A New Look for A New Decade

If things look a bit different in this issue of the Willamette Scene it isn't because of anything you've done. It's all our fault. We are in the process of going through some changes. The Scene is moving in the direction of many publications of its kind and you can get a taste of some of things to come in this "transition issue."

A lot of things will remain the same. Class Notes will always be around because we are sure that's the section everyone looks for first of all. We are keeping the 'On the Scene' section to keep you up to date on some of the things people on campus are doing. And we will keep the campus calendar so you will know what is happening or coming up at Willamette.

What we are changing is all all-news format. We will still have a campus capsule section which will be just that, a news capsule section to let you know just what the issues at Willamette are and have been. Our main thrust will be in the area of feature articles and articles dealing with current issues as pictured by faculty, staff and alumni.

Beginning with the January, 1981 issue of the Willamette Scene we hope to have the changes completed. To do so we will need your help. First of all we would like to encourage all of our readers to submit articles to us. We are looking for articles about issues which relate to Willamette alumni as a whole as well as feature articles about alumni or about Willamette itself.

We are also looking to generate some feedback from the readers and we are hoping you will respond to the articles which will be coming up in the future issues.

There will still be plenty of news about Willamette and Willamette people but it is our desire to expand on that concept and let Willamette people tell you their views on current affairs which effect you as a reader. This issue is a combination of both the past Willamette Scene and the Willamette Scenes of the future. In that future we will be digging for information about alumni as well as current students and faculty and passing it on to you in the form of feature articles.

In short, we want the Willamette Scene to be a showcase of talent. We intend to showcase the writing skills and knowledge of the Willamette family as well as showcase just what the family members are up to out there.

Like any new project, implementation requires time and this "transition issue" is designed to give us that time. It shouldn't take too long, however, and by January we should have our "new look" in full swing.

It is something which has been in the planning stages for some time and we hope you like it.

— Steve Lathrop

Hudson tours Far East

The Far East has called Willamette's new president Jerry E. Hudson. At least for a little while. Dr. Hudson has joined several other college presidents from throughout the United States on a trip to Japan and Korea and specifically to the People's Republic of China.

Sponsored by the National Association of Schools and Colleges of The United Methodist Church, the trip is designed to explore possibilities for educational cooperation among various higher educational institutions of nations rimming the Pacific.

The venture will involve such activities as development of an exchange program for faculty and students, development of comparable curriculum in undergraduate and graduate studies and development of a communication information network.

Specifically, the delegations exploratory responsibilities include assessing the current social, political, economic, religious and industrial situations and identifying educational needs, establishing informal and formal communication channels with higher educational institutions and governments, establishing an avenue for educational cooperation through which reciprocal benefits are achieved and reporting the findings to both individual campuses and the National Association of Universities and Colleges of The United Methodist Church.

During his visit to the Far East, President Hudson is scheduled to visit the International College of Commerce and Economics in Japan, Willamette's sister college.

Willamette president Jerry E. Hudson was invested with the duties of his office by Chairman of the Willamette Board of Trustees, Warne Nunn at a ceremony held Sept. 3 in Smith Auditorium.

Wanted: Willamette Collegians

The Willamette Alumni Office is on the lookout for missing issues of the Willamette Collegian. Wanted posters are up and the Alumni Office is asking alumni who have or know someone who has any of the missing issues to contact Willamette right away.

On the "Missing Issues List" are papers dating back to 1876. Any alum with an issue from 1876, 1877, 1890, 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1957, 1958, 1960, 1961, 1962 or 1963 is asked to contact the Alumni Office to find out if you hold one of the missing issues.

Copies are needed for the files. Utmost care will be taken in copying any missing issue you have and the original will be released under its own recognizance and back into your custody.

Your cooperation is appreciated.

Yale seminar aids Willamette Dean

By
Lee Tornquist

Joining 11 colleagues at Yale University this summer proved a valuable and important personal and professional experience. Six weeks of study sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities provided each of us with the opportunity to improve and explore knowledge of the humanistic dimension of the legal profession.

Yale University School of Law professor Robert Cover played host to our group, which was specifically selected for the program by the NEH.

"The Supreme Court in the Twentieth Century: An Intellectual History," seems a broad subject for six weeks of study but a carefully prepared outline that integrated history, economics, and political philosophy with the study of constitutional decisions enhanced the coursework.

The source material for the course included judicial opinions, public and private statements of the justices—including the excellent collection of private papers at the Harvard and Yale libraries—and the writings of historians, economists and political theorists. A visit to the Harvard library included a review of the private writings of Holmes, Brandeis and Frankfurter.

The seminar addressed a series of substantive and methodological problems in the history of the supreme Court from 1919 to 1954.

From World War I through 1954 the Supreme Court articulated a political philosophy in spite of ideological challenges from the Left and Right. We considered the context in which this political philosophy was articulated, the evolution of the philosophy itself, its roots in past constitutional doctrine and in current ideas and its success as a force in American politics. Just as important was the study of the individuals who participated in this process. Finally, we examined the function of the Court as an official organ for political and economic thought. Four separate concepts were considered.

Part I. The Concept of a Civil Capitalism

The Court in the 1920's spoke forcefully about the labor movement, trade associations, competitive practices, industrial organization and patterns of government regulation. It spoke to issues created by the transition from a war to peacetime economy, by an inflationary rise in prices, and by unrest in labor relations. The Court's decisions on these matters were reviewed.

Part II. New Deal Legislation

We examined the role of the Court in first blocking New Deal legislation and subsequently gratifying the goals of New Deal legislation. We examined President Franklin D. Roosevelt's attempt to "pack" the Court and analyzed the reasons for his failure. We also considered the impact of New Deal legislation on other rights—including minority rights.

Part III. The Court and Representative Politics

The Court from 1919 to 1954 was concerned with two problems of practical political theory: (1) encumbrances on representative politics by formal restrictions, by private terror, or by official manipulation of police power and (2) encumbrances on free elections that prevented them from being open, fair, free of corruption or manipulation by incumbents.

Part IV. Southern Apartheid

Southern Apartheid "officially" ended with Brown v. Board of Education in 1954. We examined what the Court did between 1919 and 1954 and asked why and how questions. Why and what point did there emerge a settled intention to attack segregation and discrimination? Who are the moving forces and how do they operate?

Two goals that developed from the summer program are (1) enriched scholarship in the form of written manuscripts and (2) creating of a new course for the law school.

I became particularly interested in Justice Harlan Fiske Stone and his role in developing legal and political philosophy to protect minority rights. Even after the seminar I have continued to read his decisions and his life history. I hope to complete an article this academic year concerning the role of Justice Stone in overthrowing state schemes to prevent Blacks from voting in the Southern primaries.

Through study, reflection, and discussion I came to the conclusion that a thorough understanding of a Constitutional decision depends, at least in part, upon a broad understanding of the economic and political setting in which the decision was made. I would like to work with our Constitutional Law professors in developing a course that would integrate history, economics, and political science with an intensive study of special concerns in Constitutional Law. We are fortunate to have some outstanding professors in the undergraduate school who could be helpful in this quest. At the very least, it is my personal goal to place a greater emphasis in my teaching and writing on how law fits into our society.

(Dr. Runkel is a lifelong student of the American Presidents. He wrote his doctoral dissertation at Stanford University in 1949 on "Hoover's Speeches During his Presidency," with the assistance of some of the 31st President's White House staff. More recently he has done post-doctoral research in Presidential rhetoric at Harvard.)

What is greatness in a President?

By
Dr. Howard W. Runkel,
Professor of Speech

What makes a 'great' president? Willamette's Dr. Howard Runkel can give you some idea based on a 1962 poll which rated the five 'greatest' presidents in United States History. With the elections just a few days away perhaps you can use some of the insight.

Once again what has been called the "quadrennial madness" of a Presidential election is upon us. It is the culmination of a several year long process of incredible complexity involving prodigious effort. Estimates of the direct and indirect costs are running as high as a billion dollars. When asked if all this is necessary countless voters would probably give affirmative answers; the more thoughtful would add: "—if we could be sure of nominating and electing a person who will become a great President."

Surely the ability to act greatly in the most important office in the world is the summum bonum in American political life. What is meant by "greatness," however, is not easily defined.

In 1962 a poll of 75 historians from all parts of the country was conducted by Arthur M. Schlesinger, Sr., at Harvard University. It rated all our Presidents on a scale of "great, near-great, average, below average and failure." The scholars were instructed to consider each President's performance in office, taking care to omit anything done before or after. Each was permitted to use his own yardsticks. The most common are included on the following list compiled by Stanford's Thomas Bailey:

- achievement
- administrative capacity
- appointees
- blunders
- congressional relations
- dignity
- domestic affairs
- eloquence
- ethics
- executive ability
- foreign affairs
- growth
- impact
- industriousness
- integrity
- leadership
- partisanship
- party leadership
- popularity
- sensitivity

With these formidable tests in mind, it is revealing to note the five Presidents the Harvard group selected as "great" and recall their peculiar abilities and achievements in office. As voters we can use these to evaluate our nominees for their potential to be added someday to this elite company.

More of the Harvard panel put Abraham Lincoln in the top category than any of our other Presidents. Surely the career of "The Great Emancipator" best illustrates the truth of Seneca's observation that "it is a rough road that leads to the heights of greatness." No President has been called upon to serve under more dreadful conditions that Lincoln faced in a nation torn apart by civil strife. Yet his wisdom and vision were equal to the test and have become proverbial.

Lincoln was determined to save the Union and wisely gave this objective precedence even over freeing the slaves; he rapidly expanded his Presidential powers to meet the need for conducting and winning the war—even to the point of suspending the writ of habeas corpus; he held on to the border states when one false move would have driven them into the hands of the South; he used subtle diplomacy and kept England from backing the Confederacy; he issued the Emancipation Proclamation in what will always be regarded as a masterpiece of political timing; he successfully exerted great pressure on Congress to destroy slavery finally in the Thirteenth Amendment. Through all this he maintained excellent rapport with the people in rhetoric at once aphoristic ("it was not best to swap horses when crossing a stream") and elevated ("with malice toward none; with charity for all;").

Lincoln had the toughness of spirit to bring the nation through the ghastly ordeal of civil war but preserved the sensitivity and compassion which made him one of the most exalted rulers of men the world has ever seen. His four years in office have come to epitomize Presidential greatness.

"Washington was perhaps the only man in the history of the presidency bigger than the government itself."

Close to Lincoln in the affections of historians is George Washington. If ever a man functioned in the right place at the right time it has to have been "The Father of Our Country." The framers of the Constitution had him in mind when they described the Presidency and he did not disappoint them.

Washington's immense dignity and aloofness were exactly right for the infant republic striving for status in an era when people were still awed by kings. He took a fledgling nation of fewer than 4,000,000, an empty treasury, hardly any army or navy and a Constitution which left countless questions unanswered and raised it to a respected position in the world. With no Presidential precedent to guide him, he faced a perilous task. Yet historians praise him for having been the only chief executive in American history to commit no major blunders while in office.

Washington established Presidential relations with Congress, particularly concerning foreign policy and official appointments. He settled boundary disputes with Britain and Spain. He made peace with the Indians. He put down the Whiskey Rebellion in Pennsylvania, thus unmistakably fixing the authority of the new federal government to levy taxes. He insisted on neutrality in the war between England and France. He travelled widely to induce the people to begin thinking as citizens of a nation, not as colonists.

One biographer has declared that "Washington was perhaps the only man in the history of the Presidency bigger than the government itself." Few leaders in history have matched his wisdom and good judgment.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is rated third on the select list of great Presidents. Many Americans question such a high grade for the man who served in office much longer than any other. But Roosevelt's impact on the nation—and the world—was vast. He tackled two emergencies, either of which might have laid low many of our heads of state. His war on the Great Depression, while frightfully expensive, showed him to be an imaginative leader who could think

"big." His readiness to accept new ideas and uninhibited confidence and optimism quickened and thrilled a disheartened population. These qualities served him, the nation and all the free world well when the Great War made the United States, in Roosevelt's unforgettable words, "The Arsenal of Democracy."

Roosevelt was capable of big mistakes—for example, his attempt to pack the Supreme Court and his costly naivete in dealing with Stalin at Yalta. In balance, however, his leadership must be credited with preserving the national morale during the awful tests of deep depression and total war. In personal diplomacy, magic presence and the ability to use the new mass media to communicate hope to a global audience Franklin Roosevelt set a standard by which all of his successors have inevitably been measured.

Historians admire our fourth great President, Thomas Jefferson, for the intellectual brilliance he brought to his task of moving our government toward a purer democracy. In office this versatile chief executive and skillful politician helped shape the destiny of his country for the next one hundred years.

Jefferson was quick to take advantage of an opportunity to purchase the vast Louisiana territory; he promoted the Lewis and Clark Expedition; he used his daring and original Embargo Act to keep peace—although its ultimate effects were decidedly mixed; he was dauntless in assuring freedom of the press despite bitter attacks on himself. Through it all he was extraordinarily effective in leading Congress.

So broad and multi-faceted was Jefferson's thinking that today both liberals and conservatives have adopted his precepts, from his defense of minorities and commitment to civil liberties to his support of states' rights and his notable frugality with public funds. In our time the name of Jefferson is esteemed by intellectuals all over the world.

The last of the Presidents considered "great" was himself a scholarly political scientist and historian, Woodrow Wilson

"Lincoln was determined to save the Union and wisely gave this objective precedence . . ."

PRESIDENTS

always had a plan to meet what he perceived to be the need of the moment. Once in the White House he was quick to project the nation into the Twentieth Century with far-reaching legislation labelled "The New Freedom." This included a lowering of the tariff, a progressive income tax, banking and currency reform, an anti-trust act, child labor law and many more. Our first involvement in a world conflict was thrust upon us during his second term and Wilson proved to be a competent war leader. His plan for permanent peace—the celebrated League of Nations—tragically did not win enough American support. This was due in part to his physical collapse while promoting the League with rare eloquence but more because this President simply would not compromise with those who opposed him. Despite this vital personal shortcoming Woodrow Wilson is hailed for his high idealism and constructive activism while in office.

Reviewing the accomplishments of these five American Presidents as a group one readily sees how pointedly Thackeray has written on the subject of greatness:

"To endure is greater than to dare; to fire out hostile fortune; to be daunted by no difficulty; to keep heart when all have lost it; to go through intrigue spotless; to forego even ambition when the end is gained—who can say this is not greatness?"

—and who can say that these are not qualities which we voters ought at least to hope for in the President we will elect next month?

"He tackled two emergencies either of which might have laid low many of our heads of state."

"the intellectual brilliance he brought to his task of moving our government toward a purer democracy."

"always had a plan to meet what he perceived to be the need of the moment."

1980-81

Willamette's Class Agent program is in full swing this fall and it shouldn't be too long before you hear from yours. Class Agents will be sending you two letters this year seeking your financial support for the Alumni Annual Fund.

All of the proceeds will again be directed to the Alumni Student Scholars Program which provides scholarships for worthy, exceptional students.

The Alumni Annual Fund is seeking a goal of 22% contribution and $100,000 for the year.

Class Agents were selected earlier this fall and the Alumni Office would like to offer a special thank you to each of them for supporting the program so strongly.

ON THE CONVENTION FLOOR

Things didn't turn out just the way Dave Gomberg was hoping at the Democratic Convention in New York this past summer but the Atkinson student still feels he got his money's worth. A Kennedy delegate during the proceedings, Gomberg saw the good and the bad of the convention and brought home some new insights.

When is a Carter supporter not a Carter supporter?

When he's really a Kennedy supporter. Like Dave Gomberg.

Gomberg, a student at the Atkinson Graduate School of Administration at Willamette, is supporting President Carter for re-election this fall. If he had his druthers, however, Gomberg would be backing Ted Kennedy for the presidency when the election rolls around in November. Kennedy won't be on the Democratic ticket as dictated by the Democratic Convention in August. And Gomberg can tell you a lot about that convention because he was there.

The former student body president at Oregon State University was one of Oregon's Kennedy delegates at the New York based convention and just getting there was no easy trick. You can't feed the stock if the barn door is locked and the key to the Democratic Convention isn't acquired without a little bit of advance work.

The number of delegates for a candidate is based on the primary election outcome in the state and not only must the candidate approve a delegate, the precinct members must vote on just who they want to represent them.

That means some campaigning and the good fortune to have a good reputation. Gomberg's reputation wasn't in doubt for a minute. He has been active in the party for some time, serving on no less than five committees, working on the executive committee for the County Democratic Party acting as a former field representative for Les AuCoin and campaigning vigorously for Kennedy during the primary.

Gomberg's campaigning was basically his speech delivered before the party members of the Second Congressional District.

"I stressed what I thought our job would be as delegates at the convention and that we were organized and working hard. I pointed out that a lot of Carter's support from the youth came before the draft registration was reinstated and that a lot of things had developed since Camp David," stated Gomberg.

It seemed to have hit home. Gomberg received one of two slots in the Kennedy delegation awarded to men. He beat out 18 others seeking a place at the convention.

Gaining a spot on the delegation was one thing. Getting to the convention was another matter. Gomberg's worries centered around budgeting his trip and weren't helped in the least by a rash of phone calls and mailings recognizing his celebrity status and wanting his "valued" opinion.

The Los Angeles Times was constantly in touch, polling his views on various issues and he kept getting phone calls from the Lyndon LaRoche Committee reminding him that LaRoche was running for president as an alternate candidate.

"It was crazy for awhile," related Gomberg. "You have to keep your guard up all the time. Everyone wants to know where you stand."

Through all this Gomberg kept in close contact with the rest of the Oregon delegation for Kennedy and regular strategy sessions kept everyone up to date.

An all night flight put Gomberg in New York a day before the convention opened and that first day proved to be the most crucial of the entire week for Kennedy supporters.

"We had strategy sessions all day long and lists of people to contact. It was an uphill battle for us. The key was to convince delegates to vote as the people would have it but since Oregon has such a late primary, people's attitudes hadn't really changed much."

Gomberg went about his business, stressing the positive record of Kennedy and hoping to sway someone in the Oregon delegation to change their vote. As it turned out, someone did—just one.

The vote to change the rules failed and it was no real surprise to Gomberg.

"We were at a disadvantage going in on the convention floor. There has to be a big reason for a delegate to change his vote and I guess it just wasn't there in the minds of most delegates."

Disappointment set in almost immediately on the Kennedy side. "We were really down that first night."

But there was still work to do and Gomberg knew after the first day he would have to be on his toes. Fighting for platform issues and dodging "more reporters than delegates" didn't leave room for dejection.

"Anything you say there seems to go into someone's notebook," sighed Gomberg. "Reporters always had a microphone in your face. I was leaving a delegate party at the Waldorf-Astoria at four in the morning and when I got on the elevator two reporters jammed a microphone in my face. They started bombarding me with questions . . . this and this have happened. What do you think?"

"It really got hectic. I was asked how I liked New York, the weather, where I came from. It was very muggy there. I told them that in Oregon when there was this much moisture in the air it's raining."

Gomberg was interviewed by the Boston Globe and the BBC and even "got some TV exposure". It was a learning experience for sure. Gomberg began to put things together after getting back to Oregon.

"I started to reason out just what the convention was worth and what I thought we accomplished. And we accomplished quite a bit really. The platform was extremely significant and we were able to make some changes."

Gomberg pointed to the hard line stand supporting the Equal Rights Amendment and support for federal funding of abortions as key issues. He noted that "the biggest changes in the platform came after the Kennedy speech".

So there were accomplishments for the 26-year old Atkinson student.

"I learned so much and I enjoyed myself. It's one thing to talk about economic issues here but talking to people from other areas of the country you get to appreciate just what it's like overall. You come back with a much broader view."

"Yes I would do it all over again," emphasized Gomberg. "Seeing the mechanics of it all is really something. But it would be nice to go back on the winning side. I truly feel that the Kennedy speech was the highlight of the convention and I think that although Carter won the nomination, Kennedy won the convention."

And now Gomberg is supporting Jimmy Carter.

"The Kennedy delegates had a closed 45-minute meeting with Vice-President Mondale when he visited Portland earlier this year and we all signed a letter of support for President Carter. Kennedy was my first choice, but Reagan is my last choice and I believe it is really just a two man race now . . . so I'm a Carter supporter."

Gomberg is busy campaigning for himself as well. He is currently a candidate for the Marion County People's Utility District Board of Directors. "It came up after I got back. The PUD committee called and asked me to run. If it (the PUD board) is set up it would be an intense process. Initially it looks like public power has a lot going for it but there are a lot of facts to be uncovered."

Along with his campaigning for himself, Gomberg is also the County co-ordinator for Ted Kulongoski's senate campaign, a member of the steering committee for State Treasurer candidate Jewell Lansing and GSA student taking 18 hours.

Originally from Sacramento, Gomberg came to Oregon in 1972 and attended Oregon State, where he graduated with a bachelor's degree in political science in 1976 and then earned his master's degree from OSU in the same field in 1977. After a year work for Les AuCoin, he spent a year in the Willamette College of Law and then moved on to the Atkinson School.

Gomberg's next move may well depend on the upcoming election but one thing is certain when Dave Gomberg is involved, he's going to stay active. Sitting still is not part of his life style. After all, there are more conventions down the road a few years.

ANNUAL REPORT

Willamette's busy year completed in May had a little something for everyone as the photos below show. Clockwise from the top left, the Willamette College of Law's Trial Advocacy program was a highlight. Oregon Secretary of State Norma Paulus joined College of Liberal Arts Dean Jerry Berberet at the Kappa Sigma-sponsored fireside chat during the spring. Military hero and statesman Moshe Dayan came to Willamette in December and drew a full house to Sparks Center. Collins Hall got the first stages of its "face lift" underway this summer. And Willamette crowned a pair of national champions in swimmers Dawn Lien and Steve Koga. There was much more and the final year of the 1970s left a promise of continued success for the 1980s.

A Commitment to Academic Enhancement

At the commencement that concluded the 1979-80 school year, Dr. Robert P. Lisensky gave a presidential response to the commencement address by asking graduates to act in a manner that would "bring a quality of wisdom to a nation that is too committee to know-how knowledge, enhance the welfare of persons, and restore confidence in human progress." President Lisensky added, "I challenge you to fulfill these roles, so that we at Willamette University will have fulfilled our purpose."

The response was Dr. Lisensky's final public address as Willamette President. He resigned in February, effective August 1, 1980. His resignation set in motion a search which resulted in the appointment of Dr. Jerry E. Hudson as president.

While Dr. Lisensky's surprising resignation after seven years in office was the news event of the year, much of 1979-80 was spent with work that did not attract much media attention: hard work that would enhance the academic programs of the university.

In 1979-80, the College of Liberal Arts faculty approved new graduation guidelines and requirements to be effective for all newly enrolled students in the fall of 1981. The changes reflect a commitment to the idea that all Willamette students acquire a general education involving disciplinary and interdisciplinary approaches to the traditional areas of the humanities, the social sciences, the natural sciences, literature and the fine arts—and that each student develop a competence in the knowledge and skills of a major program of study. Some results of the changes are an increase of credits required for graduation from 30 to 31, demonstrated mathematical proficiency as well as English language proficiency and a requirement for quantitative study for the Bachelor of Science degree. The College of Liberal Arts curriculum development is an outgrowth of the University planning process and the subsequent visits of numerous consultants from across the country. Also Willamette received a matching grant from the Japan Foundation to enable the University to strengthen its Japanese studies as part of a goal to develop more programs related to the Pacific Rim countries.

In 1979-80, the College of Law followed through with plans to add estate planning, business planning and trial advocacy to the third-year curriculum, established a Board of Visitors to foster communication with the practicing bar and to offer advice on policy matters and enjoyed a year of student success in trial advocacy and moot court competition.

The Atkinson Graduate School of Administration continued its successful combination of strong classroom teaching and close ties to business and government. The School's Center for Business-Government Studies expanded continuing education offerings and organized a national conference on educational trends in management, funded by General Electric Foundation and attended by deans of business, public, and "generic" management schools. The Center's work on regulation included a conference led by nationally recognized experts and publication of research papers. The School substantially strengthened its courses in marketing by adding a full-time specialist to the faculty.

As always, the University had a full complement of extracurricular activities to supplement academic programs. The student development office increased co-curricular programming in residences and added positions for two area directors, professional supervisors of the residence staff. Long known for its speaker program, the University probably drew the largest crowd for a campus event in University history when 4,000 jammed Sparks Center to hear Moshe Dayan.

A fall enrollment of 1,831 was the highest in University history, and development activities brought in the highest voluntary giving in five years. The total gifts from both government and voluntary sources equalled $3,401,565, the second highest total ever. The business office closed its year with an operating surplus of $58,178.

The four staff members who retired at the end of the school year probably totaled more years of service than any retiree group of the past. Henrietta Althoff (staff nurse), Ted Butler (law), Clarence Kraft (Spanish) and Bob Putnam were at Willamette 32, 31, 30 and 27 years, respectively, a total of 120 years.

Honorary degrees went to H. Leslie Frewing, an alumnus with a remarkable career as a medical missionary, and to Dr. William Boyd, University of Oregon president.

Dr. Boyd's eloquent address suggested accord with thoughts expressed by Dr. Lisensky: he cited Willamette's "commitment to humane learning, to the liberal arts and sciences, to the preservation and dissemination of that body of knowledge and values which form the cultural membrane which is all that separates humans from the savagery that lies below."

Tuition and Fees Income for Five Years

*Figures inside bars represent percent of total revenues for annual operating expenses which are derived from student tuition and fees.

Gift Highlights

- The gift total of $3,401,565 is the second highest in University history, exceeded only by 1968-69.
- Government funding was the highest ever, voluntary giving the highest since 1974-75.
- Gifts from all individuals, including alumni, decreased in number but increased in dollars by $199,858.
- Total gifts from voluntary sources for current operations increased $63,480 (eight percent) to $812,552.
- Giving from business and industry increased by 27 percent, led by Oregon Independent College Foundation, which gave $114,711 compared to $104,936 the previous year.
- Foundation giving dropped slightly, but that voluntary category continued to lead all others with $679,963.
- Church gifts increased 12 percent and associations went up five percent.
- Bequests received dropped to $29,151, but approximately $240,000 in bequests was in probate at year's end.
- The record government funding included $1,149,454 from the federal government and $544,774 from the state—respective increases of 27 percent and 38 percent and a total increase of 30 percent.

NEW FACULTY

Willamette adds 13 faculty members for 80-81

Nine new faces will be with the Willamette University College of Liberal Arts faculty for the 1980-81 academic year it was announced by Dean Jerry Berberet. In addition, three new law instructors and one new Atkinson Graduate School of Administration instructor have joined the Willamette faculty.

Joining the College of Liberal Arts will be Dale E. Lehman, Cheryle Lawrence, Rinda Lundstrom, Joanne Engel, Ludwig Fischer, John Uggen, Michael C. Ward, Ronald E. Jackson and Michael H. Strelow.

Lehman comes to Willamette from California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo. He will join the Willamette economics department. In his sixth year of teaching at the college level, Lehman, 29, earned his B.A. from State University of New York in 1972 and received his M.A. (1975) and his Ph.D. (1980) in economics from the University of Rochester.

Cheryle Lawrence joins the physical education department and will handle duties as Willamette trainer for 1980-81. She will also coach softball for the Bearcats. Lawrence earned her MST in Health Education/Sports Medicine from Portland State University in 1980 and received her undergraduate degree from George Fox College in Newberg.

Rinda Lundstrom will join the Willamette Theatre Department. A graduate in Fine Arts from the University of Utah (1972), she is currently a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Oregon. She has extensive teaching and production credentials having been involved as an instructor and producer at Westminster College in Utah and at the University of Oregon.

Joining the Education Department is Jodi Engel. She comes to Willamette from Oregon State University where she was an Assistant Professor. She holds a Ph.D. in Educational and Developmental Psychology from Iowa State University. She has a Master of Science degree from Iowa State and a Master of Education degree from the University of Sydney in Australia. Her Bachelor of Science is in Elementary Education from Pennsylvania State University.

Ludwig Fischer joins the Willamette faculty as an instructor of German. He holds a Ph.D. in German Literature from the University of Colorado and a B.A. equivalent in English and German from the University of Regensburg in West Germany. He was a lecturer in the Department of German at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis in 1977-78 and has since been involved in post doctoral research in Europe.

John Uggen will instruct Spanish at Willamette. He most recently has served on the faculty of Humanities and Education at the Universidad de Oriente in Cumana, Venezuela. His teaching experience also includes serving as a Latin American Teaching Fellow at Tufts University/Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy and at the State University of New York and the University of Miami. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Miami in Inter-American Affairs and has an M.A. in Foreign Languages also from the University of Miami. His B.A. degree is from the University of Oregon in Foreign Languages. Uggen has also served two years as a Peace Corps volunteer in Ecuador.

Michael Ward will teach computer science at Willamette. He comes to Willamette from Kearney State College in Kearney, Nebraska, where he was Assistant Professor of Computer Science. He also has teaching experience at Central Technical Community College in Grand Island, Nebraska. A 1974 graduate of California State University, Long Beach, with a Bachelor of Arts degree in mathematics, Ward also holds a Master of Science degree in computer science from the University of Oregon (1976).

Joining the Willamette faculty in a full-time capacity in the Sociology Department will be Ronald E. Jackson, who served as a part-time instructor in 1979-80. He also has teaching experience at the University of Maryland, Berry College in Mount Berry Georgia and Indiana University Southeast in New Albany, Indiana. His B.A. degree is from Indiana University in French. He has an M.A. and a Ph.D. in Sociology also from Indiana University.

Completing the list of new Willamette faculty is Michael Strelow, who will join the English Department. Most recently an instructor at the University of Oregon, Strelow also served as editor of Northwest Review, which is published on the University of Oregon campus. Prior to coming to Oregon, Strelow taught for five years in Spain and also has teaching experience at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. He earned his Bachelor of Arts degree from Miami in 1965 and his Master of Arts, also from Miami, in 1969. He completed his Ph.D. at the University of Oregon in 1979.

Joining the College of Law as visiting professors of law are David Freeman and Martin Feinrider. Christopher Simoni will also join the law faculty as Legal Research and Writing instructor.

Freeman comes to Willamette from Newport Beach, California, where he has served as a Management Attorney and consultant to private companies and local public entities in the areas of labor relations and personnel policy management, State-Federal government regulations and relations, organization development and management by objectives.

A licensed attorney in California, Freeman has had experience as a Federal Government Labor Relations

Attorney and as a law firm associate and partner in Los Angeles.

Freeman also has extensive experience in higher education, government and business, including serving as Assistant Dean of the Law School and Associate Director of University Development at Stanford University from 1959 to 1964.

Freeman holds a Bachelor of Business Administration from the University of Michigan and a Juris Doctor from Stanford University. He has done graduate work and is an MBA candidate at the University of California, Berkeley.

Martin Feinrider comes to Willamette from New York, where he is a member of the New York Bar and has a teaching background at State University of New York in Buffalo and Daemen College also in Buffalo. He also has experience as a law clerk and a consultant.

Feinrider, 33, received his Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts in Sociology from the State University of New York. He received his B.A. in 1968 and his M.A. in 1975. His Juris Doctor is from the State University of New York at Buffalo Law School and his LL.M. in International Legal Studies is from the New York University School of Law in New York, New York.

Christopher Simoni recently received his Juris Doctor from the Northwestern School of Law, Lewis and Clark College. He has a Ph.D. from Marquette University in American Literature Before 1900 and a Masters from Marquette in English and American Literature. His B.A. is from the University of Michigan.

Simoni, 34, has experience as a Law Clerk for Bullivant, Wright, Leedy, Johnson, Pendergrass and Hoffman of Portland and as a teaching assistant in Legal Methods, Research and Writing at the Northwestern School of Law.

The Atkinson Graduate School of Administration added Daniel R. Toy to the faculty for the 1980-81 school year. He comes to Willamette from the University of Washington where he has been an Assistant Professor of Marketing in the College of Business Administration for the past year.

He has also taught at the University of Oregon and Pennsylvania State University. Toy received his Ph.D. in Business Administration from Pennsylvania State in 1979. He also holds a master's degree in Mathematical Statistics and an M.B.A. with a marketing emphasis from the same school. His bachelor's degree in Economics is from the University of Vermont.

Salzburg trip on tap for summer

A delightful summer week of music and touring in Salzburg, Austria is waiting for Willamette University alumni and friends. The Willamette alumni office is planning a travel package to the "1981 Summer Music Festival" in Salzburg in July and August.

The tours include the option of a 10-day package or a 14-day package. The first option is the 10-day tour which provides accommodations for 10 nights at the Castle Eibenstein on the Wolfgang Seas (Lake). The package includes a rental car for five days to discover the beauty of the surrounding mountains, lakes and countryside. Two festival performances are also included and the opportunity for attending additional performances will also be available.

The second package includes four nights in Salzburg with two festival performances, four nights in Munich with a day visit to Kitzbuhel and four nights in Vienna. Tours of each city will be provided.

There is no limit on the number of people who may attend. The cost of the first package (10-days in Salzburg) is $1199, while the second option (14-day package for Munich, Vienna and Salzburg) is priced at $1499.

Those seeking further information concerning reservations, exact dates and travel arrangements are urged to contact the Willamette University Alumni Office (370-6356).

Four programs set for Continuing Education series

Willamette University's Continuing Education Series has planned four programs for the coming year. Along with the planned trip to Salzburg, Austria for the "1981 Summer Music Festival", the Willamette program has slated its annual trip to the Oregon Shakespearean Festival in Ashland, a Legal Education tour to London and a trip to the San Francisco Opera.

The Shakespeare tour is again planning three excursions to Ashland for the festival, including one during spring break as well as two summer tours.

The Legal Education tour to London will be in cooperation with the Willamette College of Law and is scheduled for the summer of '81.

Long range plans for a trip to the San Francisco Opera are scheduled for the fall of 1981 at this time.

Programs have not been finalized but those seeking further information about any of the scheduled Continuing Education series are urged to contact the Willamette University Alumni Office (370-6356).

ON THE SCENE

SHARON COTHRAN

Sharon Cothran, a Willamette junior, spent part of her summer vacation in the water off the California coast, diving with famed undersea explorer Jean-Michel Cousteau near Catalina Island. A member of Project Ocean Search-Pacific, Sharon was among participants from throughout the United States.

Dives and lectures dominated the 10-day experience for the 19-year old from Sacramento, California. A chemistry-biology major at Willamette, headed for a career in marine biology, she and her fellow divers earned a place in the project by submitting an essay along with an application for the position.

KEN YARNELL

One of the most involved students on the Willamette campus, Ken Yarnell, has added to his long list of campus activities. Yarnell was recently elected president of Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership honorary recognizing achievement in the five phases of campus life—scholarship, athletics, student government, social and religious affairs, publications and radio, music and dramatic arts.

At Willamette, Yarnell has also been involved in the Big Brother Program, student senate and Kappa Sigma Fraternity. The junior from Medford is majoring in History and Political Science at Willamette. He is also a member of the fellowship of Christian Athletes.

JANET OLIVER

A senior from Boise, Idaho, Janet Oliver, has been elected president of Mortor Board at Willamette University. Majoring in psychology and active in Willamette athletics, she will head the Willamette service group for the 1980-81 school year. The national leadership honorary recognizes seniors for superior service to the University.

Janet has received honors and Mary Collins scholarships while at Willamette and has been a mainstay on both the Bearcat softball and field hockey teams, earning All-Conference honors in the latter. Active in many campus programs, she is a member of Psi Chi and the Willamette Christian Body and has served as director of the Lausanne intramural program.

1971

I'm afraid the summer got away from me and I missed the July deadline—too much sun and sand I guess! Actually if I don't get this written this afternoon, I'll miss the September deadline too. So, on with the news!

First of all, Bill Shelton sends a hearty "hello" from Long Beach, CA. He reports that his wife, Julie, is a teacher and that he is an Associate of Mulhearn Realty Register.

Richard and Elsa Morris Hight are enjoying the mountains of Arizona in Lakeside. Richard graduated from Concordia Seminary in Indiana with a M.S. of Divinity. He is currently serving as Parish Pastor for the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod.

Rev. William and Joyce Gielow Russell have recently started a new Presbyterian Church in Hermiston, OR. They moved to Hermiston with their daughter, Jennifer (4) and new baby.

Don Hansen and his wife, Tricia, live in West Linn, OR. Don is an Industrial Engineer in Portland.

Leonard Valadez is living in Puyallup, WA where he is a Research Engineer for Weyerhaeuser Company.

Gary Weigel is a mathematician for the Defense Mapping Agency. Gary is making his home in Bethesda, MD.

Carol Taranoff Stearns is living in Forest Grove, OR. Carol is a partner in the C.P.A. firm, Cornutt and Stearns.

Gail Donovan has continued with her artistic interest and is a Gallery Assistant for the Carmel Art Association in Carmel, CA.

William Flores writes that he is a High School teacher in Roslyn, WA. William is living in Seattle.

Debby Speer has been promoted with Nordstrom's. Debby is now manager of the Misses Clothing Dept. She would love to see any of you who are shopping at Washington Square—get some expert advice for your fall wardrobe too!

We missed Lillian Bladine Whelan at a summer AX reunion, but discovered that she and husband, Tom, are living in Salem. Lillian is substituting in the high schools as a PE teacher.

That is all the news I have to report! Please let me know of your comings and goings—additions to the sandbox set, etc. Have a wonderful fall—try to relax before the holiday rush!

1972

Richard Jacobson is an Associate Broker for Bullier and Bullier. He and his wife, Lynn, make their home in Milwaukie, OR.

Pat and Carla (Morris) Tate have relocated from Arizona to Portland, OR. Pat is a Project Engineer for Willamette Western Corp. Pat and Carla have two children, Son, Christopher is 3 years, and daughter, Deborah, born March 29, 1980.

Getting back in the groove

The "Old Guard" was back on campus for a whack at the youngsters on Sept. 20 when the annual Varsity vs. Alumni football game kicked off the season for the Bearcat gridgers.

With maybe all of one day to practice, the alumni team turned in its typically strong effort before tiring in the fourth quarter when the varsity scored 22 points to finally win 25-3. Despite the loss, the day was worth it to those on the field and in the stands. Some of those past stars making it tough for the varsity included last year's "Fearsome Foursome" defensive line of Rob Skinner, Ken Garland, David Wong and Ted Eady (top right), 1972 grad Denny Danielson (bottom right) and 1962 grad Dick Carney (57) and Jim Johnson (84) (below). Doug Austin from the 1960 Bearcat team and Ned Moser from the '62 'Cats were the oldest returning players to suit up. Ken Garland and Mark Stevens, who both played for the alums, acted as coaches. Despite the score, it was a triumphant return for the Bearcat alumni team.

Clark Terry sets concert for Willamette Nov. 3

Jazz will be the order of the evening Nov. 3 at Willamette University's Smith Auditorium when noted trumpet and flugelhorn player Clark Terry and the Jolly Giants perform in Concert as part of Willamette's Distinguished Artist Series.

Terry, who is considered one of the great contemporary trumpet and flugelhorn players, dates his jazz roots to Count Basie, Duke Ellington and Charlie Barnett and his own style has influenced such top performers as Miles Davis and Quincy Jones.

Terry and the Jolly Giants are scheduled to appear in Smith for an 8 p.m. concert and tickets are available at the Willamette Bookstore, the Willamette Music Department and at Stevens and Son in Salem.

Awarded an honorary doctorate in humane letters by the University of New Hampshire in 1978, Terry and the Jolly Giants have toured both India and West Africa under sponsorship of the State Department.

A featured soloist while with Duke Ellington and also with the Tonight Show orchestra for 12 years, Terry is a native of St. Louis who began his career on a coiled-up length of water hose.

Also a teacher, Terry is noted as one of the leaders in jazz education throughout the country. Both his Jolly Giants and Big Baad Band groups have received Grammy nominations for their recordings.

Included in the Jolly Giants group are Chris Woods, reeds, Charles Fox, piano, Lee "Mickey" Bass, bass, and Charles Braugham, drums, all noted soloists in their own right.

Tickets for the Monday evening performance are priced at $6.50 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Series tickets are also still available at all outlets and include the Clark Terry performance along with the remaining Distinguished Artist Series performances scheduled this season. On tap Feb. 3 is the Bert Houle-Sophie Wibaux Mime Theatre and set for an appearance March 1 is the American String Quartet.

Further information concerning tickets and times of the Willamette University Distinguished Artist Series is available by calling the Willamette Music Department.

The Series is sponsored by the Willamette University Department of Music and funded partially by the Oregon Arts Commission, National Endowment for the Arts and the Western Arts Foundation.

HOME COMING 1980 SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1980

Dear Alumni and Families:

You are welcome to participate in W.U. Homecoming festivities. A full day of activities are planned for your enjoyment.

Julie Moberly and Barbara Rife
Homecoming Chairpersons

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

- 9:00-11:00 a.m. Registration, Putnam University Center Lobby
Campus Tours — Leave from Putnam University Center Information Desk.
All living organizations welcome you to an open house.
- 10:30 a.m. Enjoy the fun of Willamette's crazy spirit while watching past Freshman Glee and recruiting films. A special slide presentation will outline WU feature growth. (Autzen Senate Chambers, Putnam University Center)
- 11:30 a.m. Informal luncheon in the Cat Cavern for all alumni and their families, featuring special entertainment and a guest speaker.
- 12:30-1:15 p.m. Noise Parade leaving from the George Putnam University Center for McCulloch Stadium.
- 1:30-4:30 p.m. WU vs. Pacific Lutheran University, (cheer your Alma Mafa on to victory at the football game) Also special half-time entertainment and Homecoming competition awards.
- 4:30 p.m. Informal Post-Game get together (no-host) at the Ram. Organized by the Campus Relations and Special Events Committee of the Alumni Association.
- 8:00 p.m. Enjoy WU theatre production "Childs Play" by Robert Marasco. The play is a fascinating study of a Catholic boarding school invaded by evil shadows of hatred and terror. Marasco displays considerable insight into the perverse depths of the human soul. Contact Theatre department for ticket information (503) 370-6223.
- 9:00 p.m. ASWU welcomes alumni to an all campus dance featuring a live band in the Cat Cavern, Putnam University Center.

REGISTRATION FEE

Due to dramatic increases in the costs involved in setting up events for Homecoming, it was, regrettably, decided to incorporate a modest registration fee of $2.00 per person or $3.00 per family. We believe these programs should be more or less self-supporting so they do not detract from the academic life of the University.

RESERVATION FORM — HOME COMING 1980

A TRIBUTE

By October 14, Willamette had received $33,275 from scholarship gifts in memory of G. Herbert Smith. These gifts, added to previous funds given for scholarship in his name, bring the total to $63,930. Those who wish to add to this tribute may send gifts to G. Herbert Smith Memorial Scholarship Fund, c/o Willamette University, Salem, Oregon 97301.

A total commitment to Willamette

The passing of G. Herbert Smith, for so long president of Willamette University, will awaken happy and inspiring memories.

We who were privileged to know and work with him are an especially favored company, for he was truly a remarkable man. So pervasive was his service to the school, so tremendous his impact upon the lives of its faculty and students, that many will be ready to declare that Dr. Smith was Willamette for more than a quarter century.

In noting our sense of pride in G. Herbert Smith and our gratitude toward him, we think of the vital roles he played.

As a man and educator he was an exemplar. He insisted that the university community strive for the highest personal and academic standards and then devoted himself to meeting those standards in his own life and work.

As a leader he covered more ground than seemed humanly possible. His energy was incredible, his devotion to Willamette unwavering. He was invariably affirmative, encouraging, filled with a sense of the possible. He was quick to compliment—thousands of calls and notes must have come from his office to people who had served the University in a way he thought beneficial. He was slow to criticize and his critiques were constructive and for the good of Willamette.

In 1962 I took four students to New York City for the nationally televised "College Bowl." Our departure from the airport was accompanied by the cheers of a large crowd and the music of the band. Alas, we lost against a better team. We flew back to Salem, landing on a dark morning amid a downpour. There alone in the rain was President Smith, hand extended, to welcome us back to the campus. Win or lose, his commitment to every Willamette activity was total.

"G. Herbert's" unflagging zeal in attracting support for the university, his vision in building, his effectiveness in representing Willamette throughout the nation, his grace, wit and complete fairness as a presiding officer; all of these will be remembered by grateful colleagues still teaching or in retirement.

Most poignantly we think of Herb Smith as a friend genuinely interested in us and our families, and generous with congratulations or sympathy. He was our president and a sincere friend as well.

Our institutions outlive us. One way in which a mortal being perpetuates himself is leaving his mark on something of which he was a part. G. Herbert Smith shaped Willamette for nearly three decades. If we try to imagine the university today without its ever having been the beneficiary of his wisdom, vision and energy, or having been moved by his force, we must conceive of a Willamette that has much less of excellence and the capacity to enrich than in truth it has.

I borrow from history a most appropriate epitaph for this great builder of the modern Willamette University: "If you would see his monument, look about you."

We see a beautiful campus, home of an educational institution of everlarger reputation. And over the horizon is his imposing memorial—the host of Willamette graduates everywhere contributing significantly to a better world.

We are grateful for G. Herbert Smith's life and for his giving of himself. We move forward with a sense of his presence.

This editorial by Dr. Howard Runkel appeared in the Salem Statesman-Journal on September 10 of this year.

G. Herbert Smith's Willamette years included a family portrait (top right), an alumni banquet smile (bottom right) and an academic procession with another former president, Carl Doney.
