Picnic Toriorrow -- Maybe

Final Vote Fills Vacant ASWU Posts

Al McMullen was elected AS-WU second-vice president and Carol Dimond was named secretary in this week's run-off elections. McMullen has been acting in this capacity during the absence of Chuck Mills who has held the office this year.

Voters, 527 strong, went to the polls to elect class representatives. Next year's senior class chose George Gottfried, juniors will be represented by Ray Atkinson and Scotty Washburn will be the sophomore representative to the council.

Dance Alternate Scheduled for

Bergman, Bowles, Olson Named to Head Publications

Eric Bergman will edit the 1948-49 Collegian and Geri Bowles will pilot next year's Wallulah following their selection to these posts by the publications board this week. Marilee Olson was appointed publications manager, Harry Ryan was chosen to edit the Fussers Guide and LaFyrne Showacy was selected to publish the student handbook.

Two petitions were submitted for Collegian editor, Wallulah editor and student handbook editor. Three hopefuls vied for Fussers Guide editor. Marilee Olson was the only petitioner for publications manager.

Past Experience Cited

Bergman, the new Collegian editor, has had two years experience as an employee of the Oregon Statesman and three years experience as a newspaperman in the navy. He has served as a staff writer for the Collegian and edited the 1947 summer session Collegian.

Geri Bowles, Wallulah editor, has served as a reporter for the Collegian and for the past year as business manager for the yearbook. She has also assisted retiring editor Warren James with other departments of the Wallulah.

Feature Editor Moves Up

The new publications manager, Marilee Olson, has worked in the University publicity office and has served as Collegian feature editor for the past year. She will be charged with supervising the budgets, expenditures and advertising for all Willamette publications.

LaFyrne Showacy and Harry Ryan have both had journalistic training in high school and college.

Wallace Due For Talk Here In Waller Hall

Following a request of the Willamette Students for Wallace committee. Henry A. Wallace will speak in Waller hall Monday, May 24 at 1:30, according to Royal Hart, committee head. President G. Herbert Smith emphasized the fact that this does not constitute sponsorship of Wallace by the University, and that this lack of University endorsement is in continuance of a policy in effect for all political candidates.

Smith also pointed out that it will be impossible for Wallace to speak in the gymnasium at did Harold Stassen, sponsored by a group of law students in February, This is in accordance with a recent fire-department notice which requires better exit facilities in the gym unless the size of the crowd is limited.

Candidates To Be Chosen

Frank Lockman, Loren Winterscheid and Don Douris have been chosen by the faculty as candidates for the annual Albert award. Final selection of one of the candidates will be made by a student body election at chapel Thursday.

The Albert prize was established by a bequest of Joseph T. Albert as an award to be made to the student who has made the most progress toward the ideal in character, service, and wholesome influence. The amount of the prize is $25.

Candidates for the annual Collins scholarship award will also be chosen by the student body Thursday. The faculty will make the final selection of two women and one man from the candidates chosen. The winning students, who must be sophomores, will each receive $150 for their junior year and the same amount for their senjor year.

Juniors Meet Today

Juniors will meet in the Little Theater at 4 today to discuss plans for the Junior-Senior beach trip, May 28 and 29, according to Ed Gottfried, class president.

Gathered around a picnic basket in early preparation of tomorrow's all school picnic at Pat's Acres, members of the sophomore class in charge plan the event. Bosco, the bear, intrudes upon Bob O'Neill, Lenore Wilson, Joan Cloudy, Bob McMullen, Bud Holmes, Inie Lou Wilhelm, Avis Roberts and Rex Edmundson from behind a tree.

Fall Semester Registration To Take Place Next Week

Registration for the fall semester of all students, except law, will take place next week, announced Harold B. Jory, registrar. All students in the college of law will register as directed by the dean of the law school.

Trial study cards and registration forms will be available in the registrar's office by 7:45 a.m., Monday. Students wishing

Bertrand Accepts German Position

Raoul Bertrand, professor of philosophy, announced this week that he is to teach summer school at Schoen, in the British zone of Germany. The enrollment consists of 165 students from over a hundred different countries and two continents.

The school is housed in a beautiful medieval castle which has just been modernized, though due to lack of coal there is no heat and no electricity, Bertrand said.

to continue work in classes in which they are now enrolled will secure the signature of their present professors during the hour they are now in class.

The signature of any instructors whose classes they plan to enter in the fall must be obtained during their office hours

After all necessary signatures are obtained, students must secure the signature of either Dean Linerode or Dean Riggs between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

All registration cards, completed or not, must be returned to the registrar's office by 4 p.m.

Honor System To Be Decided

Representatives from the committee drawing up a future honor policy for Willamette will explain the proposed system to all living organizations next week, announced Bill Harris, chairman of the committee.

After an explanation of the system, a discussion will be held before the groups vote on the honor policy. The votes of all the organizations will be tabulated for student opinion on the issue. If the general opinion is favorable, the system will be submitted to the faculty for approval.

The honor system will go into effect next fall if faculty approval is obtained.

Pending Draft Act Casts Shadow Over 150 Willamette Students

Some 150 Williamette students, it is estimated, would be affected by the newly-drawn draft and military training bill which replaced the UMT bill scrapped late in April by congress. If signed by the president, it would take many of the University's 18 to 25 year-olds who have not already had military service.

According to Chairman Gurney (D-SD) the bill has neared final approval in the committee and is expected to receive Senate approval soon. The bill would then go to the house for rehashing and approval there, with final action by the president. Presumably, though no confirmation may be found on this, the draft law would be effective almost immediately after the bill is signed and would take many of the University students here as soon as draft machinery is put in action.

Earlier this year, General Louis B. Hershey, now head of the defunct World War II draft archives and destined to be head of the new draft law, stated in Salem that full draft machinery could be rolling within six months after enactment.

As now being approved by the Senate committee, the new military training and draft law prouides:

1. That all men between the ages of 18 and 25, and doctors through 45 years of age be registered with the new draft boards to be set up. This provision would include many of the nonex-servicemen on the campus.

2. That all men registered between the ages of 18 and 25 would receive one year's military training with the regular forces, but not as a part of them for 18 year olds. This would presumably be run on a fish-bowldrawing basis and rotationally affect many at the University.

3. That all men holding a 4-C or honorable discharge or similar release from the armed services would be exempt from the new draft. This provision would exempt from the draft most veterans attending the University.

Law School Plans Annual Outing

The picnic sesson will be well underway this week-end with the law school holding its annual picnic at Pat's Acres Sunday. The affair will open at 11, but Dean Seward P. Reese will officially start the softball game at noon when he pitches the first ball. Other entertainment will be games, dancing and lunch at 2.

Committee in charge of the picnic are Martin Barnstad, Bill Stortz, Norton Frickey, Craig Coyner and Gordon Moore. The entire law school faculty is in-

New Interest Shows Promise

Students turned out 727 strong for the student body elections a week ago Tuesday and Wednesday, and 527 cast their votes in the run-off this week.

This indicates an improved interest in elections, and apparently in school functions, as the original vote last week was the largest in the University's history.

From the record of the newly-elected student council, I believe this increased enthusiasm will be wellrewarded next year. Not only are the various members a good representation of the living groups and student body, but each has given evidence of con-scientious and intelligent interest in university

Stan Ryals, member-at-large, recently helped make May Weekend one of the finest in its history, and has always been active in school functions. Bill Harris, first vice-president in charge of social events, has given ample proof of his efficiency as head of the committee that has been investigating a future honor system for Willamette. Al McMullen, second vice-president in charge of elections, demonstrated his ability to handle that position during the recent voting. And, Carol Dimond, the only lady on the council but certainly a good representative of her species, adds much experience of student affairs to her fine record.

All the class representatives, George Gottfried of the seniors, Ray Atkinson of the juniors, and Scotty Washburn of the sophomores, have records which indicate their addition to next year's council will be extremely worthy.

This confidence in next year's council isn't meant to detract from other candidates of the recent elections. Their ability has also been continually displayed, and that ability from them and the rest of the student body will be called on many times next

New members of next year's student council are honored by your faith in them. But, I think they will be unanimous in feeling, more than the honor, the responsibility of doing a big job. And with the cooperative help of the entire student body, they will accomplish that big job.

Practice Teachers Give Answers to Local Youth

By Les Parrott

Those 37 Willamette students going to any one of six neighboring high schools haven't flunked out-they're practice teachers. For 18 weeks, an hour each school day, this core of future profs assumes the dignified air so thoroughly lacking in their natural campus approach. Ten boys and two girls teach the popular courses in the field of physical education. The rest spread their talents out over home economics, art, math, music, and three smart fellows are teaching chemistry and foreign languages.

Dale Jones, one of the linguists, is going to Europe this summer where he will begin his graduate work next fall at the university in Sarbonne on the coast of France, Earl Hampton will attend Stanford this summer before taking up his duties as health teacher in Pendleton next fall.

They run wp against some interesting situations. Ben Schaad asked Esau, one of his students, a question but get no answer. After getting no recognition on his second attempt, he sternly bellowed forth, "Esau, what are you doing?" "Studying English," retorted the engrossed pupil without ever looking up, "Don't you think that it is important that you pay attention in this class?" "Yes," said the youngster, "But not as important as it is for me not to get an F in English." What Ben did next no one knows.

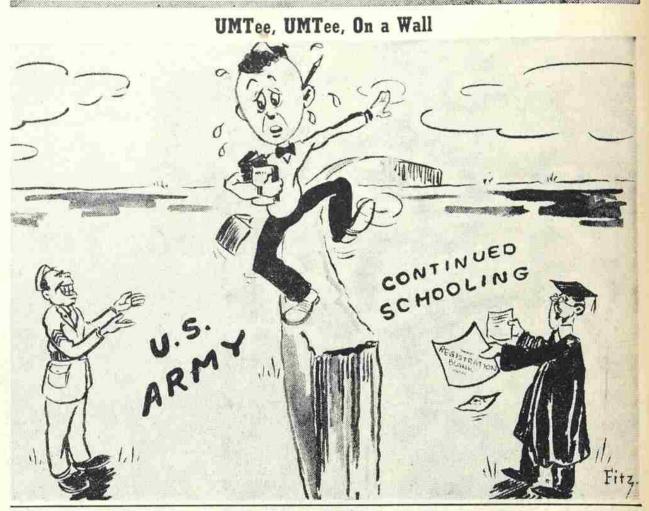

Barbara Crawford told her home economics class that they should divide the eggs she had given them into four parts. Later she had to explain the process of "beating an egg" to a girl who couldn't understand how an egg could be divided into more than two parts, the yellow and the white.

In charge of student teachers, Dr. Morris reports that the prospects in the teaching field are good except for the fact that Willamette males have rushed physical ed. Every graduate desiring a teaching job has been placed and still there is room for more.

So, when you see those education students carrying a high school text book under their arms, don't feel sorry for them. At least they have a job for next year, probable security for the next 30 years and still only have to work nine out of each 12 months.

Hopeful Explains Lure of Ceramics to Uninitiated

By Grace Morton

Ever since I've been in school, I have been asked to decorate dances. Being as how it requires infinite artistic skill to ruffle crepe paper, I finally realized that my positions on decorating committees had been one way for the admirers of my ability to encourage my talent; the truth that had been apparent to all finally dawned on my aesthetic consciousness.

Hastily I jumped into a strictly S.O.P. linen smock and velvet beret and ran over to the new Art Building, spurred on by inspiration, aspiration and art majors. I was placed before a stand that looked like a glorified piano stool which I whirled happily around and around until there was placed on top of it a large shapeless mess of mass, which looked, smelled and felt peculiarly like mother earth.

I then noted with my keen sensibilities a sign on the wall addressed to the Ceramics and Sculpture class, of which I now felt myself to be an integral part. It instructed me to transform the above-mentioned blob into an abstraction of anything. I was flattered to find that inspiration struck me immediately upon glancing at Dale Cleaver's head. I rolled, pounded, moulded and swore like a veteran until I achieved a replica of the image in my mind. I called it "Essence of Egg" and tried to conceal my pride in this glaring manifestation of my newly discovered genius.

Miss Kells smiled, politely, obviously trying hard to conceal the look of admiration for the true artiste that she knew me to be. Fearing that I would supplant her, she tried to curb my bubbling creative spirit by asking me to undertake an ash tray. I was not daunted, but instead made a game of rolling the clay into long strips and fastening them together with "slip" just like the Indians in the books of my babehood. This work truly surpassed my former accomplishment. It was a magnificent piece weighing 11 pounds. In the center I had intricately patterned a foxtail. At last the day came when the best works of the class were dry enough to take to the kiln in Portland. By some fluke, mine were overlooked, but I shot at the tires of the truck so they remembered to stop for them.

I spent the next few weeks in eager anticipation of the return of my glazed work. I was going to be generous and allow my works to be displayed in the library until Mother's Day, at which time I planned to give the ash tray to Grandma and sacrifice "Essence of Egg" to the Portland Art Museum.

One morning as I was casually perfecting the rakish angle of my beret, I noted some bright objects in the library showcase. Leisurely strolling over to see the type of enshrinement my work had received, I found to my amaze that it was the plebian work of others and not mine that was exhibited therein.

With the courageous smile of the unappreciated artist playing about my lips, I removed my beret and smock resignedly, to link my name with the thwarted poets of history. My name is writ in mud.

Phi's Explore Vagaries Of Rambling Streams

Armed with bathing trunks, stout paddles and flimsy canoes, eight Willamette men were affected by the sunshine Tuesday, and took off to navigate the Mill Stream and the Willamette river respectively.

Turner was the jumping off spot (how true) for the four Mill Stream venturers, Chuck Patterson, O. J. Sparrow, Dale McClellan, and Ray Atkinson, Expecting to lose their seats once or twice during the trip, they wore trunks, but wisely left their watches on and stored cameras in the canoes.

Dale and Ray having had the most paddling experience, they pushed off. Three hundred yards away the canoe capsized. Chuck and O. J. laughed and laughed -they went 500 yards before their first spill. Final score of the afternoon's trip was three confessed upsets for Ray and Dale, and 12 for the more honest O. J. and Worst spill of the jaunt was at a wide peaceful spot of the river, unfortunately loaded with a whirl pool. First canoe capsized and was recovered without too much trouble, having just time enough to become composed on the bank when the second canoe appeared. They waved O. J. and Chuck on, and gleefully smirked when they too capsized, and the canoe was dragged into the center of the whirl-pool. Ironically, Dale Morgan chose this time to fly over the scene, and circling low joined in the laugh.

The quartet was wet from the time they started, but laughed so much because Chuck lost his good shoes, O. J. got his watch soaked, and because of their wounds from overhanging branches, that the three and a half hour trip seemed short. Phi Delts came out en masse to greet their water explorers at the bridge above MacMillan's, and as soon as they've recovered another trip is planned.

Jack Eby, Don Phillips, Don Link and Jim Phillips had a less eventful time on the Willamette, but still returned sun-burned, scratched, and tired. Their only spill occurred when a tug swamped Don and Jack's canoe a short distance from Independence, their starting spot.

Now they're looking for a harder river to travelmaybe Snake river through Hell's Canyon.

I Want to Be Alone!

I am going on the school picnic. Whee, I say to myself, this will be jolly fun. I can hardly wait to cavort and frolic with my boon companions with whom I shall attend the picnic. Ah, what wholesome good times await me at the picnic grounds.

There will be volleyball, softball, swimming, dancing, and just loads of other red-blooded American sports that we college students so enjoy. For a whole day we will be permitted to do nothing but play.

The hot sunshine will beam down upon my head and for a whole day I will bask in its warmth. Joy and happiness will be mine as I do nothing but relax. That is I'll be able to relax if those people who so love group singing and folk dancing will only leave me alone. I love my little chums and I think singing is fine, but why must they be so darned organized. Singing in a bathtub I can see. Group singing on a cool evening beside a mosquito infested pool is another matter. Such things leave me cold.

But even so, I am going to have a good time. My mind is made up. No eager organizer is going to force me to sing "Climbin' Jacob's Ladder" when I don't want to, and at the slightest provocation I'll tell them just exactly what I think of folk, ugh, dancing. I am going on a picnic and I am going to have a good time

Jerry Lillie said that he was disappointed in the number of men turning out and that he could do little besides give individual instruction. He believed it was more important for everyone to make their grades than to have a good spring football session at the expense of ineligibility next fall.

Mills, Sayre Back From West Point National Debate Meet

Back to routine campus life this week were Chuck Mills # and Bob Sayre after three weeks of debating cross country with the main event being the National Debate Conference at West

"As part of the conference we were taken on a complete tour of the military academy, watched a parade of cadets and visited Roosevelt's home in Hyde Park," Sayre said.

Willamette made an excellent showing at the session. Of the 34 school participating Willamette placed third, with USC first and Army second.

Before attending the conference at the military school, they spent two days preparation in New York. During this time they were able to meet with 16 alumni. "If it had been on a weekend, Sayre said there probably would have been 60 or more.

Mills and Sayre also debated at the national discussion on world peace at the University of Indiana. Out of 145 debaters Sayre placed 18th and Mills 27th. After the West Point conference they gave an exhibition at the University of Boston before returning home.
