Homecoming-1951

The calendar of events for Willamette's 30th annual Homecoming celebration October 26th and 27th is ample enough to take every moment from the 5 a.m. frosh leaf-rake on Friday until midnight Saturday, when the ASWU dance brings the 1951 Homecoming to an end.

Under the chairmanship of Earl Atkinson, son of George Atkinson, '26, Friday's activities, following the pre-dawn leaf madcap, include a 9 o'clock deadline for homecoming signs to be erected by organizations and an adjudication of the signs at 4 p.m. The noise parade, most clamorous event of the weekend, starts its winding trail to downtown Salem at 7, culminating with a bonfire rally at 8 in Bush's park.

Honored guests of this year's Homecoming will be the first Willamette Northwest Conference football champions, the class of 1929, and Willamette's Little All-Americans!

A 10 a.m. registration for alums begins Saturday's chain of events. Registration will be held in the Alumni Office, first floor of the gymnasium, where alums may also pick up tickets in advance for the luncheon.

Time for a pre-luncheon conversational period has been scheduled at 11 a.m. in the lobby of the Marion Hotel. Luncheon will be served at 11:30 in the Mirror Room, Marion Hotel, so that alums will have sufficient time to arrive at McCulloch Stadium for the 2 o'clock kick-off between College of Puget Sound and Willamette.

The post-game reception (about 4:30) has been arranged at Lausanne hall — no formal speeches, no formal entertainment — just getting re-acquainted and reminis-

The annual Homecoming cance, semiformal, will begin at 9 p.m.

AF ROTC Begins Campus Program

With full appointment of four commissioned and six non-commissioned officers and completion of new campus headquarters, the Willamette AF ROTC program began operation at the start of fall semester, under the direction of Maj. Norman W. Campion, professor of air science and tactics.

Major Campion was assistant professor in the Oregon State college AF ROTC before assuming his new position at Willamette

Other staff members of the program are: Maj. Gilbert H. Charters, assistant professor of air science and tactics and director of the basic unit; Maj. John W. Thompson, assistant professor and director of administration and logistic specialties; Capt. Theodore M. Velde, assistant professor and supervisor of flight operations.

Instructors are M/Sgts. Marvin C. Buckem, Eugene L. Bull, Robert C. Hartman, Benjamin E. Morgan and T/Sgt. Horace

K. Mazloom. New classrooms, offices and supply rooms have been renovated in the gymnasium for the AF ROTC unit.

262 Pints Of Blood Given

Willamette's first "bloodmobile" day on the campus, October 9th, was termed "very successful" by Marion county Red Cross officials who received 262 pints of blood, donated between 1 and 5 p.m. by university students and faculty members.

The blood, destined for military consumption exclusively, was shipped directly from Salem.

A total of 285 students and faculty members turned out, with 20 students rejected because they were not old enough, Edwin H. Armstrong, who directed the program, reported. Armstrong is associate director of development at Willamette.

Forty volunteer workers, nurses and doctors from the Salem area participated in the blood program which was conducted in the gymnasium.

Fall Enrollment Hits 1064

Final registration figures for fall semester revealed a high of 1064, just five students less than last year's enrollment, it was announced by Harold B. Jory, registrar.

The college of liberal arts led the enrollment with 902 and an approximate ratio of two men to every woman. College of music followed with 87 students and a two to one ratio in favor of the women.

Willamette's law school enlisted 75, with only one woman represented in the entire student body.

Salem had the largest urban representation of students on campus, with Portland running a close second, only five less students listing the Rose City as home.

Gunn Wins Coveted Scholarship

Jack Gunn, who graduated magna cum laude from Willamette in June, has been awarded the Root-Tilden scholarship in law at New York University, it was disclosed by Russell D. Niles, dean of the New York University school of law.

Gunn was one of 20 men throughout the United States chosen for the honor.

Two scholarships were awarded in each of the 10 judicial circuits in the country. Gunn was selected from the circuit comprised of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Hawaii, Alaska and Puerto Rico.

The scholarship, offered for the first time this year, grants $2100 per year. It is renewable for all three years of law school.

Founded in honor of two eminent New York University graduates, Elihu Root and Samuel Tilden, the scholarship is for young men interested in entering politics, and/or government and diplomatic service.

In addition to formal law training, it provides special tutoring in the social sciences. Students are introduced to leaders in government, diplomatic corps, finance and the courts.

Criteria for selection is based on scholastic attainment and ability, extra-curricular activity record and accomplishments and potentiality for leadership.

Famous Four In Artist Series

Student proposed, planned and supportted, the Willamette Distinguished Artist Series will bring to Salem this year Bidu Sayao, Yehudi Menuhin, Solomon and William Warfield, it was reported last week in The Collegian.

Bidu Sayao, beautiful soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera, opens the concert season November 10.

Another internationally known artist, Yehudi Menuhin, will appear December 20 in a violin concert. He began his career with his first public appearance in San Francisco at the age of seven.

The English pianist, Solomon, is scheduled in the third concert of the series, January 17. He performed before the King and Queen of England when only nine.

The American baritone William Warfield, who received national plaudits for his singing of "Old Man River" in the recent movie, "Show Boat," concludes the series with an appearance March 5.

ARTICLE VI—Move amending of this article to read: There shall be at least three regular business meetings each year, the times to coincide with Homecoming, Freshman Glee, and Alumni Day; the time and place to be determined by the Executive committee, and the election of officers of the association shall be conducted and held in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 4 of this Constitution as last amended

"Around the Campus"

Dr. J. Richard Sneed, minister of the First Methodist church of Los Angeles, was principal speaker at the ninety-ninth annual Oregon conference of the Methodist church which convened on the Willamette campus June 12-17.... Sixteen men enrolled in Willamette's advanced workshop for coaches which was offered for the first time this summer, under the direction of Coaches Chester Stackhouse and John Lewis.

Studying coaching techniques in basketball, baseball, football and track were: Les Roberts and Irving Miller, Wheeler: Henry W. Landis, Dean Nice and Leo A. Stenback, Salem; Jack Tilton, Newport; Bill Patterson, Gervais; Robert Bailey, Milwaukie; Eric Fitzsimons, Jefferson; Lowell Yeager, Enterprise; Merrill Boyle, Stayton; Robert Tiernan, Port Orford; Gerald Gastineau, Newport; Roy Harrington, Taft; Bernard Burnett, Pilot Rock and Jack Mudd, Astoria.

Twenty scholarships of $200 and $100 were granted to Willamette and Lewis and Clark Co lege in July by the Elk Lumber company, of Medford. The scholarships are to be awarded to outstanding high school graduates of Jackson county who "have shown qualities of Christian leadership and devotion to high ideals and standards of conduct". Awards will be made upon the basis of the student's qualities of leadership as a Christian student during his high school career. Candidates must have a three point grade average or better.

Two new Methodist district superintendents were elected to the Willamette board of trustees by the Oregon conference of the Methodist church this summer. They are Dr. George G. Roseberry, new Salem district superintendent and Dr. Milton Marcy, newly appointed to the Forest Grove district superintendency. The Reverends Roseberry and Marcy will serve on the university board of trustees for a three-year term, ending in 1954 Carlotta Hendricks, third year student in the college of law (and only woman enrolled for fall semester) broke a 15-year record for Salem women when she was initiated into Phi Delta Delta, national legal fraternity for women, in Portland. The occasion marked the first time in more than a decade that a Salem woman has been taken into the legal organization.

Mrs. Charles A. Ratcliff, Salem resident and world traveler, consummated plans in late July with university officials for the establishment of a perpetually endowed book collection for the Willamette library. Convinced that information about the customs and thought-habits of other people will encourage understanding and sympathy, thus contributing to world peace, Mrs. Ratcliff made an initial grant of 50 new publications to the library, with another 45 books purchased this fall. Each year an approximate 60 volumes will be added to the growing collection.

Three members of Willamette's music faculty participated in six events of the western division of the Music Teachers' National Association convention in Portland, August 15-18. The occasion marked the first biennial convention of the nine-state music division. Melvin H. Geist, dean of the music college, Stanley Butler, assistant professor of piano and music literature and Dr. Willis C. Gates, associate professor of violin, orchestra and theory, attended the four-day convention . . . Eleanor Payne, comely queen of the 1951 Tournament of Roses and sister of Howard Payne, '52, entered the college of liberal arts as a freshman this fall.

Dr. Edward C. Kollmann, assistant professor of philosophy at Willamette, was named one of three professors to present a paper at a joint meeting of the Pacific conference on teaching philosophy and the Pacific division of the American Philosophical Association in Vancouver, B. C., in September. Dr. Kollmann's treatise discussed "the course in Oriental philosophy." . . . , Eighty-one coeds were pledged to sororities at the close of fall rushing and 84 men took pledge pins of the four national fraternities on campus.

The first showing of 26 new works by Carl Hall, artist in residence and instructor at Willamette, were on display in the art gallery on campus for a three week run, closing last week. The Salem artist showed oil and ink paintings, water colors, woodcuts and wood engravings. All of the works were completed within the past year. One of Hall's oil paintings was sent to MacBeth galleries in New York, following its appearance at the university. The young artist has also been invited to show a painting at the Whitney Museum contemporary exhibition in New York.

Three university professors were awarded doctorate degrees this summer, two in education and one in sociology. Charles H. Derthick, assistant professor of psychology, was awarded a doctorate of education in counseling and guidance, from Oregon State college. Kenneth V. Lottick, associate professor of social studies, earned a doctorate degree in education from Harvard university on

Dr. Norman Huffman, Willamette University professor of religion, contrasts a roll of microfilm containing images of volumes of manuscripts to a reproduction of two pages of manuscript. Dr. Huffman brought the microfilm with him after research in Italy on old Bible manuscripts.

Five Join Teaching Faculty

Five new faculty members have been added to the Willamette university staff this year, four in the college of liberal arts and one in the college of music.

Dean F. Graunke is the new instructor in drama, Graunke received his BA and MA from Nebraska and has worked toward his Ph.D at Northwestern. He also studied Shakespearean drama in Shrivenham, England.

Samuel E. Keeton has assumed duties as assistant librarian. Keeton was a member of the OSC library staff for two years and during the last war worked in overseas library activities.

Donald G. DeLisle has been named an instructor in biology. Last year he was a graduate assistant in biology at the University of Oregon where he received his BS and MS degrees.

Mrs. Phyllis Jane Goakey, new physical education instructor for women, received her BS degree in PE at Washington State College.

Miss Ethel Lou Stanek was named a fulltime instructor in cello at the college of Music. Miss Stanek graduated cum laude from Lawrence college in 1949. In the new position she will instruct in cello and theory and assist in piano.

A multitude of requests have poured into the physics department within the last two months for reprints of an article, "The Design of Thin-windowed Geiger-Meuller

Religious Educator Returns From Italy

Willamette's professor of religion, Dr. Norman Huffman arrived on campus last month following a nine months stay in Italy where he delved into ancient Biblical manuscripts and documents—results of this research will be published with those of an international group of scholars.

Fulbright scholarship recipient Dr. Norman Huffman. professor of religion, returned to campus last month after nine months study of ancient religious documents in Italy where he studied some of the earliest fragments of the New Testament. His findings will be incorporated, along with those of an international group of scholars, into the work "Evidences for the Greek Text of the New Testament," which will be published by the Oxford University Press.

Dr. Huffman and his wife, Ruth (who was on the Willamette faculty in the department of art), were awarded two of the 20 Fulbright scholarships granted last year from the United States for research in Italy.

The Huffmans sailed for Europe last October, where Dr. Huffman focused his research upon comparison of printed Greek tests and manuscripts of the gospels, while Mrs. Huffman studied modern Italian art.

While studying Greek manuscripts Dr. Huffman acquired microfilms which he will continue to study here. The works he studied in Italy were largely importations from Palestine, Greece and Egypt which were collected during the Renaissance by such art-loving families, the Bourbons and the Medicis.

"The best in the world" is Dr. Huffman's comment about the Vatican library to which he had access for research during his stay in Rome. Although it was in Italy's capital city that he studied principally, the religious educator also carried on his work in Milan and Venice.

The Grotto Ferrata, one of the last remaining Greek monasteries located but 10 miles from Rome, was of particular interest to him. "The monastery represents the point farthest west and north reached by the monks in their flight from the Arabs in the ninth century," he explains.

"Although this monastery has now become a part of the Roman church," reports Dr. Huffman, "the monks still cling to some of the ancient traditions and dress of their order, wearing beards and curious hats which resemble stove-pipes."

Among the many texts to which he devoted hours of study (some of which had not been studied previously) was one text which had been used by the Bishop of Bulgaria in the 11th century; another, studied in Zurich, Switzerland, was "one of the most beautiful I have ever seen," says Dr. Huffman. This particular volume, of purple vellum with the writing in silver and gold, contained the psalms and selections from the New Testament.

The Fulbright scholarship on which Dr. and Mrs. Huffman studied provides travel and living expenses. The scholarship, named for its instigator, Senator Fulbright, is a method used by foreign governments to pay for surplus war materials received by them during the war.

Counters" which appeared in the August issue of the Review of Scientific Instruments, publication of the American Institute of Physics, New York. The article dealing with radioactive carbon and sulfur was tri-authored by Dr. R. L. Purbrick, associate professor of physics at Willamette ('42), Lawrence Cherry and James Carpenter, both '51 graduates. Latest request for the reprint was received from the National Physical Laboratory in Pretoria, South Africa. Other groups asking for the article have been cancer research institutes, biochemical research foundations, industrial research laboratories, medical school organizations and physics and chemistry departments in universities throughout the country. Persons engaged in atomic energy projects in the United States and Canada have requested reprints.

A new record was established in Willamette University's freshman class this year with 16 former high school student body presidents in the first-year class. The ex-high school leaders represent four states Eighty-one students and 13 cities were named to the 1951-52 membership roll of the university a cappella choir by Dean Melvin H. Geist, of the music school . . An average of four out of five Willamette University graduates receiving teacher education degrees this June were appointed to positions in the educational field this fall, it was announced by Dr. Kenneth Lottick, director of teacher edu-

Mrs. Regina Ewalt, dean of women, presided at the Oregon State Dean's association bi-annual meeting at Waldport, October 12-14. Mrs. Ewalt was recently named president of the organization, whose membership includes deans from high school and colleges throughout Oregon . . . President G. Herbert Smith returned from Washington, D. C., last week where he attended a board of directors' meeting of the American Association of Colleges.

An American in Bordeaux

A Willamette graduate of 1950 recounts some impressions recorded while an English assistant in a French secondary school situated in southern France.

By Gary Lawrence

Being an English assistant in a French secondary school provided me with experiences that were challenging, interesting, sometimes humorous, and always broadening.

My work, which took only about twelve hours a week, consisted of informal classes in English, largely conversational in scope, with some emphasis on the United States. I taught only the three upper forms (15 to 18 years of age) and the "grandes ecoles," which are advanced students doing preparatory work in a special class, such as colonial administration, agriculture, or philosophy.

Some of my students were as old as I, and many spoke English very well. I was asked anything from the implications of Senator Taft's speeches, to the moral qualities of Rita Hayworth. I quickly learned to retaliate with questions like: "How do you make white wine from red grapes?" So all of us did research, and I'm sure I learned as much as my students.

French pupils have much work to do, and the educational emphasis is on facts. Classroom discussions are practically non-existent, and extra-curricular activities are extremely limited. Pupils are weeded out beginning at the age of about fourteen. Competition is keen, and one must be bright to succeed in secondary school, and near-brilliant to graduate from university.

I lived in Bordeaux, a city of tremendous rainfall, so I was right at home. Bordeaux is very interesting from an historical point of view, but I did not find it especially pretty, and certainly not clean. The city does have a rather solid sort of eighteenth-century charm, and I became quite attached to it.

It is well-located from the point of view of travel, and besides week-end bicycle trips to the beach, chateaux, forests, winecellars, and villages near Bordeaux, I went to the Pyrenees, Corsica, Provence, and the Valley of the Dordogne. At Christmas time I met three former Willamette students in Paris: Henry Cooper ('50), Louise Ellis ('49), and Dale Nusom ('52). Henry was teaching at Cherbourg, Louise was studying at Aix-en-Provence (near Marseilles), and Dale was (and is) stationed with the Air Force near London. Henry and I also ran into John Christensen ('49) in the American Express Office in Paris when we first arrived. He was just ready to return after a tour of Europe. I met Dr. George Hocking quite by accident in London in August, just before he came back from conducting a study group at Grenoble, France. I'm convinced that it's a small world after all,

After a cycling-camping trip into Normandy and Brittany with Dale Nusom just before leaving France, I spent a month in England, Scotland and Wales, visiting friends that I met in Bordeaux, before I caught the "Liberte" for New York and home.

In Bordeaux, I went to the "Grand Theatre" often. It is one of the best in Europe, and one can see operas, ballets, concerts, and plays at ridiculously low prices. I was active in a small discussion group of international affairs, went to lectures on all subjects, saw bull fights and movies and assisted at ceremonies.

Many doors were opened to me because of my position, and as a result of the interest I showed in practically all facets of French life, I was able to see rehearsals at the theater, have a seat reserved at trials in the courts, and go on special excursions. I was very hospitably received, and these experiences and my contacts with the French in their homes and at public affairs made my year's stay one not to be forgotten.

Law School Leads New Barrister List

Willamette's college of law retained its record in leading Oregon schools in percentage of graduates successful in Oregon State bar examinations, according to announcement by the Oregon supreme court in mid-September.

Twenty-one of 22 Willamette graduates, or 95 per cent, passed the test. This was the second year that the law college achieved the highest percentage of graduates passing the bar examination.

University of Oregon was second, with a percentage of 80.7. Northwestern college of law, in Portland, rated third in the state-wide bar examination. The school had a 77.4 percent of graduates passing the test.

"I am especially pleased," said Seward P. Reese, dean of the law school, "that Willamette came out on top again in view of the fact that we have the lowest elimination rate in the west."

Willamette graduates successful in the examination were:

Homer L. Allen, Robert H. Anderson, Elmer G. Baldwin, James M. Fitzgerald, Walter W. Foster, Jr., Omar W. Halvorson, Wayne Hilliard, Murely M. Larimer, John B. Matheny, Harry H. Ohlmann, Jr., Dale W. Pierson, William S. Pilling, Erwin W. Potter, Julius R. Slocum, Robert E. Smith, Robert M. Stults, George D. Wilson and Douglas E. Kaufman, all of Salem.

Francis J. Larkin and Edwin A. York of Portland, Robert L. Davis of South Bend, Wash.

Summer Session Swells to 167

Summer school enrollment this year reached a high of 167. The substantial registration tabulations were partly due to last-minute enrolling of men and women taking advantage of last days for education benefits offered under the GI Bill.

Break-down of the total number of registrants showed 111 men and 42 women enrolled for the eight-week course.

A geographical survey of the summer session population indicated that 18 states, Canada and Norway were represented among the 167 students.

Sports

Willamette's freshman-loaded Bearcats launched their football season in fine fashion at Spokane Sept. 22 as they took the measure of the Whitworth Pirates by a 20-13 count in a tilt which saw first-year men and vets sharing honors for the Methodists.

Little Chuck Lewis, the frosh scatback sensation from Seattle, and burly Chuck Koani, the 200-pound terror from Hawaii, spearheaded the Willamette attack but got plenty of help from Halfback Bob Shangle and Quarterback Rick Bingham plus some able work by the WU forward wall.

Koani romped nine yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter to sew up the tilt for Coach Chester Stackhouse's men. The diminutive Lewis chalked up well over a hundred yards in his ball-lugging efforts and collectively the Bearcats' rushing game was good for better than 300 yards — one of their best marks in recent years.

In their second game of the campaign at Caldwell, Idaho, on Friday night, Sept. 29, the Willamettes bowed to College of Idaho's Coyotes, 10-0 in opening Northwest conference warfare.

The Bearcats and Coyotes battled fruitlessly through three full quarters before the Idahoans finally came through with a touchdown and field goal in the final period to wrap up the tilt.

A recovered WU fumble set up the Coyote touchdown, Quarter Jack Kennevick dropping on the ball on the Idaho 49. From there the Caldwell club marched all the way, with Fullback Bob Morford plunging over for the big six points.

A couple of exchanges later Center Anie Lewis intercepted a Willamette pass deep in Bearcat territory to give the Coyotes their chance at the field goal. Dick Turner thumped the three points from the 10 yard line.

Willamette, failing to show the punch displayed in the game with Whitworth, had three opportunities deep within enemy territory during the game on recovery of fumbles, but couldn't put the ball across.

Chuck Lewis once again was the ballcarrying standout for the Stackhouse club.

Outstanding on defense for the Willamettes in their opening two tilts were Guard Ken Cooper and Bob Hall, the linebacking specialist. Tom Colleran and Don Hayes, a pair of freshmen, showed well at flank slots.

Willamette university's Bearcats dropped their second Northwest conference game of the campaign Saturday, Oct. 6th, as they bowed to a big and veteran gang of Pacific's Badgers, 26-6.

The Badgers got a quick jump on the green Willamette squad as Gerald Millis ran the opening kickoff back 90 yards for a touchdown. Dr. Paul Stagg's men from Forest Grove added another pair of sixpointers in the second quarter to gain more than the margin they needed to nip Coach Chester Stackhouse's men.

The lone Bearcat touchdown came on the last play of the game as Bob Shangle scored from ten yards out on a Statue of Liberty play to cap an 80-yard touchdown march.

Millis also tallied the second Badger TD, going ten yards around the flank early in the second quarter. Jim Sunderland scored the third Pacific touchdown as he plunged over from the one to culminate a fairly long thrust.

The deciding factor in the tilt was just too much Pacific helf and experience against a WU club with a strong flavoring of green men.

Campus Golfer Takes Honors

One of the outstanding individual stars in the Willamette university sports picture is golfer Bill Wittenberg, Portland sophomore.

Bill, adding to his links reputation all the time, played a heavy schedule of tournaments during the summer and came out with no few honors.

Wittenberg placed second in the Utah State Open, captured the annual Elkssponsored Mid-Willamette Valley tourney at Salem, teamed with Bud Ward to win the Northwest Pro-Amateur meet and just recently finished second in the Oregon Golf Association's state meet.

Any list of fine young linksters of the northwest is sure to include the name of the Bearcat star.
