

YALE YELL GREETES PRES. TAFT

NATION'S EXECUTIVE TALKS TO WILLAMETTE STUDENTS AND BESTOWS UNEXPECTED HONOR UPON UNIVERSITY

Congratulates Institution Upon its Splendid History--Becomes Honorary Member of Philodorian Society--Says War Between Nations Should be Abolished--Favors Establishment of International Court.

Considerable discussion took place in Salem last Thursday as to whether that day was set apart in honor of Columbus' discovery of America, or in honor of his birthday, or whether it was a gala day to welcome President Taft.

From appearances it was Taft day. At seven o'clock a. m. people were wondering if Taft had arisen. The curiosity of some was so great that it impelled them to leave their homes before breakfast and haunt the rear of our president's private car.

At eight o'clock half the people of Salem were eating breakfast with Taft at the Marion. In their fancies.

At nine o'clock all the people of Salem were restless. The majority of the populace was upon the streets, making toward the civic center. Youngsters were tugging and pulling to break the bonds of restraint, were seeing Taft in everything that loomed large.

All this time "Willamette spirit" was steaming away in a most amiable manner. "Old Brick" stirred the fire till "the spirit" began to purr. He blew upon the fire and the spirit began to flame and spout. It spouted out something that sounded like a Yale yell, and again something that sounded like a Taft yell. The students formed in line and marched serpentine fashion on the streets.

At nine-thirty the entire parade was in motion. As it swung up State street, past the University grounds the students collected before the president's automobile, yelling "Rah, rah, rah! Rah, rah, rah! Rah, rah, rah--Yale!" The president is a Yale man. Then the same yell for Taft, twice repeated. The president's automobile stopped and he said a few words of greeting to the students, of commendation for the Methodist school and its history, and concluded with "God bless you." Another yell, this time for Willamette, then a "Hip-hooray, Hip-hooray Hip-hooray, Homen!" and the students single filed again, working their way through the crowds at the east end of the court house, to hear the president speak.

Governor West said some words in eulogy of our fair country and its resources, its fair women, and of welcome to the president and his smile that wouldn't wear off. The mayor of Salem then spoke, after which President Taft was introduced by Congressman Hawley, and spoke to this effect:

"I am glad to be in Oregon, this state of such a fine past and of such a great future. I am glad to know and don't have to be assured in this audience, of the color of the ladies' cheeks, which is like the smile Governor West referred to--it won't come off. I am glad to be here in a community that is willing to put to the

PALMER TALKS TO Y. M. C. A. BOYS

Sunday afternoon another good characteristic meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the Websterian Hall. Mr. Palmer, head of the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. of Portland, gave us a good ringing talk on "Bible Study." Mr. Palmer came highly recommended and proved himself worthy. He told us in a very forceful manner just what is what about Bible study. He gave us three simple yet very comprehensive reasons why we should read and study the Book of books. They are in part as follows:

First: "Because of the influence and character of the Bible in the world. All of our fundamental laws are based upon principles found in the Bible. All we are in civilization, today, we owe to the Bible. We would not be enjoying the privileges that we do enjoy were it not for the Bible."

Second: "The Bible reveals God to man. In every heart there is a feeling prompting us to worship something. The Bible tells us what to worship."

message to each of us. The day is gone when a man is called a 'stissy' if he stands up and testifies for Jesus Christ. We all need this message in order that our lives be so clean and pure that we will not be afraid to face anybody."

These are but a few of the many good weighty sentences with which Mr. Palmer's talk was fraught. Those who missed it missed much; and those who miss next Sunday, the next and the next, will also miss something worth while, for the Y. M. C. A. stands for and gives us naught but the best. The Y. M. C. A. is the greatest force for good among the fellows of the student body, so he who wishes to represent and be represented by something worth while should get in and sign up. Mr. Schreiber prophesied Sunday that over one hundred and fifty fellows would join. We believe Mr. Schreiber knows, and that his forecast is well founded. Mr. Hollingsworth is the "Hamilton" of the affair. He will smite with the rod of his ingenuity the rock of finances and cause to flow forth at least five hundred dollars, a nice little budget

The above is a facsimile of the paper signed by President Taft after he had boarded the train in Salem. The whole school appreciates the honor conferred. We trust that President Taft may ever have reason for feeling a sense of gratification over this relation to "Old Willamette" University, the mother of education on the Pacific Coast, surpassed only by the gratification of having Yale, on the Atlantic, as his alma mater. This recognition by our President gives us another strong incentive toward securing the remaining $195,000 needed to complete the present campaign for the first $500,000 endowment.

GREAT MEN OWE SUCCESS TO PHILODORIAN SOCIETY

The relation of President Taft to the Philodorian Literary Society as told above naturally leads to a review of the great men who have in times past had their scholastic training augmented by literary training in this society. While this can not be done fully in an article of this character, attention may be called to some of the prominent alumni who are well known to the present students.

Attention has already been called to the fact that Congressman Hawley is one of the charter members of this society. There is a very interesting fact to be noticed in connection with Mr. Hawley and the Philodorian which came as a prophecy in the Annual of 1905. As an introduction to the Philodorian section in that book was a cartoon in which a streamer connecting the towers of Willamette University and the Capitol building of the United States supported the picture of Mr. Hawley. We are glad that the prophecy has been fulfilled, and the Philodorian Society has a right to be proud that it helped to give Mr. Hawley the training in forensic powers which so well fit him for the honored position that he holds.

Chief Justice Eakin of the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon is another man of whom the society has just cause to be proud, as we understand that in years gone by he was a loyal member of this old and useful organization.

Another man who deserves mention in this article is Mr. Jay Bowerman of Condon, who was, prior to the present Governor, acting Governor of this great state, which position he filled honorably and capably. Mr. Bowerman is recognized as one of the finest debaters and speakers in Oregon, and again the society has reason to be proud of its former members and the work it did to help them achieve success. There are many other prominent men who have received their literary training in this society who deserve mention, but lack of space will not permit. We are proud of them, just the same.

It is not necessary, however, to go among the oldest members of the society to find those who have made a success in their chosen line of work. Nor is it alone the exceptional one who has become prominent or reached a fair degree of success. Among the younger men who have more recently been members of this society there have gone out into every walk of life those who are making good. Of these Grant B. Dimick is County Judge and a man of influence in Clackamas County. Mr. James Heltzel and Mr. Glen Unruh of this city are making good in the legal profession, while Mr. Ronald Glover, a graduate of the Law School, is private secretary to Congressman Hawley. Many others of the younger members could be mentioned who are achieving success in the legal, medical and ministerial professions, as well as in various lines of commercialism.

The present membership of the society is composed of men from the various schools with those from the College of Liberal Arts in the majority. Although this society has an old and honored alumni, it does not in any sense intend to let this suffice for present work. The present membership is fully determined to make this the greatest year in its history.

with which to defray the expenses of the association. Again we say, line up and sign. Emerson says, "Hitch your wagon to a star," but we say, hitch yourself to the Y. M. C. A.

LIBERAL ARTS JUNIORS.

The Junior Class of Liberal Arts met Tuesday afternoon and after a very peaceful and harmonious session succeeded in organizing. Miss Jessie Young was unanimously chosen to pound the marble, with "Rubenstein" Hollingsworth for an assistant. Miss Florence Metcalf was entrusted with

FRESHMEN CULTIVATE GINGER

FIRST YEAR MEN LARGE FACTOR IN BOOSTING WILLAMETTE--HIGH SCHOOLS FURNISH MUCH MATERIAL

New Students Great Power in Attracting Influence Toward College, says Vice President Todd--Greatest Offer of Help Ever Given College west of Rocky Mountains is Willamette's

Special by Dr. Todd

When a thousand students in 1915 is suggested, a call to action is sounded. Changes for the better will continue to come and all of us will need to lend a helping hand. Growth in entering classes must continue and everything else increase in proportion.

The freshmen class has an important relative position to student body growth. Its members, in large measure, are direct from high schools. In attracting influence toward a certain college, no one has a greater power than the Freshman.

The Freshman class of last year started something worthy of special commendation, when it established cordial relations with the local high schools.

The Salem fathers and mothers are grateful. But an advance on the present good relation can be made. To this may be added direct interest between this class and the high schools attended last year. A yet wider circle may be created in coming into touch with every graduating class within a radius of fifty miles. The great circle will have been reached when every high school Senior class is touched by our Freshman class.

The purpose of this entering class should be to make the Senior class of 1915 the largest and best of all. This slogan may help, "Keep together till we graduate." Encouragement and mutual help must be the class spirit.

This old school is worthy of you and of them. It introduces into a long procession of honorable men and women, lead by the founders of Willamette, who wrote the first articles of incorporation in 1842. This procession reaches the ends of the earth with its influence and leadership.

The school to which you invite them has the broadest possible foundation for education. The atmosphere is the purest, the instructors are of superior scholarship, the class of students purposeful. This combination opens a door of opportunity to one of keen intellect and desire for learning.

The equipment is getting better. The present is full of promise for the best. The campaign for a half million endowment is increasing in hope. The greatest offer of help ever extended to any college west of the Rocky Mountains, is Willamette's. Messrs. Booth, with his $100,000 offer and Hill with his $50,000 offer, have made possible adequate equipment. The student body can help realize this high anticipation. When it is done, Willamette will be on the highway of college attainment. Every student can help this campaign succeed. The leadership will call for your assistance. May every student stand true and loyal.

Y. M. AND Y. W. "JOINT" WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Without a doubt the most successful opening reception ever given at the University was that of last Friday evening, when the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. were at home to new students in Eaton Hall.

The affair was wholly informal, and everybody was made to feel at home. The first part of the evening was spent in "mixing." Each person was adorned with a card bearing his or her name and class so that if a fellow couldn't get his friends to introduce him to that attractive new co-ed, the order of affairs was to accidentally come face to face in the jam, and then, with the aid of the card--well, you know! At all events, everybody enjoyed this part of the evening, and it had the effect of bringing the new students into the common fellowship which prevails at Willamette.

After this a very excellent, though short program was rendered. James Oakes, president of the Y. M. C. A., gave a brief speech of welcome. Prof. Biddle rendered two highly appreciated readings and Mrs. Mendenhall sang delightfully. The ever-popular University quartet then tuned up and was required to respond to several encores.

After a grand march headed by members of the faculty and their wives, all the wants of the inner man were satisfied before the crowd dispersed.

Green Theology Scribe.

The Theologians have elected Henry Green, a Portland man, as Collegian reporter for Kimball College this year. Being a witty man, the students feel that he is well qualified to represent them in the columns of our college paper.

Dr. Eliot to Tour World.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 7.--Dr. Chas. W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University is to make a tour of the world, leaving the United States on November 7. He will be gone about eight months, a large part of his time being devoted to Japan, China and India.

SPECIAL TO PORTLAND THAT MULTNOMAH GAME

TOMORROW our FOOTBALL SQUAD WILL MEET MULTNOMAH, an ADVERSARY worthy of their metal. TOMORROW IS THE DAY of the BIG GAME.

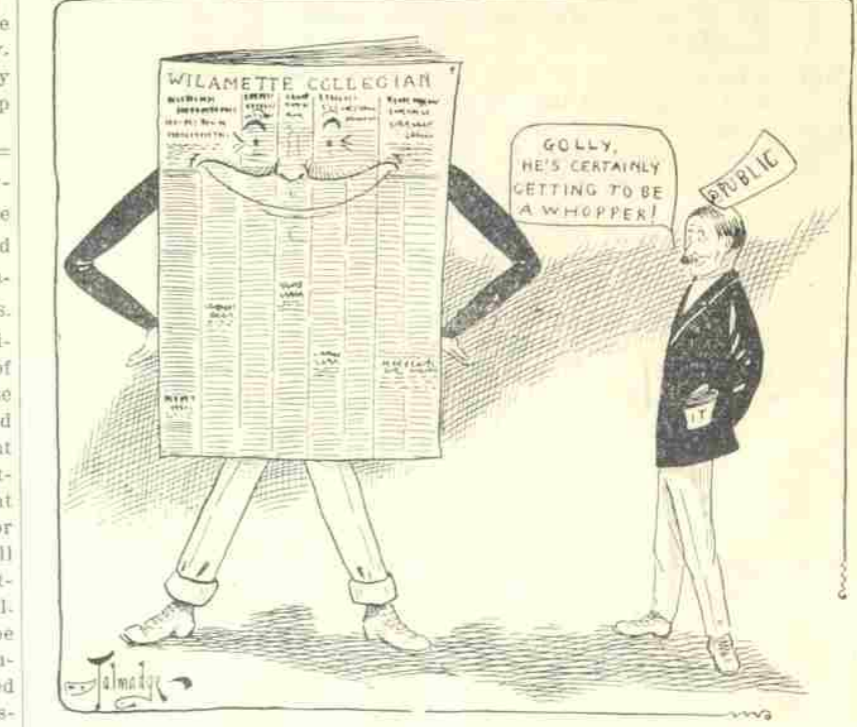

Like CHAMPIONS OF OLD fighting for the LOVE of LADIES FAIR Willamette and Multnomah will clash upon the field of battle.

HERE WILL BE A SIGHT to MAKE THE PULSES GALLOP!

A SPECIAL TRAIN will leave Salem tomorrow morning carrying the biggest crowd of WILLAMETTE men and women that ever accompanied a football team away from home. They go to cheer the Cardinal and Gold on to VICTORY.

COME ALONG AND HELP ROOT! Overhaul your THORAX and grease your LUNGS. You will have need of them.

Remember the TIME, the PLACE, and the TRAIN!

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT.

There is a period of time between childhood and manhood when the mind and body are peculiarly susceptible to influence. When every impression received is stamped indelibly upon the being, shaping and moulding the man to be.

Birth, environment and circumstances all contribute their quota toward the fixing of a destiny. If a man be well born; if circumstances so combine themselves that overwhelming temptations to controvert God's laws do not assail him; or if assailing, fall to conquer; if the atmosphere about him is conducive to right thinking and right living, all other things being equal, he will live a good and useful life, and die a much respected citizen.

But such a happy coalition of conditions seldom, if ever, work together for the uplifting of man, or man's institutions. We must, and doubtless it is well that we must, depend largely upon our own individual efforts to rise above the sticky mass of ignorance and superstition in which the great body of humanity is caught and held.

It is not true, as a rule, that "Opportunity knocks but once." But there does come to most of us, at least one opportunity for great and rapid advancement. And this opportunity generally comes in youth, before habits of life are fixed.

Willamette University is well born. Its environments are of the best. It has struggled up thru the years, and has developed by its efforts a mighty strength. It pauses now upon the threshold of a brilliant and splendid career. The psychological moment has come. Another stride will carry it across the line that divides youth from maturity, ambition from final attainment.

The Greek athlete, wearied by long exertion, must needs pause for a refreshing drink, proffered by a friendly hand, ere continuing the race.

Willamette University we liken to such an one. You! fellow student, can hold the brimming cup to the lips of this young giant. You are an integral part of its living body. Your interest here is personal, vital. Your voice is potent for good if you but call aloud the merits of your champion. Realize that your aid means much to Willamette and to yourself—for this is your opportunity.

Use pen and tongue in crying to the world the truly great qualities of your college; the splendid opportunities that Willamette University offers for moral, mental and physical advancement.

SALEM ALIVE.

Fortunate indeed is the community that possesses and institution of higher education. Not only does it contribute to the industrial welfare of the country about it: Like a magnet it draws unto itself the best element in society.

Salem business men are thoroughly alive to the great benefits that inure to this city because of Willamette University. This is patent from action taken last week by the Salem Board of Trade.

In the Daily Oregon Statesman, Tuesday last, there appeared an article signed by a number of Salem's leading merchants and professional men, indorsing in unqualified terms the steps taken by Willamette University toward the acquiring of a half million dollar endowment fund.

The tone of this open letter to the people of Salem and Marion County was enthusiastic, hopeful; its theme a call to all interested in the future of this community to rally to the support of Willamette University.

This is as it should be.

CLASS AFFILIATION.

Upon our campus are seven colleges, each with its individual aims and interests; but subservient each to the broader interests of the university as a whole.

Last year the Juniors of all departments united with a common object in view. This union was a great success. It knit the several colleges of Willamette University in a spirit of accord that had never been equaled before in the history of the school.

Such unions do not destroy class individuality, but rather promote it in bringing together the students of every department for debate upon matters of general class interest. Sap is reduced to syrup by the application of heat. In arguing matters of common interest men grow into a closer relationship with one another.

Let the class of '12 set an example for others to follow. Seniors! remember your reputation for progressiveness!

Give us class affiliation.

THE HOPE OF YEARS TO BE

Perry Prescott Reigelman.

We're a jolly student crew from the good old W. U.

And we're in the living game for aye;

Till the last old sun has set, we'll be smiling then, you bet,

For we never falter by the way;

Then it's Rah! Rah! Rah!

With a rally, rally row;

And it's ha, ha, ha

For our jolly student crew.

We're a happy, smiling lot from the sunshine that was caught

On the campus of the 'Varsty;

If you've never smiled a smile, just stay here a little while;

We're the liveliest bunch you e'er did see:

For it's Rah! Rah! Rah!

We will make the welkin ring;

And it's ha, ha, ha,

When of W. U. we sing.

There's a name we love to spell, in our hearts it's written well,

And it ever brightens down the years;

'Tis a name for us to live to, and a name for men to give to—

W. U.—the name each one reveres.

Now it's ho, ho, ho,

With a lusty song and true;

And it's ho, ho, ho,

With a shout to Heaven blue.

"Dear Willamette" oh, we sing, and we make the echoes ring

From the plied-up mountain to the shore;

'Tis the name we ever bless; 'tis a name we wish success,

And its glory shine for evermore.

Then it's ho, ho, ho,

For the name each one reveres;

And it's ho, ho, ho,

For the Dream of the Pioneers.

"Dear Old School!" How memories cling! And what visions do they bring
Of the days we loved and spent with thee!

Websterians Receive Callers.

What the Websterians did Wednesday evening, October 11, 1911. The first thing was the installation of the new officers. Carl Hollingworth, the new president, was in the midst of a finely prepared speech when a loud rap was heard at the door. The door-keeper timidly looked out, and lo and behold, there were the Adelantes en masse, carrying a large basket and various other suspicious looking articles. The boys kindly gave over their places to the girls, and Hollingworth continued with his speech.

The next in order was a lecture, entitled, "A Brief Review of the Taft Administration," by Chas. B. Harrison. He told in a few words some of the things that Taft would be remembered for, and also made a prophesy as to what Taft would probably say in his speech while in Salem.

The violin solo by Mr. Green was enjoyed by the society so much that it received an encore. This doesn't happen always.

The debate, "Resolved, that the proposed form of commission government would prove beneficial to the City of Salem, brought out some good points on both sides. The affirmative was upheld by Harold Jory and Harry Critchlow, and the negative by Paul Todd and Frank Barton. After the program and a brief recess, the boys continued with their business session on one side of the halls while the girls were busily engaged on the other side in preparing something that smelled good to eat. After the business session everybody played school. This proved very exciting. After nearly everybody had been promoted to the foot of the class, story-telling was the order of the evening. It was at this time that the contents of the package became no longer a secret, and penoche was passed around and greatly enjoyed. The time to go came all too soon and everyone went away feeling glad that he had come, and especially that the Adelantes had come also.

EARL NOTT CAPTURES PHILODOSIAN THRONE

The Philodosians gave their first literary program Friday, Oct. 13. The meeting was well attended, considering the numerous "counter-irritants" in the shape of football games and preparations for the reception in the evening. Several unexpected "old members" as well as a number of visitors were present. The following program was given: Instrumental solo, Mary Pigler; "The Gleaner," Margaret Graham, Grace Edgington; parliamentary practice; vocal solo, Stella Graham.

The Philodosians were especially honored by the presence of two brother Philodorian, Mr. Earl Nott and Mr. Joe Stearns. By President Bradley's invitation, Mr. Nott gracefully consented to take the chair during parliamentary practice. With equal gallantry Mr. Stearns allowed himself to be conducted by the sergeant-at-arms to the censor's chair. After long sustained opposition it had been previously moved that the sergeant-at-arms should be required to employ five minutes in the performance of this duty. From the safety of the censorial stronghold Mr.

Stearns later delivered his report.

The immediate object of the Philodorian call was to arrange for a "joint jubilee."

Wants to Yell, Too.

Editor Collegian: Why could not the Willamette University yell be published in the Collegian, so that we Freshmen can learn them? We want to yell, too!

Would offer as a suggestion that you have an experience column in some issue and get all of the Freshmen to write their reasons for coming to Willamette University, briefly. It would be varied and interesting reading, and we would know then how to appeal to prospective students in order to get a larger Freshman class for next year. Yours truly,

—F. R. Francis.

[The Collegian invites communications from all who have anything of worth and interest to tell our readers. We think both suggestions in the above letter good.—Editor.]

Senior Law Doings.

Perry Reigelman certainly knows what a promissory note is.

Lloyd Westley has again put in his appearance.

Herbert Spencer says that it is a nice accomplishment to play a good game of billiards, but to be an expert shows a wasted youth. The three W.s should take warning.

Donald Upjohn, who has been out of law school for a year, has entered for the Senior work. Mr. Upjohn is an exceptionally good student, and one that will be heard of in days to come.

What is the difference between statutory and statutory? Ask O'Connor for the answer.

Prof. Keyes: Mr. Stearns, what is competent evidence? Mr. Stearns: That which is not incompetent.

All our troubles are of the tomorrow, and when tomorrow comes these troubles turn out to be trifles. The troubles of today amount to nothing. So reserve your strength for the real trials.

Y. W. C. A.

On account of the day of vacation last week, the Y. W. C. A. did not hold its usual meeting. However, to assure you that the association is by no means observing a permanent holiday, we print the program for the remaining part of this month, and that of November. See whether it does not impress you as being interesting, varied and helpful. Place it in your memorandum for ready reference each week. Then appear at the rest room every Thursday afternoon at 3:35 to imbibe the good things offered. Here they are:

Oct. 19—"Bible and Mission Study," President Fletcher Homan.
Oct. 26—"Finance," Mary Pigler.
Nov. 2—"Echoes from the Breakers," Frances Poble.
Nov. 9—"The College Girl's Sunday," Jessie Young.

ACADEMY GIRLS!

Stop, Look, and Listen to the "Adelphians."

Three-thirty Friday, October 13th, was a momentous period in the history of Willamette University. For the millrace flowed on as usual, neither hursting its banks nor demolishing the grandstand, and the football squad continued to give and receive black eyes; 'tho all this was happening, it had no influence on a band of lofty-minded, culture-seeking Adelphian maidens who climbed the flights of stairs in Eaton Hall to the rest room, where was held the first regular meeting of the Adelphian Literary Society of Oregon Institute.

After the invocation by Miss Humphrey, roll-call was answered by the name of one's favorite author. The answers given showed wide reading and good taste, Longfellow proving the favorite. We were given a treat when Miss Ashby entertained us with a piano solo. Then our president, Miss Avison, gave a short talk on our aims and plans. Miss Cooksey's paper, "Our Society," was interesting and to the point. "Ben Blair," the first chapter of an original story written by Miss Todd, set us all to wondering "what is going to happen next?"

An interesting part of the business meeting was the parliamentary practice, in which the voting of fines reached the limits of frenzied finance. We were very glad to have the new girls with us, and hope they will join their mighty intellects with ours.

THE OLD WAY.

The time when it paid to start in the basement nailing boxes and work up to the manager's chair on the top floor by learning the work on the road, is past. The modern business is too big; the road is too long, and no one has time to give others commercial schooling. The profitable way is to "short circuit" the line—get a thorough training at the Capitol Business College and start as assistant to the manager to begin with. Ask for catalogue.

Co-Ed's Corner

Edited by Grace Edgington.

The editor of the Collegian has seen fit to bestow upon the women of Willamette University a portion of his paper. Perhaps this portion will be known as Aunt Polly's column or Cousin Cynthia's contribution. Or, indeed, it may be merely the Co-ed Corner. But whatsoever it be named, its purpose is the same---to give to the girls of Willamette a section of the paper to which they may contribute anything from fudge recipes to character sketches of famous females.

Athletics, in the main, are distinctly masculine enterprises, participated in by boys only, rooted for, and rallied to by boys only, and written up, read and understood, in technical details at least, by boys only. Yet athletic policies and predictions, victories and vice versa naturally and rightfully govern to a large extent the subject matter of a college paper. But inasmuch as the girls of Willamette have always stood faithfully by the Old School, and are as such a part of it as is anyone, is it at all surprising that our editor should consign to their mercies a small portion of the paper?

Such a department in a college paper is comparatively an untried experiment. It remains to be seen with what success the venture will meet.

LAUSANNE HALL DOINGS.

It was reported last week that all the "regulars" had arrived at the Hall. But one more little visitor has dropped in unannounced and seems determined to become a permanent fixture. The new arrival is a soft little grey and white kitten. It has not yet complained of the ventilation or the earliness of the rising bell, and finds the board very satisfactory. It also enjoys the parlor, and may be found there much of the time. A rumor has been afloat that Miss Brice was contemplating the addition of a dog to her hangings and furniture, that Miss Fraley was considering the adoption of a Prep, and Miss Chappell an Orphan's Home baby. Be that as it may, the kitten fulfills all requirements, and allays our fears as to the charitable intentions of the three young women.

Tuesday evening there was lemon pie for dinner, pie of the real like-your-mother-makes kind, with glaciers of snowy frosting on top, and rounded moraines of crisp crust at the side. But after dinner, three pieces of that pie returned "intact" to the kitchen, and were replaced in golden order upon the table. Fifteen minutes later, the matron chanced to visit the kitchen, and what do you suppose she saw? There wasn't much left to see, merely one small piece of crust even then about to be transferred to Mr. Carl Hollingworth's interior. Exit the principal actor, followed by rapid "scene-shifting."

Hold Election.

Wednesday evening the annual organization of the Lausanne girls was effected. Miss Young, last year's president, presided over the meeting. She was the first nominee for president, and was re-elected by a liberal majority. Grace Edgington was elected secretary and Ethel Lewton treasurer. The organization required the treasurer to produce a $10 bond, which Miss Mark, with tearful and heartfelt sympathy, moved should be restored to Miss Lewton. The two nominees for sergeant-at-arms were Miss Austen and Miss Gertrude Allen. On no other election were such time and attention bestowed. Electioneering, such as is seldom tolerated at the polls, prevailed. At length Miss Allen was elected by the narrowest of margins. A social committee was appointed, and other business matters attended to. Arrangements were made to furnish the hall with magazine material. For you see it is very important that girls should know definitely whether or not Mrs. Senator Briggs of Washington, D. C., wore at the last reception lavender chiffon embroidered with indigo fish balls, as was reported.

On Friday Mr. A. B. Wastell and little Miss Kahryn Wastell of Portland visited "our daughter at college" and were happily received. The fire-escapes are the latest addition to Lausanne. A fire-escape, besides being a rather convenient affair, in case the house decides to get on fire, is certainly a splendid place to dry handkerchiefs!

There are one or two people at the Hall who can, when necessary, be very diverting. At dinner one night last week, silence "in great quantities" was reigning, when suddenly Miss Maude Meyers assumed a pensive air, and began:

"When I was ten years old, mamma went east. The day she was to get home I decided to do a little baking, so she wouldn't have any work to do for a day or so. Well, I baked six big loaves of bread, two cakes with frosting an inch and a half thick, and thirteen apple pies! And you know there were only three of us in the family. My, but it looked good to me to go into that pantry and see all the shelves around me loaded with pies and bread and cake. Did we eat 'em? My goodness! Papa tried one of the thirteen apple pies and said he guessed we'd better save the other twelve. And the bread! He took it down to the river and threw it in, and what do you know, girls, we went fishing six weeks afterward, and there that bread was yet! And there was a boy along that I like awfully well, but the folks went and showed him that bread down in the water. Just my luck! And, girls! there have been rapids in the river there ever since."

test anything that promises to be useful. By the way, it occurs to me that as the governor arose and the mayor arose and Brother Hawley arose, we were gradually increasing in avordupois.

"I made the promise to the school children that if I had any influence, when the time came, the warship Oregon should be the first to go through the Panama Canal. The Panama Canal is in the course of such construction that if the same measure of rapidity in excavation and concrete work is kept up, at the present rate it ought to be completed by the first of January, 1913, at least by the first of July of that year; although the engineers, mindful of possible slides and unexpected hindrances have been unwilling to guarantee its completion until January 1, 1915.

"And then you on the Western Coast will feel more materially the benefit to be derived from the opening of that avenue of commerce than any other people in the world. You are going to be brought closer to the Eastern Coast of America and to Europe than you have ever been before, and you are going to have such an arrangement by tolls or the absence of tolls that will make that canal of the best interests to your commerce.

"The canal will double the efficiency of our navy. I hope we will never need to use the navy for anything but saluting purposes. (Cheers.) Altho from conditions existing we must have a navy and we must have an army. I am looking forward to the time when we can reduce both of them to the lowest figures and use them only for domestic purposes.

"I am reminded of the effort we are making in Washington by the use of treaties with foreign powers to relieve our future from the danger of wars. It is a subject very dear to my heart. I think it is possible by treaties already made, if ratified with all nations, by which war will be practically impossible. That we may have a court in which any nation grieved can summon the nation that has grieved it to the court and they will have to abide by such a court. Until we have such a court we shall never get rid of war, we shall never get rid of our armament. Every nation is armed to the teeth to defend itself rather than to make war, with all the terrible machinery to kill men. We have attempted to secure a voluntary and joint disarmament, but that is impossible. No nation is willing to begin until the other begins, and that means they will never begin until we furnish them some method by which they shall be certain that the international controversies likely to arise can be settled by other means than war.

"Now, I am not here to say that war has not at times been a means of great progress in human history and civilization. The war of independence gave us the independence by which we are now thriving. The Civil War enabled us to cut out the cancer of slavery. But to these men who have been through the war and who know what its horrors are, I would appeal for assistance to avoid the possibility of future war. (Cheers.) They know it is a horror. They know the fullness of the truth in the description of General Sherman that war is hell. They know its ravages, yes, and their wives and sisters knew the agony as they waited the news from the battlefield.

"Of course in a war there are a few that gain a great deal of glory, and those that do the fighting come in the rear, and the burden of war falls on the plain common folks, and they don't get nearly so much of the glory as the man that dresses in feathers and gold lace. I am glad to know that in England, and in France, and in Germany, it is the poor plain common people that are so strongly in favor of the treaties that favor the abolition of war. These are the people that pay the bills whether in blood or money.

"Of course with no other way we have got to go to war. But I say I would a great deal rather submit the question to an impartial tribunal and have it decided by them than to submit it to the forces of the two nations and let the best fighters claim the justice of their side. A few years ago if you were a so-called gentleman and another so-called gentleman insulted you, the only way to settle it was for you to get out and have a duel. But suppose you and I were deciding a question by this method and I was the best shot and hurt you so that you had to go to the hospital and think it over for a few days, would you think it was any vindication of your honor? And in England a few years back if two persons could not agree the judge handed them each a sword and a ring was marked off twelve feet wide and the contestants defended their honor in the ring and the best swordsman was the man that could claim justice on his side of the question. Now, these things are very ridiculous. But if you will think it over carefully you must see a very close analogy to the present system of settling international difficulties.

"Now we have made two treaties and they provide that we will agree to arbitrate all future questions of certain natures before the Hague tribunal. In the second clause we provide for a joint high commission---three American and three English (I speak of English because the French treaty is just like the English), and this joint high commission is to consider any questions that trouble the two parties that cannot be settled any other way. In case the matter is not satisfactorily adjusted it is to be held in abeyance for one year before either side may take further action against the other. Now, perhaps you have had the experience (I am speaking to the men now, of course) of getting angry and making everybody uncomfortable until wife doesn't speak and the children tiptoe so as not to disturb you and you think it over and see what an ass you have made of yourself after a little calm reflection. And do you not think that two nations if given a year's time would think things over and find a way out of a difficulty before they would calmly and deliberately enter into a war that certainly would mean much loss of life and sorrow? And yet on this point the majority of the senate commission brought an unfavorable report.

"The third clause of the treaty in which the majority of the senate committee also disagree with me, and what I am trying to influence the rest of the senate to confirm, is however, where the sticking point comes. It provided that this commission, if the two parties differ as to whether the question at issue is one that comes under the rights of the tribunal or not, shall decide whether the tribunal has the right to arbitrate or not. The senate commission says that to arbitrate under those circumstances is to abrogate our rights as a government. Well, if it don't embarrass us a little sometimes, it is not arbitration at all! You can't make an omelette without eggs, and without breaking their shells, and the Indians used to say medicine that don't bite when it goes down the throat is not medicine at all. And if the arbitration doesn't touch us sometimes it is no good in settling the controversy.

"I cannot say how important these treaties are. We are a great people and nation of 90 million or more people between the two seas. Every nation looks to us to lead them in this matter. They know that we are not seeking to make peace universal because we are afraid to go to war, (cheers) but that we are making peace universal because we are big enough to say that we prefer peace, and are willing to take insults from little whiffets that we don't care anything about (cheers) rather than go to war.

"Norway and Sweden have agreed to a treaty of arbitration containing this certain clause, that the board of arbitration shall decide whether it comes within their bounds or not. We can get along without the treaty, but it is important to the world. God in making us such a great nation intended that we use our resources for promoting universal peace and happiness in the entire world. We must say to the poor common people of all the world, and especially in Europe where the burdens of war come heaviest upon them that we as a nation are willing to stand for universal peace and help them throw off the burdens and expense of the ever-costlier armament.

INDIANS ARE BRUTALLY MASSACRED

Saturday the Varsity squad took an exciting game from the Chemawa Indians. The mix-up was in the nature of a practice game for the Varsity, so all the substitutes were used during the course of the game. The final score was 27 to 6.

The first quarter was played for the most part in the center of the field, neither side scoring, the Willamette was within striking distance twice. Both times she failed to connect, and the quarter ended with the ball in neutral territory.

In the second quarter a series of runs and forward passes took the ball from the center of the field over the line. Booth kicked goal and the scoring was over for the first half.

In the second half the Varsity came back hard and quickly put McRae over for a touch-down, after securing the ball on a fumble near Chemawa's goal. Three more touch-downs were made before the game was over; Booth succeeded in kicking one of them and the Varsity's final score was 27.

Chamawa was able to score but once and then on a fluke, Sortor ensuring a partially blocked punt by Rowland and running seventy yards for a touch-down. The goal was kicked and the game ended with the score standing 27 to 6 in favor of Willamette.

Chemawa was unable to gain consistently against the Varsity, while after the first quarter, the latter gained almost at will.

The work of the team was a great improvement over the exhibition of the week before and practically all the men showed up to good advantage.

The game was not lacking in thrills and was marked by a number of long runs and well-executed forward-passes.

SPORTING NOTES.

Spokane will see two Conference games this fall. One between Idaho and Washington on November 26th, and the other between W. S. C. and Oregon on the day following, November 27th.

Thirteen University of Washington women earned an official monogram this last year. One of them, a Miss Larned, won honors in four departments, starring in basket-ball, baseball, hockey and the crew, and was the only woman to win the official "W."

Saturday the local High School took Portland Academy into camp to the tune of three to nothing. A placement by Becknet pickled the game for the local lads, and that and a fifty-yard amble by McClelland were the principal starters.

Managers Johns of Oregon and Zedneck of Washington are planning to make the Washington-Oregon game to be played in Portland October 18th, the greatest contest ever pulled off west of the Rockies. Special trains will be run, and special rates made on all lines and already special invitations have been sent to prominent men in both states urging them to attend.

The Alumni of Pacific University lost to the Undergraduates of the same school last Saturday in one of the most exciting games ever played on the Pacific field. The Undergrads secured a safety in the second half, and did all the scoring of the game.

Dimick, Alumni tackle, starred for his team and the work of Ferrin, Varsity quarter, was the feature of the game. The final score was 2-0 in favor of the Varsity.

The University of Idaho football team defeated the Lewiston Normal eleven on the Idaho athletic field by the score of 40 to 5.

New Club Makes Debut.

A new organization has suddenly made its debut into University circles, viz., "The Kioshe Klub." This is another cooperative boarding club, organized by men who desire to maintain a high-class establishment with the least possible expense.

Its membership is restricted to college men and its object is more than providing simply an eating place, but in addition providing a social center for its members. Rooms have been secured in the east portion of the first floor of the chapel building, and they are being fitted up in a very attractive manner.

The initial "banquet" was pulled off last Thursday evening, when formal organization took place, and officers were elected: President, Wm. Schreiber; vice president, J. B. C. Oakes; secretary, Harold Jory; treasurer R. W. Jeffrey; manager, E. C. Gilkey.

FRESHMEN ARE LIVE BUNCH

Would Root for Old Willamette at Portland Tomorrow.

Foremost in the minds of most of the members of the Freshman class during the early days of the school year seems to be the query: "What can be done that will distinguish our class as one of the best in the history of Willamette?"

It is well that every one should be seeking to uplift the spirit of his class, but during the week too often good opportunities for distinguishing ourselves and showing that we are really of some importance in the school, are allowed to slip by.

A campaign is on now for securing subscription to the Willamette Collegian. A representative has been appointed from every class to solicit among the members of his class. There is such a person after your subscription.

You owe it to the University to help all you can to spread the news of the college. After you read the paper send it to some friend that is contemplating attending college in the future.

The spirit of the present Freshman class is far above anything of this past, and they can be proud of the fact that it is the greatest Freshman class that has ever entered Willamette.

Adelantes Hold Reception.

The society halls witnessed a scene of such gaiety Saturday afternoon when the Adelante Literary Society tendered its regular annual reception to the new girls of the university.

The softly lighted rooms were beautifully decorated. Masses of vine maple leaves in various hues and tints, and long-sprays of the graceful Virginia creeper afforded a veritable spirit of autumn, while pink LaFrance roses and potted ferns added their individual charm. Numerous and beautiful college and high school pennants adorned the walls, making every corner bright and cheery.

In the receiving line, the president, Miss Altman; vice president, Miss Casebere; secretary, Miss Chapman; treasurer, Miss Poble, and the critic, Miss Heist, greeted the newcomers. When all had assembled, merry games were entered into with a view to getting acquainted, while Miss Chappel proved herself a competent teacher in pedagogy by keeping several of the society officers at the foot of the class.

During the afternoon the Misses Meyers and Sutcliffe delighted all present with several piano selections. Later all joined in singing the popular college song, "Dear Old Willamette U.," and the society girls made the halls ring with their song. "Hail to the Adelantes."

Dainty refreshments were served. Artistic place cards in the hands of the Adelantes divided the visitors into several merry groups.

About thirty-five guests were present. Among them were Mrs. Homan and her niece, Miss Wilson, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Sherwood and Miss Chappel, some of whom are honorary members of the society. Also Mrs. Norah Emmel Thompson, one of the Adelante charter members, was among those present.

The afternoon passed quickly and pleasantly for all present, the departing guests voting a royal good time.

We extend to the new girls a cordial invitation to visit our society Friday afternoon at 3:35. A literary program will be rendered.

LAWS HOLD LOVE FEAST.

Organize New Society to Promote Interest in Law College.

On Monday evening, October 17th, twelve very live and progressive Senior law students gathered around the festive board at the Marion grill and organized themselves into a fraternal society for the promotion of better fellowship and the study of those subjects peculiar to the legal profession. Every member present responded heartily to a toast and pledged his support and loyalty to the new organization. The slogan of the evening was, "Willamette College of Law second to none."

Altho the society is yet in its infancy, and has had no opportunity to show its true worth, much is expected by its members along lines heretofore neglected in the legal department of the university. For that reason, it has the strong endorsement of Dean McNary, and the active support of the leading business men of the city. It is the purpose of the new organization to give a number of public speaking contests during the school year at which liberal prizes will be awarded to the successful contestants. Though the social side must of necessity be a factor, yet the serious aim of educational benefit will be the prevailing motive.

The Junior class of the College of Law is over fifty per cent larger this year than any former year. There are about thirty-five enrolled at present.

It is expected that nearly a dozen Junior Laws will attend the M. A. A. C. versus W. U. in Portland, Saturday, October 21st.

At a combined meeting of the different classes of the Law School last week. Mr. Cole, a Junior, was elected debate manager for the present school year. With all the members of last year's successful debating team, Wilson, Nott and O'Connor, back in school and some very capable new students, Willamette should again capture the laurels from the law students of the U. of O. Other debates are also under consideration.

It is a fine thing to practice what you preach, but it's a little better to practice without preaching.
