

Prexy Greet Students, Urges Activity Program

Willamette University is happy to welcome the new students in the Naval College Training Program. The University considers it a great privilege to serve the nation and the students selected to participate in the V-12 educational program of the Navy. We are anxious that Willamette will mean as much to these students as the University has meant to the thousands of students whom it has served in one hundred and one years of outstanding educational achievement.

To this end, the University pledges the best in its faculty and staff members as well as the facilities of the physical plant. New students on the campus will gain the most from their Willamette experience only if they take full part in every phase of the university life. In addition to the curricular work, there are many opportunities to develop friendships, qualities of leadership and personality in the broad program of student activities which has developed at Willamette.

Fortunately, students in the V-12 Navy Program will have every opportunity to participate in these activities offered to the civilian students. The activities at Willamette are truly student activities organized under the direction of students through the associated students of Willamette university. The president of the associated students, it so happens, is a member of the V-12 Navy Reserve.

I hope that each new trainee coming to the campus will wish to have a membership in the Willamette Student Body and take his full part in the affairs on the campus. The University considers this sufficiently important that in the case of the civilian students student body memberships are automatically collected in the tuition. This is not included in the Navy contract, but the V-12 reservists have the privilege of taking optional membership in the Student Body. I hope that each one will avail himself of this opportunity.

G. HERBERT SMITH
President, Willamette University.

Fewer Holidays Scheduled on Revised College Calendar

Changes in holidays and in the general plan for registration throughout the year were noted in the revised college calendar for the 1943-44 academic year released yesterday from the office of the registrar.

Most noticeable in the summer semester is the fact that the first day of school will be on Monday, July 5, which is a holiday throughout the entire nation, but the students will get a holiday on Labor Day, September 6.

Many of the students for fall semester who always go home for the Thanksgiving holiday will be unable to do so this year, because there is only one day off (November 25). Formerly the Thanksgiving holiday was two days plus the following weekend, which allowed out of town students time to go home.

The Christmas vacation will be for just one week this year, as it was last year. The recess starts on December 22 and ends December 29. There will be just two days of school before the next scheduled holiday which is New Year's day. In the spring semester, Memorial Day, May 30, is the only scheduled holiday.

There will be a period of approximately one week between semesters, for the first semester ends October 23 and registration and orientation for the second term begins October 29. This term ends February 26 and registration for the spring semester is scheduled March 3.

Pre-registration for each semester will be about three weeks before the semester begins. Pre-registration for the fall semester is from October 4 to 9 and registration for that term is October 29 and 30. February 7 to 12 are dates for pre-registration for the spring semester.

Final examinations for each semester are scheduled for the entire last week of the semester.

Student body president, John Macy, is now an apprentice seaman in the basic training program at Willamette.

3-Term Year Ushers Changes

With navy men and regular students registering yesterday and today, Willamette begins its first twelve-month school year and its first year as a navy school. The cadets and civilians are coming to the campus to find few visible outward changes except on Sweetland field, where the north grandstand, no longer serviceable, has been torn down. An obstacle course has been set up at the east side of the gymnasium near the tennis courts.

No other changes are noticeable outside, but alterations have been made inside some of the buildings. The entire floor of the gym has been sanded, varnished, waxed and polished and the physical education department has taken over the offices at the east end of the first floor formerly occupied by the school health department.

The mechanical drawing classes have been moved from

The naval officers administering the navy program at Willamette are the commanding officer, Lt. George C. Bliss; the executive officer, Lt. (j.g.) Marshall E. Woodell and the medical officer, Capt. George W. Shepard.

Seaman Arrive on Campus

Students Hear Activity Plans At 8 Tonight

Opening the student activity program for the summer term is the student body assembly at 2000 (8 p.m.) at Waller hall tonight when Willamette university welcomes the V-12 men and civilian students to the Willamette campus.

Walter Erickson, Dean of Freshmen in charge of orientation week, will open the meeting by introducing Willamette's president, G. Herbert Smith, who will give the welcoming address. On behalf of the student body, John Macy, president of the associated students, will welcome the new students and introduce the other officers for the coming year. General Manager Les Sparks will outline the student activity program and its distribution of student funds.

Sybil Spears, first vice president of the student body, will give a brief outline of social functions and ask the men for any suggestions. Nadene Matthews, editor of the 1943-44 Collegian, will explain the campus publications and ask for volunteers interested in journalism, photography and student publications.

Les Sparks will then show glimpses of campus life including Freshman Glee, May Weekend and sports events of the year. Erickson will explain Saturday registration for civilian students to close the program.

Navy Program Under Way; Civilians to Enroll Saturday

With 270 men reporting to the naval headquarters at Willamette university yesterday, the college opened the registration and orientation program for the group of apprentice seamen stationed here. Registration procedure and the physical examinations occupied the time of the men yesterday. Those who were unable to complete their registration may do so today and tomorrow, according to word from the director of admissions, Walter Erickson. Registration of civilian students is scheduled tomorrow.

Flat Tuition Takes Effect

The new one-charge flat tuition rate adopted by the Willamette board of trustees last spring goes into effect with the opening of the present semester.

Under the new plan, all special fees are abolished. Those eliminated are the health service, library, laboratory, diploma, and late registration fees and all other special assessments by the university.

Private lessons in applied music, however, are charged for extra, in accordance with a schedule posted.

Students who carry more than 17 hours of study are charged $7.50 for each hour over that limit. Those who take less than 12 hours are charged $10 plus $7.50 for each hour.

The student body membership costs $10 a semester, and is required of all civilian students, but is optional for the naval trainees under the V-12 program.

The new tuition rate constitutes an average rise in cost of $10 to $12, but will cost some students no more than the old rate. Tuition used to cost $80 a semester plus a required $3 health and $2 library fee.

Upon reaching the campus, the men reported immediately to the naval administration and then were sent to the USS Lausanne for physical examination and assignment to quarters. Then they enrolled in the registrar's office in Eaton hall and were assigned to faculty counselors who helped them to fill out their study cards in the library where they also registered with the professors whose classes they will take.

Heavy Study Load

Eighteen hours of academic work is required of the men. The navy pays for the required hours but the men themselves pay for any private music or other private lessons and for student body membership.

After filling out directory, census, activity, scholastic record, class roll and physical education cards, they had their official registration card signed by Dean Chester F. Luther. They were also assigned chapel seat numbers, for chapel attendance is compulsory for the apprentice seamen on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

After having their cards checked by the registrar's assistants, the men took their statement of tuition charges to the business manager, then deposited all their cards with the registrar.

100 Civilians Expected

Besides completing registration today, the men and civilian students will be guests of the faculty and the student body officers tonight at a student body meeting in Waller hall, where the student activities program will be explained.

Beginning Saturday morning at eight o'clock the civilian students will enroll at the registrar's office and register in the library, following a procedure similar to that for the navy men. Approximately 100 civilians are expected to register for the summer semester.

At two o'clock tomorrow afternoon, freshmen civilian students and the V-12 candidates who have not attended college before will be given an entrance examination in rooms 21 and 27 of Eaton hall.

the drawing labs on the first floor of the science hall to the south end of the museum on the second floor of Waller hall. The room formerly occupied by the drawing lab will be turned over to the physics department to accommodate the increased classes.

The law school building at the eastern end of the campus will be the headquarters for the navy administration. This building was vacated during the second semester of the last year because of lack of sufficient fuel to keep the building heated. The law school, now located in the library, will continue in that building for the fall semester, although law classes will not be offered during this term.

The only major changes in construction were made in Lausanne hall to prepare the building for occupancy by an estimated 223 navy men. The dining room has been changed to offer cafeteria style and the basement now accommodates a shower room, a laundry room, a vegetable room, a store room and quarters for some of the cooks.

Other changes in Lausanne include linoleum instead of carpets in the lobby and front stairway and waxed floors in the halls instead of the former carpet runners. Floors in the rooms have been sanded and the rooms have been equipped to accommodate four men apiece.

The two small parlors on the first floor will be part of the mess hall and the large parlor will be converted into a lounge. To enlarge the kitchen, the partition between the kitchen and the serving room was knocked down and serving will be done cafeteria style in the mess hall.

The infirmary, now the sick bay, is being equipped to give men their physical examinations. Only minor illnesses will be treated in the sick bay.

In the Finest Tradition

Willamette's service to the nation in the present crisis is twofold. The University is continuing to provide a cultural education in keeping with its finest tradition at a time when such education has suffered as one of the heaviest casualties of war. And it is offering specific training to meet the needs occasional by the national emergency.

Foremost in this second category is the Naval College Training program under which 270 young men selected by the Navy will begin a rigorous course of study at Willamette Monday. Civilian students, both men and women, however, are also given special training in a variety of subjects particularly vital at the moment.

The peculiar contribution of Willamette is not, however, merely that both these programs are offered, but rather that the two are integrated. Even in the case of the Navy men, their specialized training will be tempered with electives chosen from the liberal arts curriculum.

But it is not only from the subjects studied in the classrooms that the Navy men will gain by their attendance at Willamette. Although in uniform and under naval discipline, they will be full fledged members of the student body, enrolled in courses with civilian students and participating in all the activities that make up Willamette's traditional extra-curricular program.

The Navy has indicated that it wants the men in its college training program to attend institutions where college atmosphere of culture and tradition prevail. It does not want to take over the campus for its exclusive use, but wants rather to have the trainees fit into existing college life in so far as the conditions of training allow. The men are to be permitted to join fraternities and all other already existing campus organizations and to take part in regular campus extra-curricular activities.

The Navy has expressly approved such participation and acknowledged its value in the training of future officers. The Navy wants the men to be students of Willamette university and members of the Willamette university study body association, so that the naval trainees thus will have a part in the shaping of the student life as well as in the sharing of it.

Willamette will be their school, not only in the sense that they attend it, but also in the sense that they will have contributed to it and helped to make it what it is and what it will become. They will carry away with them the traditions of Willamette and an attachment which has been the mark of thousands of Willamette alumni before them.—M. R.

Reporter Finds Feature of the Year

Changes in Lausanne Amaze Former Resident

In our youthful days as a reporter for the Collegian, our assigned beat was Lausanne hall. Lausanne then was a land of ladies, and we, being of the fairer gender ourselves, and also being one of the Lausanne ladies, had no trouble at all gathering material for news and features. It used to be our delight to expose the supposedly secret secrets of our sex and to give to the Collegian readers the lowdown on life at Lausanne.

A habit of two years is hard to break, so the first place we hit on the campus was the swinging door of Lausanne hall. But lo—no "ring bell and wait in lobby" sign out front, and no scratched up paint, but a nice spotless white front door. Thinking "Oh, well, it's about time," we barged on in, expecting to rest our weary feet on the soft, beautiful, cool green carpet in the lobby. Yipe! nothing soft about that! Sure that our eyes could believe, though our feet might deceive, we took a quick look floorward. Could that be red and black squared inlaid linoleum in whose highly polished surface we saw reflected our astonished faces? It could be and was, and it extended clear up the stairway that used to make such a picturesque setting for the women in their formals.

Nertz, No Nurse

By this time we were ready for the infirmary for a mild shock treatment, and started thataway, slipping and skinning our noses on the recently uncarpeted and waxed and shined hallway. And what greeted us in the infirmary? A nice white starched uniform? Oh, no, not that. We met up with a navy blue uniform with white stripes. Remembering the penalty for having a man in our room, we said we wouldn't tell, if he'd tell us where the nurse could be found.

He patiently explained that he was the pharmacist's mate, that the doctor wasn't here yet, that this was now the sick bay, that the Hall will no longer house women but 223 navy men, and that he was preparing to give the men a series of seven different shots for everything imaginable when they arrive on the campus.

Recovering from this, we remembered too late that Willamette has become a navy school and that we women had been shoved out of Lausanne to make way for the sailors today.

4 Men—1 Pair of Drawers

Thinking we never had a chance for a feature like this, we toured the Hall as used to be our custom. Wondering how the navy would like the robin's egg blue and the mill stream view of our former room, we scrambled up the first flight of stairs (all right, so it is a ladder) to the second floor and found two double decker beds against the walls and smack in the middle of the room where we never kept it was our old study table, surrounded by four chairs. Two of the four men staying in that room are gonna be awful mad when they find out that the table has only two drawers!

What at first glance appeared to be chests of drawers turned out to be our old dressers without mirrors. On the wall near the washstand was the mirror that used to adorn one of the dressers. We used to have to kneel on our knees to comb our hair, but we'd sure like to see four fellas get shaved in twenty minutes in one mirror.

And new floor plugs! This was too much, for we used to create all kinds of fire hazards by draping our extension cord across the floor under the rug to hitch up a lamp we wanted on the opposite side of the room. To complete the picture, the splintery floor-boards had been sanded. No snagged nylons for the navy!

Those bare bulkheads (walls) are going to stay bare, for navy regulations say no pictures or other articles will be hung on the bulkheads and only bona fide photographs may be displayed. No posters, no magazine covers, no fancy pictures, no Esquire portraits, no Hummel prints, but then what would a man be doing with a Hummel print? (Or an Esquire portrait?)

No Drapes to Shape

There will be no colorful drapes in the rooms either, and this reminded us of what we did with our yellow ones with the bunny rabbits on them that we had last year. We took 'em home and made pinafores out of them. The only thing the fellows will have to make anything out of are the venetian blinds, and they can't do that cause they'll get a demerit if they do.

Then we shuddered with horror to learn that the men will get to smoke in Lausanne hall (Only it's The S. S. Lausanne now). We remember when our neighbors got caught smoking in Lausanne. First a visit from the Hall president, then the head proctor came in to tell them "No, no. Naughty, naughty!" And then from her quarters away over in the other end of first floor Miss Jack got wind of it, then they were brought up before house council, and finally they had a trip to the Dean of Women. The only stipulation for the men is that they do not smoke in their bunks or on the first deck!

But the biggest surprise came when we glanced out on our beloved sleeping porch and nary a bed graced the bare grey boards. The men, we are told, will sleep in at first, but they may move out later. Hey, fellas, this is summer and we don't want to think you're sissies, but we slept outside all winter long.

Taste the Navy Salty Tongue

You'd better start now, because Willamette is adopting a new language, and you'll be lost in a foreign country if you can't understand the vernacular. By navy regulation the apprentice seamen are enjoined to use naval phraseology at all times in both official and unofficial correspondence and conversation.

Here are are number of naval terms translated into civilian language:

- DECKS—The various floor levels.
- ALL HANDS—Entire body of men.
- HOLD—The basement of the building.
- BEAR A HAND—Hurry up.
- SHIP—The school or building.
- BELAY—Stop.
- MAIN DECK—The entrance level.
- BINNACLE LIST—Sick list.
- BRIDGE DECK—The second floor level.
- BREAKOUT—To get an article from its storage place.
- QUARTERDECK—The area at the main deck adjacent to the main entrance.
- CARRY ON—To go ahead with what you are doing.
- GANGWAY—The entrance steps.
- FIELD DAY—General cleaning day.
- PASSAGEWAYS—The corridors.
- GANGWAY—Passageway. As a command, "Clear the passageway, step aside."
- LADDERS—The stairways.
- GEAR—A term for miscellaneous articles, as "Mess Gear."
- HOISTS—The elevators.
- HANDSOMELY—Carefully.
- PORTS—The windows.
- IRISH PENNANTS—Loose ends giving an untidy appearance.
- SICK BAY—Dressing station, Lausanne Hall.
- KNOCK OFF—Used as a command to stop doing a thing.
- FORWARD—That end of the building to the right of the main gangway as you enter the school.
- AFT—The opposite end.

LUCKY BAG—Place where lost articles are stowed until claimed.

MUSTER—An assembly at which the roll is called.

STARBOARD—The main gangway side; the front of the building as such.

PORT—The opposite side.

QUARTERS—A person's rooms or living space.

SECURE—To make fast or as a command to stow gear or dismiss personnel.

TOPSIDE—Upstairs.

STAND BY—To be in readiness.

BELOW—Downstairs.

SILENCE—Very important command and means silent and motionless.

HEADS—Toilets.

TURN IN—To go to bed.

THE ENSIGN—The flag; the National Colors.

TURN TO—To commence working.

SCUTTLE BUTT—Drinking fountains.

GALLEY—Kitchen.

MESS HALL—Dining room.

GOUGING—Cheating in examinations.

LOCKERS—Closets.

GOUGE—Answer sheet.

BULKHEADS—Walls.

GREASING—Apple polishing.

BUNKS—Beds.

ON THE TREE—Failing a subject, on probation.

OVERHEADS—Ceilings.

SWABS—Mops.

And while you're at it, you'd better get used to telling time the navy way instead of by the usual a.m. and p.m. designation. Navy time runs 24 hours in the day rather than 12 hours in the a.m. and 12 in the p.m.

The hours are designated by hundreds, and the minutes by units and 10's. For instance, 6 a.m., when the apprentice seamen hit the deck, is 0600, and 6:10 a.m., when they start calsthenics before breakfast is 0610. The first afternoon class begins at 1325, or 1:25 civilian time. The men are confined to quarters at 2200 (10 p.m.) and lights go out at 2400, or midnight. One minute past midnight is 0001.

Handbook to Be Issued at Assembly Tonight

Vest-Pocket Booklet Tells of Campus Officers, Activities

Edited by Sybil Spears, the 50th volume of the Willamette Student Handbook is expected off the press today for distribution this evening at the student body assembly in Waller hall.

The vest-pocket size booklet contains 44 pages devoted to introducing new students with essential information on the student body organization and activities.

It describes the functions of the student officers, the $10 membership dues and their distribution for the various activities which the funds finance, the major activities, the living accommodations for men and women, the fraternities and sororities, campus organizations, and the customs and traditions of Willamette. The principal Willamette songs and yells are also given.

A message from President G. Herbert Smith discusses the new accelerated program of three semesters a year and the part that the navy V-12 program plays in the war-time operations of Willamette. A statement about the naval trainees declares that the navy intends that they should be Willamette students in every sense of the word with all the privileges and responsibilities. They are encouraged to enter into all regular student activities.

Other illustrations include a map of the campus and vicinity, and a circle diagram of the allocation of funds derived from student body dues.

Sybil Spears, first vice president of the associated students, edited the Freshman Handbook which will be distributed today.

Betty Randall May Resign as Co-Manager

With the unofficial resignation Wednesday of Betty Randall as co-manager of student publications, co-manager Jan Patterson assumed the duties of publications manager this week to begin the advertising campaign with the business firms of Salem.

Miss Randall and Miss Patterson were appointed co-managers by the student council last spring when their freshman status made them ineligible to run for election to a student body office.

When the publications board met, Miss Randall was named as editor of the Fusers' Guide for which the publication date was set tentatively for the summer term, since advertisers had signified their desire to have the Guide published this term. Since Miss Randall is planning to enter nurses' training and will not return to the university campus, her successor will be appointed by the publications board when it meets next week.

The possibilities for an editor for the Fusers' Guide, if it is to be printed this semester are limited as the number of journalism students to be on the campus is not yet known. Among possible candidates for the editorship this term would be Apprentice Seaman Jack Wittliff; Pat Tracy, who is society editor of the Collegian; and Sybil Spears, who edited the student handbook.

Although student body president John Macy and secretary Darlene Dickson could not be reached as the Collegian went to press, Nadene Mathews, president of the publications board, said that it was probable that Miss Patterson will be officially appointed publications manager.

Margaret Hughlett and Bill Cooke have been assisting Miss Patterson in soliciting advertising. Miss Hughlett may be appointed assistant manager when the board meets and Cooke will continue on the staff until he is called into the army.

1944 Wallulah Plans Made By Pemberton

Arrangements for a lithographed section in duotone blue featuring photographs of the campus are among the chief plans being made during the summer months for the 1944 Wallulah, WU yearbook, by Margaret Pemberton, editor. Arrangements for handling other traditional sections such as class, faculty, living groups and activities, will not be definite until the school year gets well under way.

Arrangements will be made with a local photography concern for the taking of the pictures of students for the class panels. Doris Hornes, senior from Dallas, will direct the calendar of appointments so that all students on the campus for the summer semester will have their pictures taken.

The photographs for the campus section will be taken during the summer semester by Nadene Mathews, Collegian editor and editor of the 1943 Wallulah. Jack Wittliff, naval reservist, will assist Miss Mathews in taking pictures of the various buildings of the university.

Collegian Makes First Venture In Summer Time Publication

Today's issue of the Collegian opens the first summer term when a Collegian has been published in the printed form. During the summer semester last year, the education class in high school journalism published a four page 8 1/2 by 11 inch paper, but this is the first time funds have been available to publish a printed newspaper.

At the close of school in May, plans were made to publish a paper of smaller size than the tabloid, but the executive committee met early in June and expressed a wish that the paper continue in the tabloid size it has used for the past two years, since this size has proved popular and convenient.

Plans are now under way by the editor, Nadene Mathews, to continue the regular weekly publication, even though the staff of available assistants is depleted and many of the students who have been trained in journalism are not on the campus this semester.

Miss Mathews hopes to be able to organize a staff for the summer term when the students have completed registration. Several of the returning students have signified a desire to work on the paper and some of the freshmen entering have served in high school journalism work.

Apprentice seamen who have had experience on high school or college papers may elect to take a course in journalism where they will be given an opportunity to serve on the paper.

Continuing the Collegian tradition of "no retrenchment," the paper will be published each week, but the number of pages may have to be cut if advertising and student funds run low.

Strict Navy Regulations To Govern Seamen

Rules Cover Demerit System, Smoking, Liberty, Quarters

Copies of regulations governing the apprentice seamen in the V-12 program will be issued to all naval trainees at Willamette. The regulations provide for a system of demerits under which the men are limited to 150 demerits for the first semester, 100 for the second semester, 75 for subsequent semesters, and a total of 200 for the course.

Of general interest among the regulations are those which permit smoking only in quarters and prohibit smoking in bunks, on the campus or on the streets. Drinking of liquor, including beer, is prohibited within the city limits of Salem, which is designated as "On Bounds."

Outside Liberty

During the recreation period, from 1605 to 1725, the men are on liberty to leave the campus, but are required to remain on bounds. During the rest of the day they are confined to the campus. Liberty outside the liberty area will be granted once each month, and the men may select the week end on which they will leave the area. This liberty begins at the close of the academic day on Saturday and ends at 2200 on Sunday.

Apprentice seamen are authorized to drive automobiles, but are not permitted to maintain their private cars.

Radios Permitted

Radios will be permitted in quarters, but no outside serials are allowed. They may be operated at modulated volume except during study or recitation hours and after tattoo. Photographs may be displayed in quarters, but not posters or magazine covers, and no picture or other article is to be hung on the bulkheads. No food will be allowed in quarters except as directed by the medical officer or packages received as gifts, and these must be consumed as soon as possible.

The men are authorized to wear non-regulation bathrobes in their rooms and in the passageways other than on the quarter deck or aft of the quarter deck. The robes must not be mutilated or otherwise present a dilapidated appearance.

The lucky bag (lost and found), under direction of the mate of the deck, will receive all gear found adrift in any of the halls. Apprentice seamen may claim their articles at Lausanne Halls between 1700 and 1800.

An awkward squad is prescribed for apprentice seamen who are deemed lacking in military bearing or ungainly in gait or slouchy in manner. It will exercise during the recreation hours.

Walt Erickson is in charge of registration for navy and civilian students.

Trainees Represent 16 Colleges, 2 Fleets

Sixteen colleges from Oregon, Washington and New York and the Atlantic and Pacific fleets are represented in the group of V-12 candidates assigned to Willamette university. The men are in either the pre-medical or basic training programs.

Although Willamette itself contributed the largest number of men to the total of 270, the University of Oregon and the College of Puget Sound ran Willamette a close second. Large delegations, too, came from Washington State college, Lewis and Clark, Seattle Pacific college, Multnomah junior college and Oregon State.

Other schools represented are Pacific college and Pacific university, Linfield, Grays Harbor junior college, Portland university, Eastern Oregon College of Education and Eastern Washington College of Education. Union college in New York is the school represented that is not from the Pacific northwest.

In addition to the men from these schools, six men from Oregon high schools will enter as freshmen and 26 men from the Atlantic and Pacific fleets who have passed highly selective tests and have been recommended by their superior officers, will be studying at Willamette.

Health Service Plans Include Dispensary and Sick Bay

"An improved and extended health service will be available to the regular students returning to the campus this year and the university is planning a joint medical service with the navy department to take care of the navy men," President G. Herbert Smith said yesterday.

Although entering students are usually given their physical examination on the first day, this examination will have to be postponed to a later date for the civilian students, since the large number of navy men to be examined will require all the time of the health officers.

Downs Continues As Head
Dr. C. A. Downs of the Salem

Clinic will continue in his capacity as head of the health service, which position he has held since the resignation of Dr. Ralph Purvine during the last school year. The university will furnish the civilian students the health service as stated in the college catalogue, which includes the complete physical examination, tuberculin test for all new students entering the university and the smallpox vaccination for those who have not had it. Medical consultation and certain specified drugs will be furnished and the university provides for three days hospitalization.

Dispensary to Open

In addition to the regular service a dispensary will be operated in the offices formerly occupied by a part of the women's physical education department on the first floor of the gymnasium. Mrs. Minnie Mortimer will be the full time nurse in charge and the service will be open to both the navy and civilian students. Mrs. Mortimer is a former Willamette student and she has served the past year on the staff of the Deaconess hospital. Hours for the dispensary will be announced at a later date, but tentative plans call for early morning and late afternoon hours. Mrs. Mortimer will refer those cases needing the attention of a doctor to Dr. Downs.

Navy Maintains Sick Bay

The sick bay for the navy will be located in the former infirmary at Lausanne hall with the navy medical officer, Capt. G. W. Shepard, in charge. Capt. Shepard has served with the navy for 35 years, then he was retired but has been called back to active duty.

Shepard will take care of the minor cases at the sick bay, but extreme cases will be referred to Downs at the clinic and to the Salem hospitals.

The university is maintaining Chresto cottage with the view of converting it into an infirmary later for cases of a contagious nature where it would be unsafe to keep the student in one of the houses. Mrs. Mortimer will be in charge of the infirmary.

Sailor's Day is All Mapped Out For Him From 0600 to 2400

How does an apprentice seaman spend his time in the naval training unit at Willamette university? The navy has it all worked out for him in a daily schedule which controls pretty rigidly most of the waking hours of the V-12 men.

The schedule, which is, of course, listed according to the navy's system of designating time, begins at 0600, or 6 a. m., when they hit the deck and throw back bed covers. At 0610, or ten minutes later, they report for 20 minutes of calisthenics. Then they have 20 minutes to shower, shave and dress.

First mess for breakfast begins at 0650 and ends at 0715. During this period, the men waiting for the second mess are occupied in straightening their quarters. The second mess lasts from 0715 to 0740, and those who have had their breakfast straighten their quarters. Muster is scheduled from 0740 to 0755, and then the men are on their way to begin the academic day with their first classes.

Classes begin at 0800. They are 50 minutes long and have five minutes passing time between. The chapel time, which under the new university schedule begins at 1140 and lasts until 1215. Navy men will drill at this time on Mondays and attend required assembly in Waller hall on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Thursday chapel and Friday student body meeting are voluntary for the apprentice seamen.

First mess for dinner begins at 1220, second mess at 1250.

The fifth period begins at 1325, and the seventh period is over by 1605.

Then comes the recreation, from 1605 to 1725, during which the men may go out for inter-collegiate athletics, take part in activities, get their haircuts, or study.

First supper mess begins at 1730, and the second mess at 1800.

Study hours are scheduled from 1830 until 2200. At 2200 the men are confined to quarters, and lights go out at 2400.

Activities Open to All V-12's

Apprentice seamen at Willamette will be permitted to participate in college extra-curricular activities the same as civilian students insofar as it does not interfere with their prescribed hours or courses of study, according to a bulletin received this week about the V-12 navy college training program.

Not only are the V-12 candidates permitted to join in extra-curricular activities, but they are urged by the navy and by the university to take part in the student activities of the school open to them through the associated student body membership card.

The ASWU organization will begin its drive for navy members tonight at an assembly at which General Manager Lestie J. Sparks will present the student activities and explain privileges offered by membership in the student association. John Macy, ASWU president now in the navy training program, will also speak.

Membership in the student organization includes subscription to the Collegian, campus weekly, the Wallulah, annual yearbook, and participation in and admission to all student activities such as athletics, music, forensics, dramatics and social events.

Pres. G. Herbert Smith said yesterday that the faculty hopes that all naval men will join the associated student body so that they may enjoy to the fullest the advantages and opportunities offered by the student activity program.

Student body president John Macy, now an apprentice seaman, expressed the hope that every navy man would become a member of the student body and thus join in the campus life as much as possible through the student body membership.

Civilian students will automatically become members upon payment of a compulsory fee.

University Offers Courses For Seamen and Civilians

Courses prescribed by the navy college training program curricula for the V-12 naval reservists are listed in a bulletin prepared and mailed to prospective students this week by the administration. The bulletin also carries a list of subjects open to the other students during the summer semester, although these students may enroll in the classes prescribed for the navy men.

According to Dean Chester F. Luther, regulations specify a minimum of 17-semester hours plus physical education for the navy men. Their requirements will be fulfilled with courses from the following departments: biology with instructors Monk and Tschudy; chemistry with Johnson and McLeod; English, Oliver; French, German, Vazakas; history, Lovell; mathematics, Doughty and Luther; psychology, Lantz; naval organization, to be taught by regular naval officers; physical education, Keene, Sparks, Carroll, Trotter; physics, Brown, Clark and Brennen.

In addition, the university is offering courses from which the naval reservists may draw their electives, and which are also open to civilian students. These include courses in the fields of economics and business administration, education, English, geography, history, mathematics, music, political science and journalism.

A perusal of the schedule by the returning student will reveal several shifts in the teaching staff. Prof. Maurice Brennen, former band director and instructor of instrumental music, on leave last year, makes a welcome return as instructor in engineering drawing. Having been requested earlier by his draft board to engage in some vital war job, Brennen has now secured a release from that job in order to fulfill another vital position as instructor in a required subject for the navy college training program, and he will again assume the duties of organizing and maintaining a band.

Dr. Robert L. Lantz, besides continuing to teach courses in education and geography, will take on the added two-hour course of psychology, which is included in the naval requirements.

Chief Petty Officers Carroll and Trotter will be engaged in carrying out the specifications of the navy physical training program, along with director of athletics, Roy S. "Spec" Keene, and coach Lestle Sparks.

The retirement of N. S. Savage as business manager, which will become effective July 15th, and the departure of J. W. C. Harper, former economics professor, made necessary the procurement of a new business manager, in the person of Robert W. Fenix, formerly associated with the teaching staff of College of the Pacific at Stockton, Cal. Fenix will teach courses in cost accounting and industrial relations, besides carrying out the duties of business manager. Dr. Roy M. Lockenour will teach business law during the summer semester.

Three Navy Officers Head WU Personnel

The commanding officer for the apprentice seamen stationed at Willamette university is Lt. George C. Bliss, whose headquarters are at the old law school building. Lt. Bliss, before coming to Willamette, this summer, was on duty in New York, as was the executive officer, Lt. (j.g.) Marshall E. Woodell. Capt. George W. Shepard is the medical officer in charge.

Before entering the naval service, Bliss served as principal in the Oakland public schools. Woodell was registrar and executive secretary at the Southern Oregon College of Education. Shepard served for 35 years in the navy medical corps and was retired.

Bliss and Woodell are not only in charge of the men stationed here, but have under their command the medical students of the University of Oregon medical school and the dental students at North Pacific College of Dentistry in Portland.

Approximately 270 men will take pre-medical and deck officer training on the Willamette campus and 45 are at the medical school and 55 at the dental college. All the men will be apprentice seamen but the medical and dental students will wear midshipman's uniforms.

Either Bliss or Woodell will teach navy training at Willamette and at the other two schools, both of which are in Portland. This makes it necessary for one of the men to be in Portland two days out of each week, since the schools are so far apart that the classes cannot be scheduled jointly with the two schools together.

Two chief specialists will assist Spec Keene and Prof. Lestle J. Sparks in the athletics program. They are L. C. Carroll and H. R. Trotter, who have been trained in drill and athletic competition. Yeoman W. O. Byrd works in the offices of the navy administration, H. B. Hannaman is storekeeper and G. S. Norrin is the hospital corpsman stationed at Lausanne to assist Capt. Shepard.

Prexy Makes Navy Welcome

"On behalf of the associated students of Willamette university, I would like to take this opportunity to welcome the apprentice seamen to the campus and to invite them all to take part in the regular student activities planned for the semester." John Macy, president of the Willamette student body, said Wednesday night when he dropped into the Collegian office to help put out this edition.

The associated student body officers all joined Macy in expressing the wish of the Willamette students that the men of the V-12 will enter all the campus activities that they can find time for and are interested in.

To insure a full and varied program of activities this summer, 100% membership in the student body must be reached. Macy hopes that he can count on the cooperation of all in this campaign for it is to the benefit of each student to back student activities.

No Uniforms Greet Scantily Clad Seamen

Upon reporting for duty Thursday many of the V-12 candidates were surprised and placed in a spot when to their dismay they found the uniforms were not on hand. After two or more weeks of trying to keep up with naval requirements of neatness the mails will be flooded with clothes being rushed from home. Luckily the navy was able to procure 560 sheets so at least the boys will sleep clean. Gib Kister reached his destination with one shirt and Bill Cate will be no fashion plate appearing in the same outfit every day. Both for the navy and ourselves we sincerely hope the uniforms will arrive soon. There is something about a uniform!

Hurrah, Navy! No More 7:45s

Willamette students herald the arrival of the navy this week with three cheers for what they're not bringing with them — namely, 7:45's. Heading the list of innovations presented in the tentative class schedule mailed to all prospective students by President G. Herbert Smith was the revelation that Period One henceforth shall begin at eight a. m. The class hour will continue as the regular fifty-minute period, with fifty minutes between 11:40 a. m. and 12:10 p. m. designated as the chapel period.

No chapel will be scheduled on Monday since the naval regulations call for a drill period for its students on that day. Regular chapel will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday with attendance compulsory for both the navy men and the civilian students. Thursday chapel, however, is compulsory only for the civilian students but attendance at these chapels, which are always of a religious nature, is voluntary for the V-12 candidates. Friday's chapel will be the traditional student body assembly and attendance is never compulsory for any student on this day. The importance of attendance on Friday for both the navy men and regular students was stressed by Dean Chester F. Luther, since it offers the best possible means for unification of the entire student body.

Specialists Get Xtra Training

Students who are selected to complete college training for the purpose of qualifying them for appointment in professional classes of the naval reserve will be permitted to finish additional terms, so that upon graduation they will have completed a total number of terms as follows: engineer specialists, 8; medical and dental students, the minimum number necessary to complete the requirements for their professional degrees.

Students who are selected for training to qualify them for engineers for general duty, deck, supply, or marine corps general duty will be permitted to complete additional terms as follows: those who had on July 1 completed six or seven terms, will receive one additional term. Those who had completed four or five terms will receive two additional, those who had completed two or three terms will receive three additional terms, and those who had completed only one term will receive four more.

This means that those students who have had seven terms will probably be able to graduate from college, and that any man now enrolled in the naval reserve will be able to get a total of at least five semesters of college work.

This regulation as announced by the navy department does not apply strictly to pre-medical students, who must complete a minimum number of requirements before admission to the medical schools.

'Chronicles of Willamette' Off Press; Wins Wide Acclaim

Copies of "Chronicles of Willamette," the history of the university by Dr. Robert Moulton Glatke, are now in the possession of many of the students and professors about the campus. Dr. Glatke, a graduate of Willamette in the class of '19, and at present a member of the faculty, spent the last part of the school year reading proof for the book which was published early in June.

Containing about 750 pages with illustrations, the book traces the history of Willamette from the call of Jason Lee and the establishment of the Oregon Mission, through the entire first century of the institution.

Praise has been given the work by all who have read it for the vivid and readable treatment of the material and the lifelike and human presentation of the personalities who people the epic of pioneer sacrifice to found and maintain a school in the wilderness.

Upon its publication, the book received special commendation from Dr. Bruce R. Baxter, former president of the university, who said, "This book shows great care and discernment in the gathering of the material and real scholarship and discrimination in its presentation. . . . I believe that those who read these pages will find more than a portrayal of people in earlier days, but will also find an incentive for emulation of characteristics which made these men and women significant."

Dr. Burt Brown Barker, vice president of the University of Oregon, well known throughout the Northwest for his interest in the lore of the region, is an enthusiastic endorser of "Chronicles of Willamette."

The book gives a rounded picture of all University interests with intimate portrayal of student life, studies, administration and faculty. Many incidents are told of student life, all selected because they are typical of their time. Generous use of quotation from sources secure the flavor of the various periods. More than 20 years were spent by Glatke in gathering the materials from which he has created his story, and his research has unearthed fresh source material which sheds new light on the establishment of the Oregon Mission and its work.

The books may be ordered through the Willamette university bookstore in Salem and at J. K. Gill or Meier and Frank in Portland.

Dr. Glatke reports advance orders and sales now for over 500 of the 1150 books being printed.

Libe, Science Halls Pleasing To Appraiser

Highly pleased with his findings in a survey to determine the actual value of campus property and furnishings was J. E. Stout as he talked to the Collegian correspondent yesterday.

Stout commented particularly on the two newest campus buildings, the library and Collins hall. "The library is a beautiful building," he said. "It is well planned and well equipped. The science building is liberally furnished and stocked and the equipment is very well distributed for service in the various laboratories such as biology, zoology, chemistry, physics and geology.

"Both buildings are among the finest of their type and are well suited to their purpose. We were surprised and delighted to find such fine apparatus and such adequately equipped buildings and laboratories," Stout went on. "The library and the science hall are a credit to this school and would be a credit to any school."

Stout has been working the past three weeks on the program for appraisal and complete inventory of all of the furniture, furnishings and scientific apparatus of the university in an effort to determine the actual value of the property so that adequate insurance may be placed on it. He is a member of a Portland appraisal company and has been employed by the university to make this survey. A complete report of the survey will be prepared and sent to the administrative leaders during the summer semester.

Sybil Spears Promises Active Social Program

Plans are being made for an active student social program, according to First Vice President Sybil Spears and Student Manager Les Sparks. However, much depends on the sale of the student body cards for not too much can be accomplished without funds and the main source for these will have to come from the sale of student body memberships this summer.

Arrangements are being made for two dances with orchestra and then every Saturday night to have some social function in the gym.

Dr. Robert M. Glatke is the author of "Chronicles of Willamette."

Sigma Hall Is Dormitory for Civilian Men

Although the consent of the fraternity members has not yet been attained, the Sigma Tau house, which will house all non-resident civilian men during the summer term, will probably be known as the Sigma Hall, Willamette men's dormitory.

Arrangements have been made by the university for the men to room at Sigma Hall, located at 920 Oak street, but they will have to board elsewhere, since no meals will be served at the house.

As the Collegian went to press, definite arrangements for a supervisor for the dormitory had not been completed, but the university expects to be able to announce the name of the man selected by next week.

All civilian men on the campus who are non-residents must live at the dormitory unless they are excused by the President, G. Herbert Smith, or by the Dean of Freshmen, Walter Erickson.

It is expected that this arrangement for housing the civilian men students will continue throughout the entire school year, but beginning in the fall semester, meals will be served at the dormitory.

About 20 men are planning to live at Sigma Hall during this term.

Spencer Tells Library Hours

Summer semester hours for the Willamette university library were announced yesterday by Robinson Spencer, librarian. A later opening and closing time have been set to comply with the hours set for the navy men.

From Monday through Thursday the building will open at 7:40 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. It will reopen at 7:00 and remain open until 9:45.

On Friday the hours are from 7:40 a.m. until 5:30, and on Saturday from 7:40 until 4:00 p.m. The library will close Tuesday through Friday at the chapel period from 11:40 a.m. until 12:10 p.m.

New books on the library shelves include many on naval strategy and mathematics. Some of the newer fiction books are coming in and several copies of Dr. R. M. Glatke's book, "Chronicles of Willamette," are available to students.

R. W. Fenix Succeeds Savage In Willamette Business Office

Robert W. Fenix, former assistant professor of business at College of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif., this week begins his first semester on the university staff. Fenix was elected by the Willamette university board of trustees during their annual spring session to the post of business manager.

He arrived about the middle of June to succeed N. S. Savage, who is retiring after 22 years at the post. The board requested Savage to remain in office until August 1 in order that his successor may become acquainted with the situation here.

In addition to his duties as business manager, Fenix will teach classes in the business administration department.

Fenix has served three years as cashier at the College of the Pacific, in addition to his teaching experience. He was also in charge of vocational counseling at the California college.

Married to the former dean of women at College of the Pacific, Fenix has a daughter 28 months old and another three months of age. His degrees include the B.A. and M.A. from the College of the Pacific in economics and business, and a master of business administration from the Harvard graduate school of business administration. He has completed the course work for a Ph.D. degree at Stanford and has done graduate study at the Universities of California and Southern California. Mrs. Fenix has a B.S. degree from the University of Minnesota and an M.A. from Syracuse.

Music Groups For Navy Men

Apprentice seamen interested in music will find opportunity to take part in a number of musical activities, according to Dean Melvin H. Geist of the school of music.

Geist is making plans for the organization of a navy male chorus which in the fall will be combined with the A Cappella choir. Due to the shortage of women on the campus this summer it is not probable that an A Cappella choir can be organized. Each organization will hold rehearsals at least twice a week. Definite plans for rehearsals will be made next week following the registration of the navy men in as much as most of the members will have to come from them this summer. Dean Geist also hopes to announce in the near future who the new piano instructor will be and other members to supplement the music staff next fall.

Besides band, orchestra and chorus as electives, theory, form and analysis and other music courses are offered to the navy men. Theory and sight reading can prove to be very valuable to the men when they are at sea as there will be definite need for technical ear training. Private lessons and practice rooms will be available to the navy men the same as to civilian students.

Geist reports that he has appointed Freda Bucur ench and Yvonne Mozee to operate the Carnegie library which will be open to all students most of the day, except when it is being used for class work. They will be on hand to receive and play requests submitted by the students to supplement their class work.

Alpha Phi Alpha to House Women Students for Summer

By Ruth Ransom

Arrangements were completed this week by the university with the Alpha Phi Alpha sorority for the house to remain open during the summer to accommodate all women students from out of town. Both independent women from all three sororities will reside at the house as well as students who are working and planning to attend Willamette again in the fall.

Janet Blake, junior from Camas, Wash., who was elected manager for the Alpha Phi Alpha for the coming year, made a special trip to Salem this week to prepare the house for summer session students and to make room for more women residents than had formerly been planned for.

Miss Herr Summer Manager

Marjorie Herr, a graduate of Willamette in '41 and an Alpha Phi Alpha member, will be house manager for the summer. Her mother, Mrs. C. W. Herr, will be housemother until November when Mrs. W. E. Kirk will return to her duties as housemother. Miss Herr and Miss Blake are making preparations now for the women who are arriving on the campus this weekend.

Because of the crowded conditions in the house, beds are temporarily being placed in the play room in the basement until other arrangements can be made. If the hoped for fire escape is installed by the first of July, the beds can be placed in the attic, leaving the play room free for dancing and entertainment.

22 Women at House

Of the 22 women to be in the house, 17 attended Willamette last semester. Most of the girls are planning to carry a full schedule this summer and others will be attending part time and working in various business firms the rest of the day. As soon as possible next week the girls will hold a meeting to organize the house for the summer, probably electing officers and deciding about closing hours for week nights and week ends during the summer.

New students at Willamette living in the house are Paula Smith, Martha Rockman, Lucille Barnhart, Evelyn Deal, Margaret Geisler. Also living in the house will be Peggy Wallin, Rosella Bell, Marion Calk, Gladys Crawford, Wilma Froman, Phyllis Haight, Doris Holmes, Yvonne Kauffman, Jean Van Skike, Gloria Wunsch, Thelma Lathrop, Nadene Mathews, Irma Huber, Ruth Ransom, Eloise Ransom, Yvonne Mozee, and Jean Well-Bowen.

Geist Plans Music Activity

Dean Melvin H. Geist, head of Willamette School of Music, reported yesterday that he is making definite plans for group musical organizations for the navy men and other students. Geist went on to say that in spite of smaller enrollment for the summer semester it is hoped that the high standards of Willamette music organizations will be maintained during the summer. The music department hopes to obtain much additional talented material from the incoming navy men.

The music department is planning definitely to have a band, orchestra and chorus. The band will be directed by Maurice Brennen, former Willamette professor. Brennen, who was director of the band for three years, was granted a leave of absence last year when his draft board requested him to report to the drafting department of the Oregon Ship Yards. The University has obtained his release from the ship yards so that he can teach engineering drawing to the navy students, as it is a required subject for the navy unit.

Besides these duties, Brennen will return to his position as band director and plans on organizing a large band during the summer. He has not yet decided what he will do about the uniform problem, as the University band uniforms are a Chinese red, and the navy men in the band must wear the regulation

Lewis Pankaskie, under whose direction the University Symphony orchestra was organized this year, will again direct the orchestra. Besides conducting the orchestra, Pankaskie will teach classes in theory, elementary school music methods, and music education of woodwind instruments.

'43 Wallulahs Bring Praise To the Staff

One of the highlights of graduation week of the 1942-43 school year was the distribution of the 1943 Wallulahs. Although this was the week of final examinations, students were found on the campus reading the yearbook and looking at the pictures in it during every spare moment.

The general consensus of opinion among the students and faculty seemed to be that the book was unique in every way, and the most frequent comment made to the editor, Nadene Mathews, was "The book seems to make Willamette alive."

Pleasing to the editor, too, was the fact that so many people commented favorably on the In Memorium to the late Dr. Carl Sumner Knopf, former university president. Other features of the book that found favor with its readers were the large quantity of pictures used, and the sweep and movement of the layouts.

The 1943 Wallulah contained 119 pages of pictures and writing, and about 30 pages of advertising and index. Although the budget for the book was $800 smaller than the previous year, the 1943 book contained ten more pages of pictures than the '42 book. This was accomplished by making liberal use of lithography throughout the book and by reducing the page size from the traditional 9 by 12 inch to an 8½ by 11 inch size.

Colors used throughout the book were green, brown and beige. The book opened with a 64-page lithographed section in green, featuring the navy program, sports, student activities and events through the year such as Freshman Glee, Homecoming and May Weekend.

The remainder of the book was done by letterpress in brown with beige as a second color. Classes, faculty, living groups and honoraries completed this section.

Writing in the book was cut to a minimum in order to allow for effective display of the pictures and to make way for versatility in the layouts. Large, informal pictures were used throughout the book and action shots of all sports events and other activities were included.

Among the members of the staff for the 1943 book were three men who are now apprentice seamen at Willamette. Dix Moser, editor of the Collegian last year, helped on the faculty and class sections and assisted the picture editor in mounting the pictures for the panels.

Jack Wittliff, now news editor of the Collegian, was one of the staff photographers and his pictures are prominently displayed in the physical education section as well as in the student activities section.

Bob Ratcliffe was in charge of the navy section which opens the book. He edited the material and took charge of the planning of the pictures for this section.

The 1943 Wallulahs may be found in any of the offices of the university administrators and some copies will be included in the yearbook display in the university library. In addition, many of the students on the campus who attended Willamette last year have copies of the book in their possession.

Smith Opens Chapel Series On Tuesday

Willamette's president, G. Herbert Smith, will open the summer chapel services Tuesday at the first of the regular daily chapel services at 11:40 in Waller hall.

Smith had made no definite title for his talk to the students but the general theme will be "Be careful what you set your heart on for you are sure to get it."

The regular order of chapel services will follow with Dean Melvin H. Geist of the school of music planning the Wednesday programs. Geist is trying to contact the director of the 104th cavalry band to obtain the band for Wednesday.

Rev. J. C. Harrison, pastor of the First Methodist church of Salem and president of the Willamette board of trustees, will have the religious chapel on Thursday.

Since no student chapel chairman had been appointed for the Friday student body meetings in chapel, no definite information could be had on the plans for that day.

Buy War Bonds and Savings Stamps

WU Bookstore Open Monday

The Willamette bookstore in the basement of Waller hall will remain open all day Monday to enable students to purchase books for their summer courses. After Monday the hours the store will remain open have not definitely been established and probably will not be announced until it is determined how much student help will be available for work in the bookstore. There are many possibilities as to what the bookstore will do this summer but nothing is certain. There is a possibility that the bookstore might sell candy bars if they are attainable. There is also the possibility that a woman from town will manage it this summer and be assisted by students.

From the Sidelines BY RICH WICKS

As true as the old adage that in spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of baseball is the fact that during the summer vacation sports minded Willamette students turn their thoughts to making plans for extended beach trips. At least this seemed to be the case with a good many Willamette students who spent the first week of June vacationing along Oregon's coast line. Although it may be somewhat surprising to hear, there were actually some 35 or 40 WU lads and lassies hunting new sporting thrills at the coast the week following commencement, and all were doing so within a few miles of each other.

Bearcats at Beach

Most prominent among those enjoying themselves at the beach was one group of Bearcat athletes, the majority of whom are returning to the campus this week clad in navy uniforms. By that we refer to John Macy, Don Barnick, Ron Runyan, Bob Donovan, and Bob Simmons. All five of these fellows, along with Ron's brother Floyd, spent a whole week at Neskowin, swimming, golfing, sun-bathing, and otherwise making good use of their time. The predominant sporting activity for all concerned, however, seemed to be golf, since this one sport could be enjoyed be it rain or shine, and, let their remain no doubts in your mind but what there was an abundance of the former.

Macy, erstwhile track star and WU student body prexy, made good use of his athletic talent, according to reports given by the others, by running after his golf ball after he had given it a tremendous wallop—in the wrong direction.

Stealing the show from our Willamette friends, however, was Floyd Runyan, ex-track star for OSC and incidentally also a member of the navy reserve, who sank his tee shot on the 150 yard par three seventh hole on the Neskowin layout for a hole-in-one. Floyd went on to prove that his masterly shot wasn't a fluke by carding a neat par 36 for the nine-hole round.

Bradshaw Goes to Annapolis

One Willametteite who will not return to the fold this week along with other members of the naval reserve is Fred Bradshaw, member of the class of '45 and the first pitcher on the past season's all-star intramural softball team. Fred received his orders to report to Willamette on the first of July, but since then has received confirmation of his appointment to the Annapolis Naval Academy where he will have the good fortune of becoming a midshipman on passing his final physical.

The day may not be too far in the future when students who complete their training here and go on to become an ensign will meet Fred, who will have the same commission after the completion of his course at Annapolis. Fred will join another well-known Salem athlete in the person of Butch Nelson, ex-Salem high and more recently U of O football star, who is ready for his last year at the Academy before being commissioned and sent to the fleet.

A welcome sight to sports fans returning to school is the somewhat bare spot on Sweetland field where once stood the north bleachers. The well-done job of dismantling these bleachers by Dr. D. H. Schulze and Prof. E. T. Brown should meet with the approval of all concerned since that space can now be used for vigorous sports activity, either in the form of an obstacle race or as an otherwise actual part of the athletic field. Furthermore, no longer will any of us be tempted to seek vain refuge in those immortal bleachers when confronted with a sudden deluge of rain.

College of Pacific Popular

As strikingly true as the book by the same name is the fact that Willamette sports stars of the past school year have literally Gone With the Wind. Dispersed to almost all parts of the United States have been former members of Willamette athletic teams, all so doing in the name of one or the other of the navy, army, or marine reserve programs.

Seemingly most gifted of all schools, from Willamette's viewpoint at least, is the College of the Pacific in California which is being handed on a silver platter, so to speak, three stalwart members of last year's Northwest Conference championship football team. Andy Rogers, Pat White and Ted Ogahl, along with other former Willamette students will report to COP this week.

Imagine the woe of Coach Spec Keene who will heavily feel the loss of these All-Conference stars when football season opens, and even more so imagine the delight of Alonzo Stagg who will have Andy, Pat and Ted along with other marine reservists with which to form a veteran football team. If many more like these three report to Stagg, it is our best hope that either we will be as well gifted or else do not have to meet his team.

Whatever the case may be as far as Willamette is concerned, let's not sell Spec Keene and Les Sparks short when it comes to turning out successful athletic teams. It was only last year when everyone, including those two gentlemen themselves, was bemoaning the fate of Willamette's war-riddled male enrollment. But even at that, Willamette won conference championships in football and baseball, tied for a title in basketball, and gave the rest of the schools the scare of their lives in almost capturing one in track. Just sit back, keep your fingers crossed and await the outcome. Who knows? Maybe this year will even top last year as being one chockfull of successful athletic seasons.

Schedule for 1943 Football Is Uncertain

Baseball and football will be carried on during the summer semester as a regular part of the college curriculum, according to athletic coach "Spec" Keene, and there will be twenty minutes of calisthenics each morning and one hour of basic training each day to fulfill navy requirements.

Spec's main concern at present is the fact that the entire football season will be over before the end of the summer semester and before the majority of the regular students return to the campus.

He has been sending out letters to Oregon, Oregon State, Portland university, Whitman and College of the Pacific at Stockton, Cal., in an effort to obtain dates for conference football games. As yet nothing has been settled definitely about a football schedule, although tentative plans for the schedule are now being made.

It will be comparatively easy to arrange schedules with Camp Adair and teams from the commercial league in Portland for baseball, Keene said.

Prospects are good for both baseball and football with several ex-Willamette players returning plus excellent material among incoming naval trainees. Football will see the return to suit of Bob Donovan and Garrell "Truck" Driver, stalwart line men. Baseball has the good right arm of Bill Hanauska on the mound to lead the teams on its summer campaigns.

Spec will be assisted by two chief specialists, Carroll and Trotter, the former having played football at Monmouth and George Washington university under Bill Rheinhart, the latter a five-sport man of U.C.L.A.

On Land, in the Air, and on the Sea

Joseph Stanley Van Winkle graduated May 29 from the Naval Air Training Center, Corpus Christi, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U. S. Marine corps reserve.

Lt. Van Winkle, former student of Willamette university, was a member of Alpha Psi Delta fraternity. He volunteered for flight training in January and received preliminary flight instruction at the Pasco, Washington, Naval Air Station.

Private Madge E. Thompson, a graduate from Willamette university in '42, has completed her training for the Marine Corps Women's Reserve at Hunter College, New York. She is now on duty at a marine base.

At Willamette, Private Thompson was a member of the Delta Phi sorority and was active in both art and journalism. Her home is in San Mateo, Cal.

James Gordon Robertson, Albany, Ore., graduated June 19 from the Naval Air Training Center, Corpus Christi, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U. S. Marine Corps reserve.

Robertson is a former student of Willamette university and a member of Alpha Psi Delta fraternity. He was a member of the class of '42.

Prof. Robert W. Wilson, formerly of the history department, graduated in June from the naval intelligence school in Boulder, Colo., where he was studying Japanese. He is now a lieutenant (j. g.) in the navy.

Earle Stewart, a history professor at Willamette in 1941-42, is a second lieutenant in the army. He was stationed at Camp Roberts, Cal.

Ensign Jerome A. Foley, "Hank," graduate of Willamette law school in 1942, is in New York awaiting his ship. Hank is a member of the aviation supply corps taking his training at Harvard Supply School and Jacksonville, Florida.

Aviation Cadet Marshall Barbour, '44, is completing his training at Garden City, Kansas, then hopes to be sent to single engine school. Marshall is flying every night now and thinks his is the only branch of the service. He says Kansas is very warm and wishes he was back in Oregon. Lieutenant (j. g.) Gene Reed, class of '41, is somewhere at sea aboard a destroyer. He is serving as a recognitions officer. Before being called to sea duty he was stationed at the Naval Air Station in Dallas, Texas.

Ensign Otto Skopil, former Willamette basketball player and law student, is teaching at William and Mary college in Virginia. His wife, June, also a Willamette graduate, is with him and they are making their home in Richmond. Ensign Skopil attended Harvard supply school.

Lt. Stuart McElhane visited in Salem recently before reporting for duty at San Diego. He completed his training at Corpus Christi with the navy air corps and transferred to the marine air corps.

Lt. (j. g.) William Dick, graduate of Willamette law school in '39, is stationed in the New Hebrides as a communications officer. Prior to this he had duty in San Francisco.
