Busy Forensic Team Wins Honors

Dr. Howard Runkel has again coached the Willamette forensic team to numerous honors this year, as 14 students have or will participate in eight speech tournaments in four states and British Columbia this school year.

In addition to inter-collegiate competition, the students have presented various demonstration debates for high school audiences and service clubs and the speech veterans have participated in tournament judging.

Sophomore Carol Pratt of Portland has led the forensic team to achievement with first place gold trophies in each of the three meets she has competed in this year as an interpretative reader. Other firsts have been won by freshman Virginia Bell, Coos Bay, in oratorical competition with college juniors and seniors; freshman Stephen Blixseth, Salem, in interpretative reading; and Clifford "Kip" Stilz, Olympia, Wash., for extemporaneous speaking. Numerous second and third place honors have been awarded to the Willamette speakers this year.

Dr. Runkel, in his 15th year at Willamette, has annually turned out top-flight speakers. His students have competed in meets throughout the west, last year even adding Hawaii to the list. Four times Willamette has been represented in speech tournaments at West Point. Dr. Runkel also coached Willamette's College Bowl team in 1962.

DuPont, Shell Grants Earmarked

The Willamette chemistry department will receive the main benefit from two grants totaling $6,500 from the E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company and the Shell Companies Foundation.

Half of the $5,000 du Pont gift will be directly administered by the chemistry department while the remainder will be applied to the education of scientists and engineers.

Shell's grant will be split into thirds, with $500 each going to (1) the chemistry department (2) the general fund and (3) to bolster general faculty development. This is the fifth straight year Willamette has received a Shell donation, with the funds previously being used to increase facilities in science, encourage faculty travel and special research, and for chemistry needs.

Students Stage Original Musical

"The Lady's Game," an original musical comedy written by senior Barbara Davis, Salem, and sophomore David Welch, Portland, both students in the College of Music, was performed early in January.

The plot concerned the attempt of a gambling syndicate to put the fix on the star basketball player of Belleston University. Leading the scheme was none other than the chairman of the board of trustees, a seductive blonde. Two romantic crises and a "scatter-brained, keyhole listening bookworm" are combined to complicate the plot and provide the comedy. It all added up to a pleasurable performance.

This is a scene from "The Lady's Game," a musical comedy authored, composed and staged successfully by Willamette students.

Miss Davis indicated that the script, originally intended for presentation in Varsity Varieties, was rewritten 23 times and that over 40 songs were composed before the final 10 were selected. Thirty-two students were in the cast and about that number had chores behind the scenes. Allan Stevens, Jr. ('62) directed the play and was the only non-student involved.

SAE Chapter Receives Award

Willamette's chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity recently received a Summa Cum Laude award for superior scholarship by the National Interfraternity Conference. It was one of ten awards presented nationally.

The chapter had to attain an all-house grade average that was at least 30 per cent higher than the University's all men's grade average. For the academic year of 1963-64 the fraternity chapter achieved a 3.14 average, while the all men's mark was 2.74.

The year previous to this award the Willamette chapter was adjudged first in scholarship among the 143 SAE chapters, while the Summa Cum Laude presentation takes into consideration all college social fraternities in the nation.

Arts Festival Scheduled for April

A Festival of Contemporary Arts, initiated by Dean Charles Bestor of the College of Music and sponsored by the University, will be held on campus April 20-25 featuring the combined talents of the music school and the English, art and drama departments as well as outside lecturers.

Lectures will be presented on contemporary music, art and electronic music; the Community Symphony of Salem, Willamette band and Faculty Chamber Ensemble will perform; and the Phi Mu Alpha Chamber group will perform original compositions, including the national winner of the Willamette-Eta Pi composition contest.

In addition, it is planned that various art exhibits will be on display, films will be shown, poetry read and plays performed. The entire festival will be open to the public free of charge.

Willamette's choir, under the direction of Gordon Voiles, will take its annual Spring tour April 2-11, performing in Northern Oregon and throughout Washington. Four days later and running through April 19, the choir will join Dr. Charles Heiden's Willamette Chamber Orchestra for a swing through Northeastern Oregon.

Maurice Brennen, in his 24th year as band director, conducted Willamette's 46-piece band on a tour of Oregon coastal cities during semester break.

Two other groups that have been performing at various times through the year are the Willamette Baroque Ensemble (Dr. Heiden, Mrs. Heiden and Mildred Edmundson) and the faculty chamber group of Dr. Heiden, Miss Edmundson, Ralph Dobbs and Delbert Chinburg, while Prof. Dobbs and various students have presented recitals through the year.

Assistant Chaplain Joins Staff

Chaplain Merlin W. McGladrey, a retired Lieutenant Colonel of the United States Air Force, joined the Willamette administrative staff in January as assistant chaplain and general administrator.

A graduate of Hamline University (Minn.) and Garrett Biblical Institute (Ill.), Chaplain McGladrey later became the outstanding graduate of Air Command and Staff College of Air University.

His 20 years of Air Force duty included assignments in Korea, Japan, France, England and Germany, as well as being a staff member of the Air Force Chaplains School in New York. His most recent assignment was at Larson AFB at Moses Lake, Wash.

Chaplain McGladrey gave up a pastorate in Minnesota to enter the Eighth Air Force during World War II. He again gave up a pastorate to enter the Korean conflict and remained in the service until November of last year.

In 1954, Chaplain McGladrey was selected as one of 25 representative graduates of Hamline during the college's centennial celebration.

2,000 Application Forms Requested

Visitations, parties and paper work have been keeping Willamette's Admission personnel busy the past few months, as interviews with high school seniors have been conducted in five states and well over 2,000 application forms have been requested.

Twenty-seven students have already been assured spots in next year's class under the University's early decision plan, "and we're receiving completed applicaitons a lot sooner than in previous years," according to Richard Yocom, registrar and director of admissions.

Dean Yocom indicated that the absolute deadline for scholarship application is March 1, which is also the recommended admission request cutoff, although "we will consider eligible candidates for admission beyond March 1 if room permits." Women students are getting applications in sooner according to the current trend, and it is possible that the female quota will be filled by March.

Auto Crash Kills Kenneth Lawson

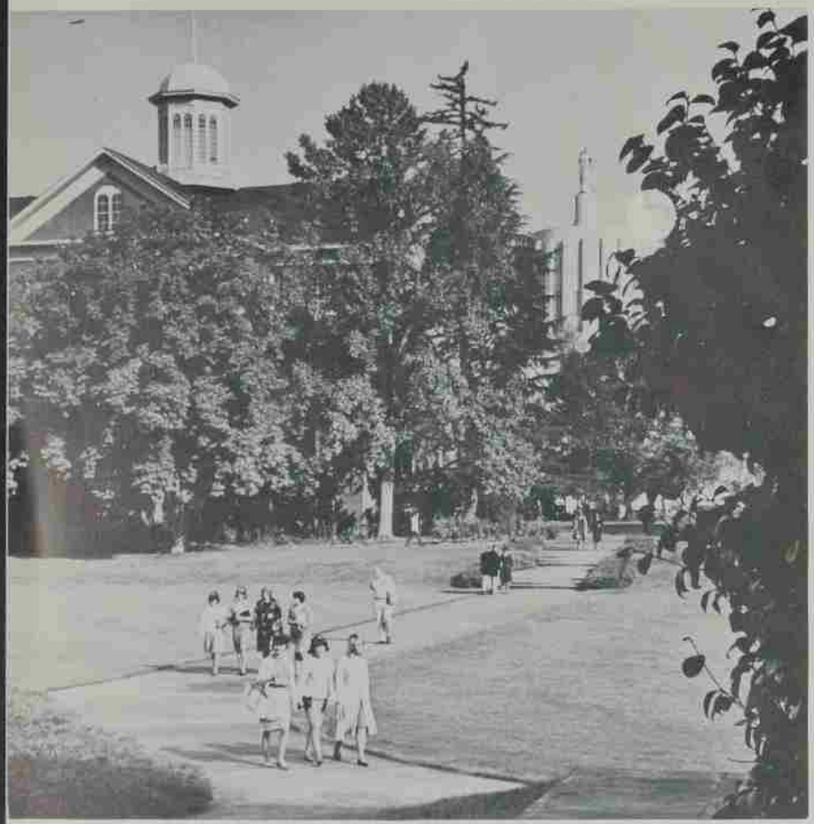
Kenneth Lawson (B.A. '28), former Spokane mayor and long-time commissioner of that city, was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Sprague, Washington, December 28.

KENNETH LAWSON (B.A.'28) died in Spokane, Wash., December 28 soon after his car collided with a camper truck on an icy road.

Mr. Lawson was traveling alone when his car collided with a camper truck on an icy road. No one else was injured. Mr. Lawson died in a hospital shortly after the accident.

Mr. Lawson was a graduate of Yale Divinity School. He was a licensed lay preacher and Methodist supply pastor. At the time of his death, he was Eastern Washington manager of the surplus food distribution program for the State Department of Public Assistance.

A cross-section of more than 500 Inland Empire mourners, representing all stations of life, attended his funeral at Liberty Park Methodist Church in Spokane. The church's main sanctuary and an adjoining Fellowship Hall were filled beyond capacity, with many people lining the walls in standing position. Many persons were unable to gain entry and were forced to leave.



Historic Waller Hall has observed governmental procedures for over 100 years. Present Capitol supplants old State House, which burned in 1935.

Department of Political Science

Last Spring, when Willamette was host to the Pacific Northwest Mock Political Convention, Dr. Shay, Head of the Political Science Department, was walking across campus with two visiting professors who had accompanied student delegations from Washington schools. Both visitors were admiring Willamette's beautiful campus, since neither had previously been in Salem. Suddenly one pointed at the pioneer-crowned white marble edifice rising above the birch branches across State Street and exclaimed, "My, that's the most beautiful college building I've ever seen." Not being willing to miss an opportunity like this, Dr. Shay calmly said, "Oh, that's our Political Science Department lab. And we have an excellent lab supervisor, too, by the name of Mark O. Hatfield."

In a way, the State of Oregon's capitol complex is a living laboratory in practical government for Willamette's students. There are very few universities in the country located directly "across the street" from the capitol. Willamette students have an exceptional opportunity to observe, do research, and develop a practical competence in the study of government.

Political Science Department permits several senior students each year to intern with a government agency, either local or state. The experience is invaluable. Internship is supervised by Dr. Edwin Stillings.

All freshman sections of American Government regularly spend time visiting the Legislature, listening to committee hearings and observing the legislative process. Dr. Kenneth Smith's sophomore students in Public Policy Formation follow various bills through the Legislature to familiarize themselves with practical policy making. Dr. Shay's Senior Research Seminar is undertaking an intensive examination of the three key bills before the current Legislature.

Willamette is utilizing its unique position for the educational benefit of its government majors and the bettering of citizenship for all its students. This is a part of the continuing emphasis on quality education at Willamette.

Since the turn of the century Willamette men have served almost continuously in the state legislature. Eight are current members of that body.

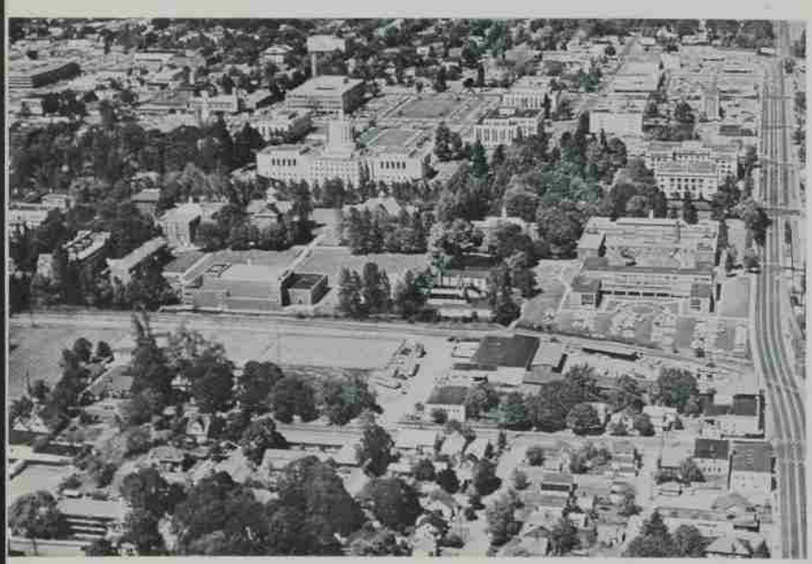
Urban Renewal brightens Willamette's future

After four years of planning, study and debate, Willamette University's Urban Renewal project gained the favorable assent of the City of Salem on Dec. 14th, paving the way for acquisition of 21 acres of land to the south and west of the present campus for University development. The area will eventually include a new Legal Center, student union building, married student housing, additional men's and women's housing units, a field house and physical education field and possibly a graduate school in administration—development cost expected to exceed $6 million.

Consideration for development of the South campus area started in 1957 when the Development Committee of the Board of Trustees contemplated the University's long-range growth. According to a national study in the field of higher education, Willamette's campus fell below minimum recognizable limits with respect to campus size and student enrollment.

A study also indicated that the college-age population in the six Western states would increase from 750,000 in 1962 to 1.4 million by 1972. The Board of Trustees felt that if Willamette were to accept a fair share of the responsibility for the education of the youth of 1972, it would have to expand its physical facilities.

With the approval of the Board, the University started a land purchase program in 1957 that has since provided space for four women's living units, an intramural field, tennis courts and a parking lot south of the Mill Stream. In spite of this property acquisition, the University still hadn't expanded sufficiently to meet its growing education needs; thus in 1960, the Development Committee formulated and projected a plan that would provide expansion enough to meet the minimum needs of the University consistent with its anticipated growth.



Because the City of Salem found that buildings and property use south of the Willamette campus did not meet the standards established by building codes, the City applied the Federal Housing Act to gain assistance from the Urban Renewal Program of the Federal Government. Salem established an Urban Renewal Agency and appointed William G. Paulus as executive director, while a Citizen Fact-Finding Committee prepared an objective report concerning the eligibility and feasibility of Salem instituting an urban renewal project.

After considerable surveying and planning, a 21-acre area south and west of the campus was adjudged eligible for clearance because more than 50 per cent of the structures in the area are substandard and certain other deficiencies are evident. The City of Salem will incur no expense in carrying out the project because Willamette has accumulated "credits" for previous development in the area that will more than cover Salem's share of the cost.

Under the program, the Federal Government will apply Willamette's credits and pay the remainder, while "excess credits" of around $200,000 have become available to the city from Willamette's previous expenditures for whatever other urban renewal projects the city wishes to consider.

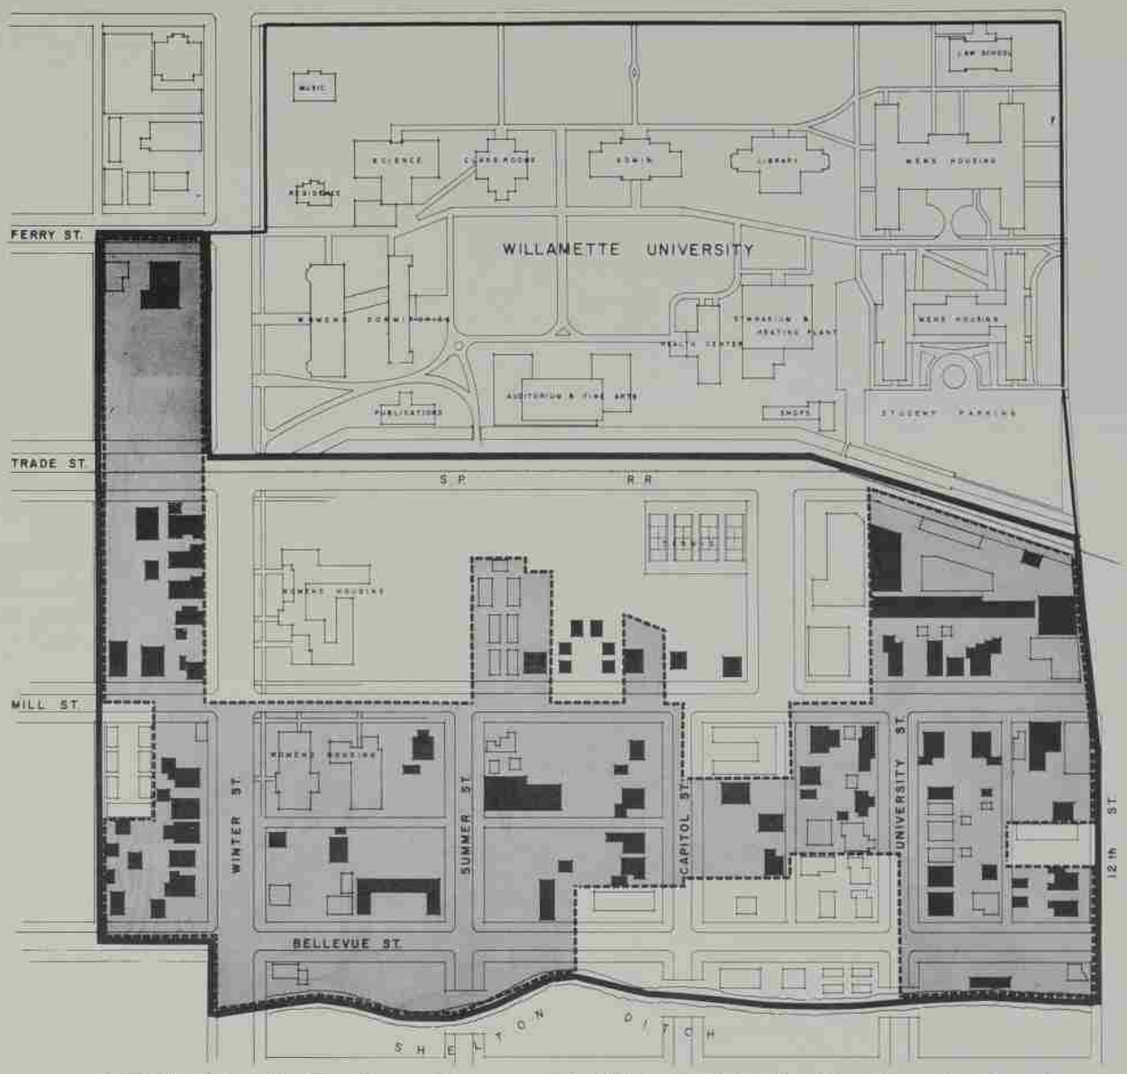
In considering the Urban Renewal proposal, the state and federal governments expressed a primary concern for relocation of residents and businesses in the project area. Under the proposed plan, every effort will be made to locate suitable quarters for those displaced by the project and moving costs will be largely borne by the Federal Government. There are 76 buildings in the area, owned by 42 persons. A total of 93 persons make their homes in the area, and 11 businesses are located within the boundaries.

Under the plan, the UR Agency will purchase the 21 acres with federal funds at an estimated $1,050,000. The property is expected to be bulldozed within two years and resold to the University at a "raw land value" estimated to be $665,000.

The map on the adjoining page indicates the Urban Renewal land area by the shaded area within the dotted lines, while the heavy black line signifies land the University eventually expects to acquire and develop. The black structures in the drawing are those buildings in the area considered to be substandard, but all of the buildings in the UR area, except the two sorority houses already built within the zone, will be razed. Construction of a third sorority house for the Chi Omegas has already started on Mill Street between Summer and Capitol.

The new land acquisition will increase Willamette's campus property holdings to 60 acres, including the athletic fields around McCulloch Stadium, and the new sorority house will bring to 22 the total of buildings in use by the University. Student residences are filled to capacity, as a record enrollment of 1,454 undergraduates, graduates and part-time students registered fall semester 1964.

On-campus housing space has been one factor in enrollment limitations, and in light of the proposed development, future registration will be one of many important subjects that will be discussed at the mid-year meeting of the Board of Trustees in February. The Policy and Development Committees of the Board have worked all year formulating a 10-year projected development program. It is anticipated that some definite action will be taken on the proposed plans at both the mid-year and annual board meetings.



When the Salem City Council recently approved the Willamette University Urban Renewal Project, the shaded area on this map became available for purchase by the University. Within two years the shaded area will be cleared. Eventually, the University hopes to acquire all land within the solid black line.

Name selected: "Truman Wesley Collins Legal Center".

Legal Center gets big boost from half-million-dollar gift

The proposed Willamette University Legal Center will be named the "Truman Wesley Collins Legal Center" after one of the University's generous benefactors, the late Truman Wesley Collins.

The Board of Trustees formally approved the name of the legal center (see story, page 8) soon after President G. Herbert Smith announced acceptance of a $500,000 gift from the Collins Foundation and family.

Dr. Smith made the announcement at the Salem First Citizen banquet January 14, indicating that the funds would be applied to those currently being raised to build, equip and endow the Legal Center. Sponsors of the banquet, the Salem Area Chamber of Commerce, paid a special tribute to the University for its contribution to the community, and later honored Gerald Frank, a Willamette trustee and Vice-President of the Development Committee, as Salem's Firt Citizen.

Word of the generous gift came to Dr. Smith from Mrs. Truman W. Collins, also a member of the Board of Trustees and President of the Collins Foundation. The late Mr. Collins was Portland's First Citizen in 1962 and was serving as President of the Board of Trustees at the time of his death February 23, 1964. He had first been elected to the Board in 1926.

The Collins family has been closely associated with Willamette since Everell S. Collins, Truman's father, became a member of the Board in 1915. Members of this family have been the University's largest benefactors.

Both Truman Collins and his sister, Mrs. Elmer R. Goudy of Portland, were graduated from the University. Mrs. Goudy is currently a trustee.

Twenty-five years ago, Collins endowed the Mary L. Collins Scholarship Fund at Willamette in honor of his mother who resides in Portland. The family also built the Everell Stanton Collins Science Building in 1941 honoring the senior Mr. Collins.

The Legal Center will be the first building in Willamette's multi-million dollar development project.

Trustees Authorize Projects, Approve Enrollment Increase

First steps in a program of development, expansion and enrichment of both academic life and physical plant were taken at the mid-year meeting of the Willamette University Board of Trustees at First Methodist Church in Portland.

Among other actions in the all-day meeting the board:

1. Named the projected new law school the "Truman Wesley Collins Legal Center."

2. Authorized the executive committee to call for bids on the legal center building on June 15, 1965, provided that $500,000 in gifts and pledges are in hand by that date. The center will be a $1,500,000 project with half of that amount for building and half for endowment.

3. Approved recommendations by the policy committee to increase the enrollment in liberal arts and music to 1,500 and that in law to 300 over a five or six year period.

4. Sanctioned a corresponding increase in faculty members by 28 over the same period.

5. Authorized preparation of plans for an intertie between Doney and Lausanne Halls to house an additional 25 to 30 women students. The structure would include also new kitchen facilities for Doney and Lausanne Halls, both women's dormitories.

The new legal center would be the first structure in the urban renewal area, recently approved by the Salem City Council. It is to be erected on the west side of Winter Street between Trade and Ferry Streets.

The board had previously approved an expansion fund project of $500,000—half being for buildings and half for endowment. The legal center has been given priority in this program.

However, there were indications that the Willamette board was looking at a longer range plan involving projects of substantially greater proportions.

Both the policy and development committees were directed to continue exploration of other needs to place price tags on them and project plans for accomplishment. Reports on these studies will be made to the board later.

The board enthusiastically greeted the recommendation that the new legal center be named for Truman W. Collins, late president of that body, who died a few days after the mid-year meeting last year.

One third of the cost of the center, $500,000, has been subscribed by the Collins Foundation and family. Of this amount, $250,000 will be available by the June 15 date for the new building, the other $250,000 going to endow it.

Dr. G. Herbert Smith, Willamette president, announced that another $100,000 had been subscribed toward the project. This leaves $150,000 to be obtained before bids can be called.

Remainder of the $1,500,000 fund will be raised during construction.

The Truman Wesley Collins Legal Center will be the second building on the Willamette campus bearing the Collins name, as the Everell S. Collins Science Building was built in 1941 in memory of Truman's father.

Members of the Collins family have been the University's largest benefactors. Twenty-five years ago the Mary L. Collins Scholarship Fund was endowed in honor of Truman's mother who resides in Portland.

Mrs. Truman W. Collins is president of the Collins Foundation and a member of the Willamette Board of Trustees, as is Mrs. Elmer R. Goudy, sister of the late Mr. Collins.

The Legal Center will house the College of Law, modern practice court, larger classrooms and office space and a complete new library of over 100,000 volumes.

Willamette's College of Law is one of 130 law schools on the approved list of the American Bar Association and one of 109 that are members of the Association of American Law Schools. It started in 1883, the first law school in the Northwest.

A law school enrollment of 300 has been proved by experience of other law schools to be an optimum size, both economically and educationally. It is large enough to support a fully rounded curriculum and important enough to attract top speakers and faculty and develop a vital legal center in Oregon's capital city.

Increase in the student body will be permitted as rapidly as classrooms and housing can be made available. Present entrance standards, or higher ones, will be enforced. The student body at present in the liberal arts and music is 1220 and in law 180.

Willamette's enrollment is currently at a record high and the proposed expansion represents nearly a 30% increase, while 22 new faculty members in liberal arts and music and six in law represent a 36% increase over the 76 current full-time faculty members.

Additional housing must be provided for 165 women and 220 men.

The board spent much of the day listening to extensive reports by Robert C. Notson, chairman of the policy committee, and William Webber, chairman of the companion development committee. Supporting their reports were projections and charts which were prepared and presented by Dr. Richard Petrie, financial vice-president.

Also receiving approval of the trustees were four academic promotions, two sabbatical leaves and one leave of absence, becoming effective Sept. 1, 1965.

Those promoted and their new rank are Dr. Norman Hudak, professor of chemistry; Dr. Noel Kaestner, professor of psychology; Dr. Otto Mandl, associate professor of German and head of the department; and F. Kent Marcus, assistant professor of history.

Professor of organ and music theory, Josef H. Schnelker, was granted a year's sabbatical to study with internationally known organist Helmut Wolcha at the University of Frankfurt; and Dr. Cecil Monk, professor of biology at Willamette since 1927, was granted a half-year sabbatical for a post-doctoral seminar in history and philosophy of science at the University of Pennsylvania.

English instructor Adele Birnbaum will take a leave of absence for graduate work at Bryn Mawr College next school year.

ALUMNI CITATION AWARDS, 1965

The Alumni Citation Award was established in 1957 to give recognition, before the community and the nation, to distinguished graduates for outstanding achievements and services which reflect honor upon Willamette University.

Dr. Hugh McKee Bell

Gurnee Flesher

Dr. Victor Hicks

Jennelle Vandervort Moorhead

Distinguished alumni honored at Founders' and Benefactors' Day, February 4, 1965.

Dr. Hugh McKee Bell, B.A., '26

Dr. Bell who received the M.A. and Ph. D. degrees from Stanford, the latter in 1941, has been on the faculty of Chico (Calif.) State College since 1928. He was Dean of Students for 10 years, and has been professor of psychology and counselor for the last eight years.

He has served as a member of the California Council of Educational Research and the California State Psychology Examing Commission. He was one of 17 persons who organized the International Vocational Guidance Association in Paris in 1951.

He served as consultant on personnel matters for the Veterans Administration, ten California school systems, the City of Chico, Pacific Gas and Electric company, and Collins Pine Company.

Dr. Bell received the Chico State College Distinguished Professor Award in 1964. He has authored several articles and books, including "The Adjustment Inventory," which has been translated into ten languages since originally published by the Stanford University Press.

Gurnee Flesher, B.A., '29

When McNary High School opens its doors to students next Fall, its principal will be Mr. Flesher, who has the longest tenure of any school administrator in the Salem School District—36 years.

For the last 19 years, Mr. Flesher has been vice principal of North Salem High School. He also has been athletic director, head of the physical education department, and dean of boys at North Salem, and physical education instructor and coach at Leslie Junior High School, Salem.

As chairman of several curriculum study groups, Mr. Flesher has been instrumental in upgrading the curriculum throughout the Salem school system. He has worked particularly hard in implementing programs that give more individual recognition to the educational requirements of each child.

Mr. Flesher has always had a keen interest in athletics. He is Superintendent of Recreation for the City of Salem and the Salem School District. He recently was named to the Hall of Fame of the National Association of Inter-Collegiate Athletics.

Dr. Victor Hicks, A.B., '25

Dr. Hicks, born of Oregon pioneer stock, is himself a pioneer of the space age. As a Naval ordnance officer during World War II, he worked on the research and development of the use of rockets and guided missiles—the forerunner of today's space vehicles and tomorrow's moon and interplanetary vessels.

As a civilian, he has held positions of high responsibility, including Westinghouse, General Aniline and Film, and Sperry and Rand. Since 1961, he has been associate director of research for the UNIVAC Division of Sperry Rand.

He received his M.S. degree from University of Washington in 1927 and his Ph.D. from University of California at Berkeley in 1930. He spent five years as lecturer and physicist at University of Pittsburgh and three years as research professor of physics at Marquette University.

He and his wife, Eleanor, live at 4000 West Sunset Blvd. in Minneapolis, Minn.

Jennelle Vandevort Moorhead, B.A., '25

Mrs. Moorhead last year was elected president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, an organization of more than 12,000,000 members. Among her many previous PTA responsibilities, she was president of the Oregon Congress from 1950 until 1953.

Since 1946, she has been a professor of health education at University of Oregon, where she received her M.S. degree in 1948. She is a consultant in health and human welfare for the Oregon State System of Higher Education.

She has traveled throughout the world studying problems of health, education, urbanization and child welfare. In 1960, she directed the first study tour for the Oregon State System of Higher Education to the USSR and six European countries.

A fellow of the American Public Health Association and the American School Health Association, she served two terms on the United States Commission for UNESCO.

She has found time to raise two sons and be active in women's organizations.

Eugenia M. Savage, B.A., '28

Miss Savage, who received her diploma in piano from the Willamette University Music School in 1927 and her Bachelor of Music degree from University of Southern California in 1938, recently began her second four-year term as teacher of piano and organ at Trinity Theological College in Singapore.

Miss Savage first went to China in 1931 as a missionary at Hwa Nan College in Foochow. She took a furlough in 1937 and 1938 to obtain her master's degree, then returned to Hwa Nan.

In 1944, her mother died, and Miss Savage moved to Oceanside, Calif., where she worked as a piano teacher to make a home for her father. After her father died in 1958, she was reinstated as a missionary and joined the staff at Trinity Theological College the following year.

Following completion of her first four-year term at Trinity last year, she studied for a semester at University of the Pacific before returning to Trinity for her second four-year term. In addition to teaching, Miss Savage accompanies choirs and works in a Chinese Methodist Church.

Dr. Daniel Schulze to retire after 35 years on W.U. faculty

It has been said of Dr. Daniel Schulze that "he guides youth over four of society's main hurdles. He educates them, marries them, can build their vine-covered love nest and preach the Sunday sermon to keep them on the straight and narrow."

Come June, the first of these hurdles will be formally terminated, as the amiable professor of German will retire from Willamette after 35 continuous years of service that have included being professor of religion, German and Greek, the University's first Dean of Men, general manager of the student body and notorious ad-lib "staller" for Freshman Glee.

An ordained Methodist minister, Dr. Schulze's pastoral pastime is largely devoted to joining couples in matrimony, a service he has performed over 100 times, even in rites extending as far east as Wisconsin. Most of his couples have been Willamette students, although he has married five faculty or staff members. Some of his marriages have resulted in sons or daughters who have attended Willamette.

Dr. Schulze is a self-taught carpenter and house builder with four homes to his credit, all in a row along Merdel Ave. South (named after Schulze's sons, Merlin and Delwyn). The Schulzes have lived in all but one of the homes themselves, and now Willamette Music Dean, Charles Bestor, and his family reside in the first home designed by the nail pounding professor.

If hammer and saw don't provide enough handiwork, Schulze finds enjoyment troweling in a garden or trolling in a lake, as he's an adept "green thumb" and angler. At one time, Schulze the horticulturist, had over 4,000 tuberous begonias in his greenhouse, many of them prize winners in flower shows.

A Texan by birth at the turn of the century, Schulze grew up in Mason, Texas, the son of a Methodist minister. Central Wesleyan College (Mo.) provided him with his bachelor's degree in 1924 while taking away his bachelorhood, as college sweetheart Amelia Preul became Mrs. Schulze a week after graduation. Garrett Biblical Institute awarded him a divinity degree, while graduate study in Semitic languages and literature took him to Northwestern (M.A.) and the University of Chicago (Ph.D.).

After writing to 97 small colleges seeking his first teaching assignment in 1930, Schulze found Willamette the only university providing a position as professor of religion. "As it turned out," smiled Schulze, "they had just closed the old Kimball College of Theology on campus, so I replaced the entire school of religion."

"After working many long hours that first year," he continued, "they cut my salary 16 2/3%, but It was at the depths of the depression, and while the eventual raise didn't come nearly as fast as the cut, I was just happy to have my job."

His "job" eventually expanded in a "surprising move when they asked me to be Willamette's first Dean of Men in 1935, but after some thought I decided it was a good opportunity." It was also the start of the longest service at the post for any one man, 11 years, and according to a Collegian article when he eventually gave up the post: "Unfortunately, the benefit and aid that he has rendered the men and the University can never be tabulated nor its true worth expressed in words, but the aesthetic and character-building advice that he has pleasantly extended to many Willamette men will never be forgotten."

Some of the trying times of his job centered around the trying times in the economic world, "as my main concerns were finding jobs, housing and funds for our men, when all three were scarce." Often Dean Schulze dipped into his own pocket to see a student through, as formal loan funds were meager. Small wonder he was called "the friend of every man on campus."

While he was Dean, Schulze continued his 10 to 12 hour course load in religion, but during the war and V-12 days at Willamette, President Smith employed Schulze's German and Greek knowledge for additional courses, eventually giving the adaptable Schulze his choice between languages or religion. Schulze selected the former because of his graduate training.

Dancing wasn't in Willamette's "book of Hoyle" in Schulze's early years as Dean, but when it was finally accepted, the Dean and his wife were "permanent" chaperones almost every weekend for various campus and group functions. In this connection, Schulze also became the first and only "house father" in Willamette's history, as he and his wife substituted for the house mother at Lausanne Hall one Thanksgiving week.

Schulze further endeared himself to Willamette students in 1953 when he accepted the "man of the hour" post for Freshman Glee, only the third man in the 56-year Glee history picked for the task of making a one minute announcement in 15 minutes. The other two past-masters of the delayed word were James T. Matthews and W. W. Herman Clark.

Somewhat of a frustrated football player in college because "I didn't have the price of a pair of football shoes," Schulze has vicariously demonstrated his warm regard for the grid sport by attending all but three of Willamette's home football games in 35 years. Out-of-town obligations caused the misses, but his vocal presence has been established at about 140 home games.

Even more significant than football attendance is the fact that illness has only taken Schulze from the classroom the equivalent of about one week since he assumed the familiar pose at the head of the class. Perhaps the daily hike up to his third floor office in Eaton Hall has kept him fit; or, as he says, "it's either kept me young or made me old."

True is the saying, "Search all the public parks and you'll never find a monument to a committee"; nonetheless, committee work of various nature has provided the monumental and rewarding relationship so many people have had with Dr. Schulze. At one time or another his services have extended to the University committees of discipline, educational policy, degrees, scholarship, student affairs and ad hoc, not counting management of student body business affairs for three years, advising of student senate and guiding a European tour of the Student International Travel Association.

Equally active in the community, Schulze has served as president of the Lions Club, Knife and Fork club and Masonic Lodge, gaining the Scottish Rite and 33rd degree honorary (the highest) in the latter organization. He's president of the Board of Directors of the Scottish Rite Foundation of Oregon that annually awards a fellowship to George Washington University for graduate study in government service. He is also a Sigma Chi who annually participates in part of the initiation ritual at the local chapter.

While retirement means departing from the professorship that he's been devoted to for over half a lifetime, it doesn't mean that he'll terminate the other pleasant pursuits that have distinguished Dr. Schulze as a minister, carpenter, gardener, angler and friend of all.
