formal education in working with people to get the job done. I really enjoyed my leadership experience in the Marine Corps and feel that leadership skills gained at GSA are applicable to any profession, public or private. The GSA focus on both sectors makes it easier to decide which way to go, government or business, in the future."

Claricy Smith, 31, former program administrator with HEW, represents a third transition group, those people already in careers they want to continue who also desire to augment their current skills to be able to perform their present job more effectively, or to open new vistas in a different department or organization, or even sector (government to business for example).

"I came to Willamette in the joint Graduate School of Administration/Law Program to enable me to make future employment moves between the public and private sectors. I needed the research and quantitative skills to enhance my work in the public sector as well as to become a viable candidate for a career in private industry or law. I like to go where the action is fastest for my skill level, and I think that the next step for me is in the private sector. I can see there the challenge for a definite and certain responsibility subject to more objective measures," said Smith.

All too frequently, individuals in transition tie themselves in knots with the stress that often accompanies major changes in orientation. As a result, they miss an opportunity to learn more about themselves and quite possibly to alter their careers or lifestyles in a measurable and beneficial way.

Believe it or not, coming "unglued" has its benefits. The trick in turning discomfort into success lies in the recognition that, when in transition, individuals are also in a unique position to evaluate their particular state of affairs. The energy invested in "woe is me" soliloquies can be redirected toward more effective reflection on personal insights and potential future choices. This refocused thinking has an impact on the degree of stress felt, too. By concentrating on creative problem-solving rather than the turmoil inherent in transitions, the degree of stress can be significantly reduced.

Here again, it is important for universities to assist individuals in transition by encouraging them when appropriate to take the risk associated with shifting career choices, and then supporting their academic endeavors in an environment that may seem quite strange initially after many years away from it. There are gains for everyone in a classroom enriched by the varied perspectives of several age groups.

It is no surprise, then, that both the Graduate School of Administration and the College of Law at Willamette actively encourage individuals in transition who are interested in new career directions to participate in their respective educational programs.

Ord Elliott is a graduate of Princeton and Purdue. He teaches organizational behavior and theory, development, and communication.

The Atkinson School offers management courses part-time for "people in transition"

Individuals in transition may wish to consider the Atkinson School's part-time program in management study. Courses are offered to men and women at noon, in late afternoon and evening. Persons seeking the Master of Administration degree, as well as those who wish to study particular subjects without aspiring to a degree, may enroll.

Students pursuing the degree should enroll in two of the core "tracks" listed below.* The courses in each "track" are scheduled for the same day(s) and hours throughout the year.

Scheduling in 1978-1979 will permit a different set of core courses to be completed during the noontime, late afternoon and evening hours.

After one semester of work in the core, the part-time degree student may enroll in certain advanced courses with the consent of the instructor.

Additional advanced courses may be scheduled during the evening hours.

Part-time study is well-established at the Atkinson School, which has developed policies and procedures designed to encourage part-time degree and non-degree work. Forty-three students were enrolled on a part-time basis in the 1976 fall term, 29 in the spring term just concluded.

Employed students attend classes with full-time students. The part-time student enjoys all of the facilities, advising, placement and other services provided for full-time students.

All part-time students pay the tuition fee of $104 per credit hour enrolled. Those pursuing the M.Ad. degree must meet regular admission requirements; others may enroll by paying the fee and meeting any course prerequisites.

With one exception, a bachelor's degree is required for admission to the Master of Administration program. Willamette University graduates may be admitted at the beginning of the senior year. Under a new "3-2 Program," Willamette students can obtain the bachelor's and master's degrees in a total of five years rather than the normal six.

Majors in social sciences, humanities, natural sciences, and other fields are eligible to apply for admission to the degree program.

Persons interested in enrolling in part-time or full-time study may obtain more information about degree requirements, admission procedures and course prerequisites, as well as a complete schedule of courses and course descriptions, by writing to:

ALUMNI DAY

Over 700 alumni return for reminiscing . . .

Oregon Secretary of State Norma Paulus L'62 joined several hundred other alumni May 7 in reminiscing. In addressing the banquet audience of 450 she noted that her law degree was the most significant factor in her political career. "It gave me instant credibility and I'm very indebted to Willamette," she said. The banquet honored five Alumni Citation recipients (see page 10), 36 members of the class of 1927 who received their 50-year Matthews Medallions, and 33 alumni of '52 who received 25-year Luther Medallions. President Bob Lisensky awards a medallion to Elizabeth Silver Armstrong, Coos Bay, while Prof. Emeritus Chester Luther gives one to Jim Garrett, Portland.

An ice cream social in the quad was one of several events attracting alumni and family of graduates for Alumni/Commencement Weekend. Robbi D'Anneo (center) '77 is joined by her family from San Francisco to "make your own sundae."

"Down the years its portals open Gathered wise ones to its fold . . ."

Many of those "wise ones" of the alma mater The Old Historic Temple returned May 7 to renew the friendships of "Dear Old School, our W.U.!"

So many, in fact, that over 50 alumni without reservations were turned away from the Alumni Banquet which capped a busy day of activities and reunions.

"The reunion committees did a fantastic job," said alumni director Teresa Hudkins, who noted the largest return ever for Alumni Day, over 700.

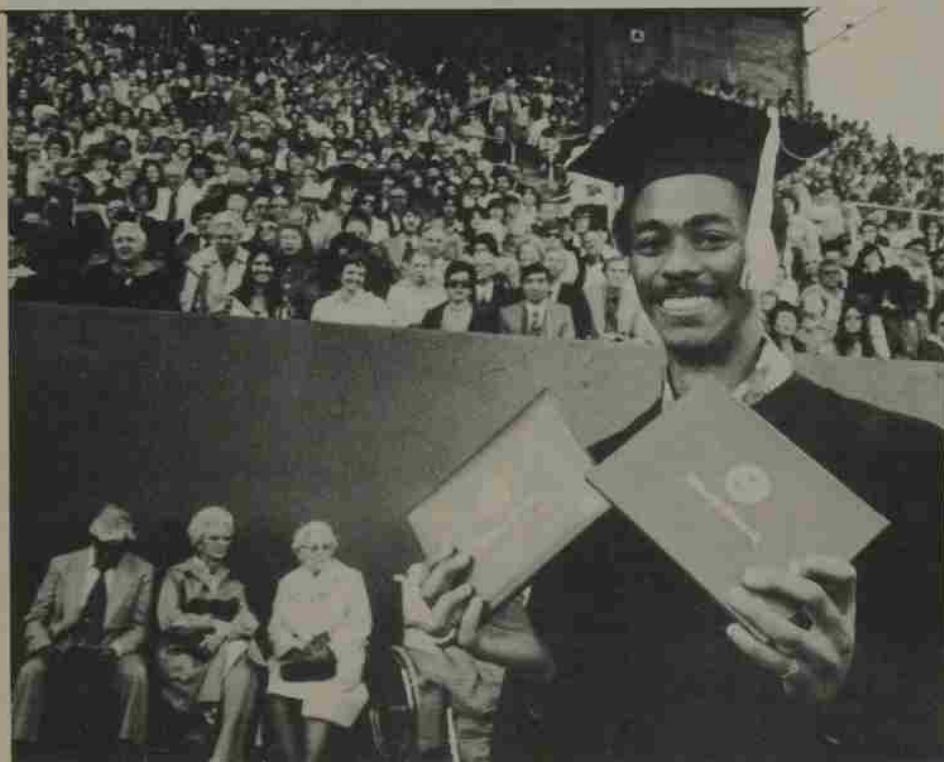

In between reminiscence, many of the weekend guests participated in an Alumni Leadership Seminar, tennis tournament, campus tours, ice cream social, and various receptions.

The 50-year and 25-year classes drew special attention because of the Matthews and Luther Medallion presentations at the banquet, but members of other reunion classes weren't short of people to converse with.

The "spirit of '72" lured over 100 for a luncheon reunion, while the law class of the same vintage drew over 75 a week later at the Oregon Coast. At the other extreme, the Half Century Club (pre 1927) had 33 signed up, while between 50 and 90

... and 365 graduates commence rejoicing

Smiling faces were everywhere May 8 for Commencement under the sun at McCulloch Stadium. Ronald Gallman (far left) was doubly happy for receiving two degrees. The New Bern, N.C. graduate earned two Bachelors degrees, one in music and the other in music education.

Another musician with a big smile was Stanley Butler (left), joining the emeritus ranks after serving 27 years tutoring aspiring pianists and teaching music history. A reception in his honor was held on Alumni Day along with formal recognition of his emeritus rank at Commencement. Butler served as chairman of the music division this past year. He and his wife Celia are looking forward to traveling in the years ahead.

Two of the 365 degrees awarded this year went to the Gruber family. In a rare occurrence, a father-son duo received J.D. degrees—Frank and Matthew Gruber (below). A husband-wife duo—Stephen and Rebecca Bloom—also received law degrees.

were on hand for each of the reunions of 1927, 1932, 1937, 1942, 1947, and 1952. In a break from tradition, the class of '67 had a Portland dinner/dance reunion which attracted about 85.

Members of the 50-year class presented the University with a check for $5,020 "to be used where the need is greatest."

Alumni Association President Sue Juba announced the election results for new positions on the Board of Directors, namely: Hayes Beall '32; Beatrice Lockhart Bliss '29; Susan Boyer '73; John (Jack) Brown '51; Lloyd D. Girod '32; Betty Provost Hanauska '45; and Robert J. Miller '53.

Talk of the past gave way to questions of the future for Willamette's newest alumni. The May 8 Commencement ceremonies drew over 3,000 friends and relatives of the 365 new graduates.

Dr. Leonard Rice, who retired as President this year from neighboring Oregon College of Education, lauded today's youth in his commencement address and offered some bits of advice.

He said the current young generation has placed an urgency on improving social justice, increasing ecological awareness, and maintaining individuality in an age of giant organizations.

"My first admonition is do not waste any of your precious young years trying to survive outside the 'establishment'... but that's only half my advice. I urge you to help shape organizations so that they respond to man's deep needs for individuality and freedom," he said.

"I encourage you as you work within organizations to resist over-regulation and self-serving regulatory bureaucracy, whether you work in schools, businesses, labor organizations, churches, or government... Try not to overspecify what people are to do. Risk some error and tolerate some eccentricity so as to free the creative energy of individuals—creative energy which will be thwarted by rigidity and over-supervision."

Dr. Rice received an Honorary Doctor of Literature degree and shared the honorary spotlight with theologian Gordon E. Michalson (Doctor of Divinity) and Standard Insurance Co. President Louis Perry (Doctor of Public Service).

Attention to the smoothly run commencement ceremonies came close to being divided. Graduates clustered around a few portable radios prior to the "Pomp and Circumstance" to catch the closing moments of the Portland Trail Blazers' 99-97 NBA playoff win over Los Angeles.

As one Oregon grad remarked, "what a great day. I graduate and the Blazers win!"

Combining an abiding interest in preserving that which has meaning to the region with a successful medical practice has meant many busy, and yet, fulfilling years for John C. Brougher.

In the past few years, historic Fort Vancouver, site of most of the significant early activities of the Oregon Country, has been restored and opened to the public, through the efforts of the Fort Vancouver Historical Society and the leadership of Dr. Brougher. In addition, his own historical collection of medical equipment, some of it dating back to the 18th century, has been displayed at Vancouver's St. Joseph Community Hospital. In 1961, he was appointed to the Civil War Centennial Governor's Advisory Council and in 1970, he was appointed by Governor Dan Evans to a six-year term on the Washington State American Revolution Bicentennial Commission.

His own training in liberal arts at Willamette combined with his long-time membership in the Society of Friends also led to a 30-year involvement with George Fox College. In 1946, he was appointed to the Board of Trustees of the College and took a lead role in bringing it to its current stature before becoming an emeritus trustee last year. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from George Fox in 1972 and a Distinguished Service Award in 1970.

Dr. Brougher graduated from Willamette in 1923 and went on to earn his medical degree from the University of Oregon Medical School in 1928. He has been a practicing physician and surgeon in obstetrics and gynecology in the Vancouver area ever since. He is the founder of The Vancouver Clinic, and a former trustee of the Vancouver Memorial Hospital. He is active in a number of medical associations and is a past president of the Clark County Medical Society as well as a former Vice Regent of the International College of Surgeons.

Dr. Brougher is also an author of note, having had some sixty articles appear in medical and historical journals as well as one chapter in a book entitled, "Religion and Birth Control."

Dr. and Mrs. Brougher's son Gordon is in the construction business. Daughter, Joanne, is deceased.

BARNEY G. CAMERON '33

Instant communication has become commonplace in the modern urban world. Newspapers which once held a monopoly now find themselves in competition with other forms of print and visual media. To succeed in this modern era, the newspaper manager must be a person of vision and have the expertise to develop a product which will be accepted by an increasingly more sophisticated audience.

Just a year ago, Barney Cameron retired as President and Business Manager of The Pittsburgh Press, one of the nation's largest newspapers with a daily circulation of 276,070 and a Sunday distribution of 655,985. In his 15 years with The Pittsburgh Press, Cameron helped expand and modernize its operations with the introduction of data processing and the latest in automated typesetting and mailroom equipment.

Cameron's retirement ended a love-affair with the newspaper profession that had extended over 50 years. He started his career as a high school student in the circulation department of the old Portland News. In the 1930's and early 1940's, he served as circulation manager of the Portland News-Telegraph, the Seattle Star and the Los Angeles Examiner. In 1946, he moved east to become circulation director of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. Then in 1951, it was on to the New York Herald Tribune, first as circulation director and later as vice president and business manager. In 1961, he returned to Pittsburgh as vice president and business manager of The Pittsburgh Press. Cameron became President of The Pittsburgh Press on January 1, 1975.

Extremely active in civic affairs in Pittsburgh, he has been a director of the Pittsburgh Opera, the Better Business Bureau and the Golden Triangle Association, the civic group which provided most of the impetus for the redevelopment of downtown Pittsburgh. He has also been chairman of the premium-fund committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and is a former President of the Pacific Northwest Circulation Managers Association.

Cameron was a member of the Willamette Class of 1933 and received his degree from the Oregon College of Education. He and his wife, Betty, have two daughters, Ann and Joan.

PAUL L. DAY '21

Increasing attention is being focused these days on the importance of proper nutrition. As the world becomes more aware of proper diet, people draw upon more than 55 years of teaching and research in the biochemistry of nutrition by Dr. Paul L. Day. Through the decade of the 1960's and until his retirement in 1973, he was one of the nation's most influential health science administrators as Scientific Director of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and Health Science administrator for the National Heart and Lung Institute of the National Institutes of Health.

Dr. Day earned his bachelor's degree from Willamette in 1921 and went on to receive master's and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University. In between his graduate studies, he taught chemistry at Columbia Junior College in Milton, Oregon, and at Montana Wesleyan College in Helena.

After completing his Ph.D. in 1927, Dr. Day joined the staff of the University of Arkansas School of Medicine where he stayed for the next three decades, reaching the rank of Professor of Biochemistry and also having duties as Associate Dean of the Graduate School. In 1959, he joined the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in Washington, D.C., and in 1963 became the Health Science administrator at the National Institutes of Health.

In 1933, he became a charter member of the American Institute of Nutrition, was named its President ten years later, received its prestigious Mead Johnson Award in 1949 and was named a Fellow of the organization in 1972. He is also active in the American Chemical Society, the National Academy of Science, the National Vitamin Foundation and the Nutrition Foundation. In 1962, he received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Arkansas.

His research activities with laboratory animals in the area of nutrition have resulted in several significant discoveries of defects caused by vitamin deficiencies. Some 100 of his research reports have appeared in many scientific and medical journals.

Dr. Day and his wife, Mildred Garrett, a Willamette classmate, have two daughters—Peggy, a faculty member at Conestoga College, and Dorothy, now associate director of the Adams County Mental Health Center in Colorado.

JAMES A. MCCLINTOCK '27

Liberal arts has been the foundation of American higher education, exposing students to value-centered questions and to experiences in a variety of disciplines. Combining a background in psychology and the ministry, Dr. James A. McClintock has contributed significantly to the furtherance of liberal arts education as a professor and dean at Drew University.

A member of the Willamette Class of 1927, which celebrated its 50th anniversary this year, Dr. McClintock went on to earn a master's degree from New York University, a divinity degree from Drew Theological Seminary and a Ph.D. from Drew University. He has done other graduate study at the University of Oregon, City University of New York and Columbia University.

A teacher for nearly four decades, he is a professor emeritus of psychology at Drew. While there, he served as chairman of the Psychology Department and also as Director of the University's Counseling Center. He also is Dean Emeritus of the College of Liberal Arts at Drew.

Dr. McClintock can also justifiably point with pride to his 15 years of significant involvement with adult education in New Jersey. He helped initiate programs in several townships, encouraging the outreach of the campus community to new constituencies.

In 1966-67, he received a Fulbright Fellowship to Delhi University in New Delhi, India. He also has held a special appointment in student services at the University of Nepal.

Dr. McClintock has been active in the American College Personnel Association. He is a past president of the New Jersey Psychological Association, a Fellow of the American Psychological Association and a Diplomat in Counseling Psychology.

He and his wife, Gladys Flesher, also a member of the Willamette Class of 1927, have three children: Charles, a faculty member at the University of California Santa Barbara campus; Joan and Jean, both of whom are homemakers and teachers.

DOROTHY TAYLOR PATCH '30

One of the major areas of emphasis of the United Methodist Church has been social concerns and Dorothy Taylor Patch is an example of the committed layperson who devotes time and talents to caring about others. She has successfully combined her interests in social concerns and international relations in a career as a social studies teacher in the Salem schools and as an active volunteer in the United Methodist Church, the YWCA and the United Nations Association.

An extremely active churchwoman, Mrs. Patch last year was one of three delegates elected from the Oregon-Idaho Annual Conference to the General Conference of the United Methodist Church, the quadrennial gathering of international Methodism. She also was a delegate to the Church's Western Jurisdictional Conference which has as one of its duties the election of Bishops. She currently is serving on the General Council on Ministries, an international group which oversees questions affecting the church ministry and one of the most important bodies a layperson can be appointed to in the United Methodist Church. In the Oregon-Idaho Annual Conference, she has served as vice chairperson of the Board of Church and Society and as a member of the Conference Council on Ministries.

Her involvement with state and local United Nations Associations has been equally distinguished and she is one of the primary reasons for the vitality of the organization. In 1975, the Salem UN Association presented her with a citation for her work.

In the YWCA, she has served two terms on the local board and was twice a delegate to national conferences.

Mrs. Patch received her bachelor's degree from Willamette in 1930 and has done graduate work here and at the University of Oregon and Oregon State. For many years she was a social studies teacher in the Salem school district and the advisor to the North High School United Nations student group.

She and her late husband, Dennis, have two sons, Donald, with the Oregon State Highway Department, and David, who is in social work for the State.

The University of Salzburg (Austria) has honored Dr. Tyrus Hillway on his 65th birthday by publishing a volume of scholarly articles on American and British literature entitled "Essays in Honour of Professor Tyrus Hillway." The articles, in both English and German, were contributed by professors at various Austrian universities. Dr. Hillway has been at the University of Salzburg for four years as director of American Studies.

After graduation from W.U., Arthur Boeschen earned his M.B.A. at Stanford. In the late 40s he and his wife operated the ski lodge at Santiam Summit. Then for 27 years he was in the tire business in Milwaukee. He is now retired, still living in Milwaukee, and enjoys fishing out of the mouth of the Columbia every summer.

Roberta Brainard Rice lives in White Bird, Idaho. For ten years after graduation from Willamette she taught in the state of Washington. Then she and her husband operated a hunting and fishing camp on the Salmon River in Idaho. Having recently lost her husband, she is at present uncertain about her plans for the future.

Claude Cook, who retired in 1975 after 14 years as Chairman of the Department of Health Science at California State University at Northridge, will be going to California in April as a member of an evaluation team visiting the state college at San Bernardino. The Association of Western Colleges and Universities is the regional accrediting agency. Since retirement the Cooks are living in Elkhorn, Oregon.

Roberta Mills Price is partially retired as a school psychologist in Camas, Washington. She is an experienced navigator, and with her husband has enjoyed many adventures in their sailboat, including sailing the inside passage to Alaska. She is raising two granddaughters, and is active in Presbyterian affairs.

Margaret Morris retired from the Bend school system in June of 1976 after 35 years as high school librarian. She says her house and yard keep her busy, and retirement is great.

Another person who thinks retirement is great is Richard Upjohn who retired last December from his practice of surgery in Salem. He reports that he does not miss his work and that he is enjoying having time to be with his grandchildren.

Ross Knotts is senior pastor at the First United Methodist Church in Medford. He plans to retire in June of 1978, and will continue to live in the Rogue River Valley. He is active on the board of the Rogue Valley Manor, and participates in ecumenical church camping activities. For recreation he hikes, gardens, fishes, bikes, and swims.

Kenneth Mackenzie and his wife came from the deep south for Alumni Day festivities. Last November NORDA (Naval Ocean Research and Development Activity), where Kenneth is Staff Scientist, was transferred to Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, so the Mackenzies have a new address; 1041 Rue Toulouse, Slidell, Louisiana 70458.

Dr. John J. Rudin recently retired from Divinity School, Duke University, after teaching Liturgy and Workshop for 31 years, and is now an associate pastor to one of his students of 20 years ago at the Metropolitan United Methodist Church in Detroit, Michigan.

Alumni Day has come and gone, but, reflecting on the activities of that special day, I wish to share with you some of my impressions. Everybody and everything cooperated to make May 7 a memorable experience for those attending.

My particular class was celebrating its (horrors!) 25th class reunion so the day was particularly special for us. About 100 classmates convened for lunch and had a wonderful time reminiscing. The day was filled with a variety of events—a Leadership Seminar, class get-togethers over lunch, tennis matches, tours of the campus, an ice cream social and band concert, a reception for Alumni Citation recipients and, of course, the final event of the day, the Alumni Banquet.

Members of the class of '52 received the Luther Medallion (for spirit, if nothing else) and members of the class celebrating its 50th year were presented the Matthews Medallion in recognition of long and loyal ties with the University. Norma Paulus, a W.U. Law graduate and Oregon's new Secretary of State, spoke, with warmth and humor, to an overflow crowd.

As I look back over the day itself, I feel a great affection for, and pride in, Willamette and an abiding appreciation for the wonderful friends I have from those happy days. My classroom education and campus experiences were, of course, extremely important in shaping my life; but, over the years, I have been increasingly aware of the greater importance to me of the people I met at Willamette—the faculty, students and administrators.

I may have forgotten a lot of facts and figures, but I will always remember and cherish the friendships made and kept. Willamette was and is special! For those of you who were not able to join us, we missed you! Plan to attend Alumni Day next year—you'll be glad you did.

Dear fellow classmates: yes, the Class of 1962 is alive and well, or is it? While you may not have noticed its absence from the past two issues of Willamette Scene, of significant importance is the cancellation of our 15th year reunion, previously scheduled for this spring. Apparently most of us responding to the letter from Stu Hall, our class president, felt a 15th year reunion was uninspiring and unnecessary. How sad that we shall not be able to share news of our joys, sorrows and successes personally, but must continue to read them second hand and belatedly at that.

Returning to Salem this year is David E. Marsters. He and his wife, Tommie, are employed at Chemeketa Community College, teaching English to Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees. Also in Salem is Robert J. Herberger, who recently purchased a nursery greenhouse business, the former Copley Gardens. A former garden hobbyist, Bob will specialize in fuchsias, begonias, ferns, roses, ponds and house plants.

Gloria Litcher Ramsey is an economist with the Lone Star Gas Co. of Dallas, Texas. She makes her home in Garland, Texas.

Larsana Nelson is at Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois, employed at the catalog department.

Jean Savage was married last year to Robert E. Steiner, a commissioner for Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in Wichita, Kansas, where they make their home. Jean is a labor relations specialist with Pizza Hut, Inc.

Also in California is the William Palmrose family (Betty Moore, '61). William was transferred by the Guy F. Atkinson Co. to Jamestown, California, where he is assistant safety supervisor for Melones Dam and Power House.

Fortunately, my good friend Rick Fairbrook came to the phone at 11:30 p.m. last night and provided me with some hearsay, since nobody wrote to me again (I repeat, nobody), and I didn't have anything printable of my own.

Rick Fairbrook, by the way, is making a killing in real estate (that's only my opinion, but he bought a '76 Volvo). Rick sings in the Portland Symphonic Choir when he isn't working, which he claims to do seven days a week, or watching a Trailblazers game.

Bob Hermann, who answered the phone and lives with Rick, is an attorney in the D.A.'s office in Portland. He plays basketball in the lawyer's league when he's not trying to score in other areas.

Dave Hjelt and Carolyn '73 are Amway Distributors and went to Europe for business and pleasure. Carolyn also teaches music in the Parkrose School District.

Jim Kubitz owns an Earth Shoe store in Anchorage and has been traveling nationwide for his business.

Larry Voth is a law student at Lewis and Clark and is clerking in Portland. He is married to Judy Woody '72.

John Sutton and wife Sue live on Vashon Island, and John cruises into Seattle to work at the Bon Marche where he is a buyer.

Your will is outdated if it doesn't take the Tax Reform Act of 1976 into account

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 was signed into law on October 4, 1976. This massive piece of legislation made sweeping changes in gift and estate tax laws. Estate taxes will now be decreased or eliminated for most people.

Willamette University has materials prepared to serve several purposes. We hope:

- to increase your awareness to the importance of tax planning by pointing out the basic techniques available for minimizing tax liabilities.
- to explain major changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976—with emphasis on how a particular change might affect you.
- to make you aware of the important role taxes can play in planning a gift or bequest to Willamette.

Please send me materials related to the Tax Reform Act and Wills.
