

University Hosting Conference Of Oregon Music Educators

Today and tomorrow Willamette is playing host to the annual convention of the Oregon Music Educator's Association. Attending the conference are music teachers and supervisors from public, private, and parochial high schools and colleges in Oregon. The Oregon Music Educator's Association is an affiliate of the National Music Educator's Association.

Approximately 200 registered delegates are expected on campus this weekend. At 9 o'clock this morning a general session will open the convention, and the proceedings will continue until Saturday afternoon.

Various workshops, lectures and demonstration rehearsals will constitute the program, which was arranged by Max Rissinger from the University of Oregon School of Music.

Tonight the delegates will attend a banquet held at Lausanne Hall. President Wilson from University of Oregon will be the guest speaker for the evening.

On the slate for Saturday is the election of officers for the ensuing year. Don Scott, music supervisor from La Grande, has been serving as president for the past year.

Theodore Bloomfield, director of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, will be the featured speaker at the Saturday luncheon at the Marion Hotel.

Among other distinguished guests to the Willamette campus this weekend are Mr. Randal Spicer from Washington State College, who will demonstrate band techniques, and Dr. Bruce Rodgers from College of Puget Sound, who will give a demonstration on choral music.

Willamette is also fortunate to have on display in the Fine Arts building one of the largest music exhibits from a state conference in Oregon, according to Dean Melvin Geist. This exhibit has been arranged by Prof. Maurice Brennan, and all students interested are welcome to visit it.

Leonard Has Lead in 'Savage'

Donna Leonard will play the lead in "The Curious Savage," the first of three plays to be presented by Willamette this year, according to a recent announcement by Prof. Robert Putnam, drama professor. The play will be presented in the Fine Arts auditorium November 9 and 10.

MISS LEONARD will portray Ethel, the heroine of the story. Her three step-children, Titus, Lily Belle, and Samuel, will be played by Alan MacKillop, Barbara Bredsteen and Wayne Haverson respectively.

Inmates of the Cloisters, the mental hospital which is the setting for the play, are Fairy Mae, Joyce Brown; Florence, Molly Boehm; Mrs. Paddy, Liz Hess; Jeffrey, Tom Loree; and Hannibal, Laurel Tiller. Cast as staff members at the Cloisters are Mary Beth Van Cleave as Miss Willy and Jim Chittick as Dr. Emmett.

"THE CURIOUS SAVAGE," a comedy in three acts, begins with Ethel being committed to a mental institution by her three children so that they might gain control of the family fortune.

In the course of the action, Ethel is persuaded by Dr. Emmett to give her children the money which she has hidden away, but just as she is about to hand over the bonds, someone turns off the light and they are stolen. Her children leave in disgust and later the bonds are returned to Ethel. She then leaves the institution with all of her money and is free to set up a memorial for her late husband.

Committee members and chairmen for the various stages of production will be announced later by Theta Alpha Phi. All committee members will be chosen from the lists which have been up in the living organizations.

Morse Scorns McKay Tactics

Senator Wayne Morse, speaking in convocation Tuesday, discredited campaign tactics of his opponent in the November 7 election, Doug McKay, and slammed "the reactionary press," the "slush money," used in the campaign, and a "doctored picture." He also denied the statement that he was advocating the admittance of the Communist Chinese to the United Nations.

"IF THE COMMUNISTS make a move against Formosa then the United States should go against Red China and give her everything we have, and not let our boys die on a few small islands five miles from China where it is not vital to the defense of Formosa," Morse said.

Never referring to McKay by name, but labeling him as "my opponent" Morse challenged him to debate the issues at any time or place, even in his own home town.

HE SAID, "My opponent has claimed that issues are not important but votes are, but I say that the issues will determine the winner of this election."

Morse's wife and daughter Judy sat in the front row of the auditorium and were flanked by Democratic members of the faculty and student body. Both women were wearing earrings resembling Morse campaign buttons.

An informal reception and question-answer session was held at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house after the convocation in which approximately 200 people met with the senator.

Parents Enjoy Weekend-Nye

Willamette's sixth annual Parents Weekend was a tremendous success according to George Nye, chairman of the weekend. Nye stated that parents especially enjoyed several new features in the program.

Previously the Saturday morning program consisted of panel discussions. These were replaced this year with short talks by various campus authorities. Consultation of parents with professors in one central place is also a new feature. Nye added, "Parents appreciated not having to walk through the rain to the various buildings in order to speak to the professors." Also, during a lull, the profs could talk to each other.

Another new feature was the barbecue lunch which replaced the sack lunch of other years.

"In spite of the drizzling rain, about 850 people attended the barbecue lunch and over 1500 attended the game with College of Idaho," stated Dave Lewis, assistant business manager.

All in all, Willamette can be very happy about the tremendous success of the whole weekend, Nye concluded.

Royal Keith, sales manager for Homecoming jazz concert, and Chuck McClure, Homecoming manager, offer their version of a jazz concert complete with cornet and bagpipes as Sandra Roark pins a Homecoming badge on Student Body president Neil Causbie. Badges will go on sale next week and will take the place of admission tickets to the concert Saturday night.

Homecoming Buttons Needed For Ballou Concert Admission

A Homecoming highlight is the jazz concert by Monte Ballou and his Castle Jazz Band in the Fine Arts auditorium Friday, November 2, at 8:15 p.m. following the bonfire.

"Admission will be by Homecoming buttons which will be on sale starting Tuesday for 60 cents apiece," announced Royal Keith, sales and concert manager.

Monte Ballou and his band have played all over the United States, including a two-week engagement at Las Vegas and a performance at the 1952 Republican convention. He has recorded popular Dixieland songs for Queen Elizabeth II of England.

A student of music himself, Ballou believes that jazz is popular and acceptable because it allows free expression and individual creation.

"This is a good chance to enjoy an outstanding jazz band at a price that we have set at a minimum," commented Chuck McClure, Homecoming manager.

'Bearcats Pound Puget Sound' As Signs Start Taking Shape

"Bearcats Pound Puget Sound," the winning slogan submitted by Max Folsom, will appear in many shapes and sizes Monday when construction of signs starts for the annual Homecoming sign contest. Each men's and women's living organization will design and display a sign for the contest.

The women's signs must be two-dimensional and have a $15 budget plus all the borrowed materials desired. The men's signs must be three-dimensional mechanical displays, not either two or three-dimensional which makes it difficult for the judges to distinguish and merit signs fairly. The men will have a $35 budget plus all the borrowed materials desired.

The budgets for all signs must be turned in to John Corson, sign contest chairman, by 10 a.m. Saturday, November 3. Judging will take place from 10 to 12 Friday morning, November 2, and 11:30 to 2 p.m. Saturday, November 3.

Dead Week to Start

Academic dead week begins Wednesday and will last until Wednesday, November 7. During this week no tests will be given, giving students a breathing space before and after Homecoming without the threat of tests.

New Rate for Library Fines

Overdue book holders were greeted with an unexpected surprise when they returned their books to the library as a new policy for fines went into effect Monday. The library and instructional equipment committee passed a resolution approving the principal of a maximum for fines on two-week books as well as on reserve books.

Holders of two-week books which are overdue are now charged 5 cents the first day and 2 cents each day following, Monday through Saturday, through the course of 60 days until the maximum of $1.25 is reached. At this time the current replacement cost of the book is added to the fine. If, however, the book is later returned, the replacement cost will be refunded. Brooks Jenkins, head librarian, emphasized.

Those with three-day books overdue are charged 25 cents a day and the charge for two-hour books is 25 cents per hour for the first four hours and 10 cents for each additional hour. The current replacement cost will be added to the maximum fines of $1.50.

"Above all," Jenkins said, "remember that the purpose of library fines is to serve as a reminder that others are waiting to use the books."

Law Banquet To Hear Mull

Hon. Archibald M. Mull, Jr., past president of the state bar of California, has been selected as principal speaker at the first annual banquet which will highlight the law school's Alumni Law Day, Dean Seward Reese announced.

Mull, the father of Student Body treasurer Bud Mull, has not as yet announced the subject of his address, but officials believe that Mull might speak to the group on his recent visit to Russia. While there he represented the American Bar Association in a group which studied the Russian system of justice and its comparison to the American system.

The banquet is a climax of a full day's activities for law student alumni. Registration for law alumni day will be at 9:00 a.m. in the Law building. The morning will be devoted to a Law Institute program at which time state Supreme Court Justice George Rossman will review appellate practice and advocacy under the new Supreme Court rules.

WU's Nuclear Physicist Hopes H-Bomb Tests Can Be Ended

By PAT FARLEY

Back in 1942 the Argonne Nuclear Physics Laboratory was established by the Government on the University of Chicago campus. Here (at what was later termed the Manhattan Project) Dr. Robert L. Purbrick worked on the nuclear reactions which gave rise to the first atomic bomb. Willamette is fortunate to have such a man to head its physics department and to share his views, reported below, on the current question.

What effects of the A and H bombs are giving scientists concern?

Dr. Purbrick pointed out that all of us get a certain amount of radiation each day from the cosmic rays in the atmosphere. Even a normal amount of these rays result on occasion in gene mutations or what we sometimes call "freaks of nature." Scientists like Muller of Indiana U., the Nobel prize winner in genetics, have warned that any increase in radiation which the H-bomb would effect, no matter how small, can be dangerous on a statistical basis. Doses of more than average radiation are expected to show up in gene mutations at least in the second generation with increasing frequency.

ANOTHER LESS important concern of many scientists is that one of the products of a radio-active explosion is strontium. This strontium falls on plants, the animals eat the plants, the people eat the animals, and the result is believed to be bone cancer in the human being.

On the basis of these concerns, Dr. Purbrick believes that most scientists agree that it would be nice to stop testing nuclear weapons. "I would like to, personally," he said. However, he emphasized that he did not have the answer to the international political situation. Some of his comments may help the layman to make up his mind. "We have reached a point where one hydrogen bomb can destroy Portland; it would take maybe two to destroy New York. There doesn't seem to be much reason to make bigger ones."

Dr. Purbrick expressed concern that not enough emphasis had been given to the industrial uses of nuclear energy in the United States, (especially the generation of power) and also noted a lack of its application to the field of medicine.

THE SECRECY which seems to shroud our construction and testing of nuclear weapons has long worried Dr. Purbrick. He asks the question, "whom are we keeping the secret from? After all, the first atomic bomb was not produced by U.S. scientists, but men from all over the world. And scientists all over the world now know the basic reactions for the hydrogen bomb. We are not keeping the secret from anyone but the American people. The people should have the facts on the effects of the H-bomb because that is where the best decision on whether to test and use these nuclear weapons will be made," he concluded.

Law Prof Presents the Case for Wayne Morse

By CHARLES O. JENS
Professor of Law

I have been asked to jot down some of the reasons why I will vote for Wayne Morse for Senator. Let me say in the beginning that I usually do not vote for or against any candidate because of his stand on a particular issue. I look to the man in his entirety, asking, "Is he a man in whose judgment I have faith?" No man is infallible. Wayne Morse is an honest man. He has ability and capacity. He is brilliant, articulate, and persuasive. In his every endeavor — as a law student, as a professor of law, as Dean of a Law School, as a member of the War Labor Board, and as a Senator of the United States — he has not been mediocre or good; he has been outstanding!

Esteemed as Statesman

Only a few short years ago Wayne Morse was evaluated as the third best Senator in the United States Senate. This selection was made by a group of political scientists, about 50 in number, of all political faiths. This evaluation was based upon ability, capacity, intellectual integrity, and worth as a United States Senator. Wayne Morse, the man, has not changed.

His opponent, on the other hand, has been quite mediocre in public office. The pro-Eisenhower New York Times, as recently as last Sunday in its lead editorial, had this to say: "While Senator Wayne Morse, Democrat of Oregon, often takes positions with which we are in disagreement, we think his reelection clearly preferable to a victory for Douglas McKay, who distinguished neither himself nor the Eisenhower Administration during his service as Secretary of the Interior."

"Conscience of the Senate"

I have spent days with Morse in Washington. I watched and listened to him in committee hearings. I watched him in the Senate. He spoke and debated, and the chamber and gallery were not empty. His vitality is amazing. He is able to go to the heart of the issue directly and immediately. He searches for the facts so that he will be informed. He has rightly been called the "conscience of the Senate." He studies and analyzes the bills as they are presented. This is all important. Although he may be in accord with the objective of the bill, he knows that it is important to determine whether the bill, as written, will do what it is purported to do. Therefore, every word, every punctuation mark must be studied. This Wayne Morse does. He studies the testimony pro and con. He also tries to find whether the bill, although its particular objective is meritorious, may violate the Constitution, or violate the separation of powers.

Resists Mere Pressure

In my opinion this is the proper method. I do not think that a Congressman should keep his ear tuned to political winds and vote a certain way just because some group or groups at home want him to.

Morse does not disregard the wishes of his constituents. He considers all of the arguments. We should remember when we desire our Congressman to vote a certain way, we may not be familiar with the wording and punctuation of the bill — we do not see the fine print. Wayne Morse supports and votes on the merits of each bill, and that is just the way it should be. On the other hand, it was reported that his opponent, when Secretary of the Interior, appeared before a committee to give testimony. He had a prepared written statement. Asked about certain statements he had read, he replied that he did not know what they meant because he did not write them.

Wayne Morse cannot be pressured into voting for or against legislation. He is independent and cannot be "had." His opponent found this out when, in 1952, he sent Morse a telegram asking Morse to vote for a bill relating to the so-called Tidelands or to abstain from voting if he could not vote for it. If this is the type of senatorial integrity his opponent will practice, then I take Morse any day.

He has been called a headline hunter. Be assured that he does not force newspapers to headline him. Morse never filibustered to kill a bill. He has talked for over 20 hours on a bill—not to kill it but to delay a vote on it until it could be further studied and amended, and people informed about it. For example, there was an attempt to steamroll the Atomic Energy bill through the Senate. Morse's talkathon resulted in the bill being passed with 22 amendments.

Stand on McCarthy, Eastland

Morse, as a Republican, took a definite stand, publicly, on the McCarthy issue. He did this at the Mock Convention on the campus at Willamette. His opponent sat silently behind him, not even joining in the applause. As far as I know, McKay has never taken a public stand on this issue to this day. Morse as a Democrat voted against appointment of Senator Eastland as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. I cannot conceive of McKay voting against appointment of McCarthy or Jenner as chairmen of their respective committees.

Morse believes our natural resources should be developed in accordance with their greatest potential—his opponent believes otherwise. It might be added that this does not mean that Morse makes it an issue of Public Power vs. Private Power.

Much has been said about his change in party. Free men are certainly free to change their political affiliations. Only in totalitarian countries are men not free to follow the dictates of their conscience. Furthermore, political allegiance is not a one-way street; it is a two-way street. Morse was not elected by one political party; he was elected by the Independents, Republicans, and Democrats. True, he was nominated by the Republican party, and Morse had done so much for that party that his debt has been paid many times over for his nomination.

GOP's No. 1 Target

The Republican party is out to get him. He is their No. 1 target. The assault has been massive and scurrilous. Witness the campaign literature. Witness the pictures. These are half truths, distortions, and what not. The matter of Morse's absenteeism in the Senate is another example of the smear technique. The record shows that on key issues Morse has a recorded voting record of about 95 per cent. He has about the same voting percentage on the overall voting record. This, over a period of 12 years.

McKay has been sent here to do the job of getting Morse. His primary mission is to destroy Wayne Morse's political life.

Morse has worked for the public interest. His entire career has been devoted to that. What has been McKay's record? What has he fought for?

Morse is the greatest political asset this state has had, within my memory. I want the best for my nation and my state. I want a man who will wear no other man's collar. I want a man who will not be pressured into his convictions. I want a man of outstanding ability, capacity, and integrity. I believe that Wayne Morse is such a man. That is why I shall vote for Wayne Morse for United States Senator on November 6.

New Writers Accepted

Six new members were accepted into the Willamette Creative Writing Club at their October 17 meeting. They are Beth Guilbert, Don Howard, Tom Loree, Jean Martin, Arla Roberts and Gail Ostrom.

Political Science Prof Argues for Electing Douglas McKay

By DR. ROBERT M. GATKE
Prof. of Political Science

The contest between Douglas McKay and Wayne Morse for election to the U. S. Senate centers the attention of the United States upon Oregon. The Oregon voter is confronted with a choice between McKay, a loyal supporter and trusted friend of the President, and Morse who has changed from a harping critic of the President to a bitter and irresponsible one. Morse even became reckless enough with truth to assert that the President "is completely lacking in political morality."

With his characteristic unbridled indulgence in bitter vindictiveness he has even asserted concerning the President that "In my judgment, he is the most dangerous man who will ever have been in the White House."

Ike Wants McKay

How can it be otherwise, than that over the country every Oregon vote for McKay will be counted as one of confidence in Pres. Eisenhower and every one for Morse as one against him. The recent Portland appearance and speech by the President was his appeal to the Oregon voters to elect Douglas McKay to the Senate.

The election of McKay will mean that Oregon will be effectively represented in the Senate of the United States. He has declared his sense of responsibility to the people of Oregon and his distinguished record in the State Senate and as Governor of Oregon has established his dependability. Morse has taken the very extreme position that his judgment and conscience alone determines his voting. In the election campaign he explains and tries to justify such disregard of his constituents while at other times he has just loftily brushed the matter aside as unimportant. His own free-wheeling opinions alone should determine his voting, he asserts.

Wins Confidence

In still another way I feel that the election of Douglas McKay will bring Oregon more effective representation. He is a man who works with other men and will not struggle under the heavy handicap of personal dislike. Well established Washington columnists have repeatedly over the years made comment about the unpopularity of Morse among the Senators. This dislike has grown largely from Morse's egotistical assumption of the position of an oracle clothed in self-righteousness. McKay is humble enough to realize that he does not know all the answers and is willing to consider the opinions of others. If Senator Morse could only honestly reach the opinion that he has no complete monopoly on intelligence and sincerity he might gain the effectiveness in the Senate which he now lacks.

Would Be Listened To

In the assembly on Tuesday Senator Morse made a dramatic gesture by waving a copy of Life before us while he asserted that the campaign picture of himself speaking to an almost empty Senate chamber was a doctored picture. It might be — unfortunately such things have been known to happen in heated campaigns. But if so why? Such a picture could have been obtained frequently over the years Morse has been in the Senate. Washington correspondents have frequently commented on the way the Senators hastily move out when Morse starts his long speeches leaving the chamber all but empty. This has been equally true no matter which political label happened to suit his personal political fortune for the time being, Republican, Independent, or Democrat. He has filled hundreds of pages of the Congressional Record with speeches his fellow Senators have refused to hear, and such a record is one of ineffectiveness in representation. I feel that McKay would not attempt to speak on all subjects at all possible times, and when he did take part in debate he would receive a hearing.

Ringnald Heads AAUP

Dr. Murco Ringnald was elected president of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors this week. He succeeds Dr. Cecil Monk.

Other officers elected were Dr. Reginald Parker, vice-president; Prof. Burton Bastuscheck, secretary; and Dr. Chester Kaiser, treasurer.

I feel that Douglas McKay would give Oregon effective representation by making the job of Senator his one job while he held it. He gave time generously to the State Senate, he devoted his full time to being Governor and Secretary of the Interior, separating himself during that time from his private business.

A Full-Time Senator

Senator Morse has probably not devoted more time to his farms, horses, and cattle than any other Senator might devote to needed recreation. But the heavy and very lucrative lecture business which he has built up raises a reasonable question about his giving the job of being Senator the full place in his life it should have. He has been reported as having justified this lucrative business (which he loves not only for the money but because of his craving for the spotlight of public attention) upon the basis that he can not be expected to live on a Senator's salary of $22,500. Certainly it takes him away from Washington a great deal and must consume a large amount of his time and energy. In this campaign he has grown very angry about the references to his voting record — but it seems to me he has failed to justify it.

I feel confident that if McKay replaces Morse in the Senate there will be a man giving full time and undivided attention to his job as Senator.

To replace Morse in the Senate by McKay is in my opinion to place a man there who will accept the job as a call to high duty, to close many years of public service with six years of able work for his state and nation. It would not be for him a national publicity spot-light adding to his lecture billing or chances to win the nomination for a national political office such as our ambitious Senator may dream about as he spends his time reporting to the nation from the lecture platform, by radio and by T.V. How much easier it is to solve the problems of the country and the world from such vantage points rather than the Senate floor!

Don't worry, Arnold—I'll see about transportation.

Y Groups Set Vocation Panels To Aid Student Career Plans

"After College—What?" is a concern that faces each prospective graduate as he contemplates the "cold, confusing world." The Campus YM and YWCA's are sponsoring a series of panel discussions designed to help every student in his preparation for life, after college is over, according to Dick White, YMCA publicity chairman.

THESE DISCUSSIONS are designed to help those who are planning to enter a certain vocation learn more about opportunities and the best preparation for it in the field.

The first panel, on Personal Economics, will help clarify matters for those majoring in economics and related subjects as to what lies ahead.

IT WILL ALSO answer such questions as "How do I buy a home?" and "What is the proper procedure in acquiring insurance?" and "What do they do to shoplifters in this town?" (optional) which are important to all prospective breadwinners, homemakers, and hermits, regardless of their vocations.

EACH OF THESE panels will be limited to approximately one hour, and the first one especially will be kept on this schedule because of the proximity of Homecoming and the resulting sign chaos.

The date is Thursday, November 1, from 7 to 8 p.m. in the SAE house. Everyone is invited. The panel will consist of Salem businessmen representing the various fields discussed.

Philosophy Club Hears Shay Talk

The newly organized chapter of the national philosophy honorary Phi Sigma Tau, held its first meeting under the leadership of its newly elected officers recently and met with a good turnout of members according to Martin Burlingame, president.

Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. Theodore Shay of the political science department. His was the first of a series of lectures that have been planned from the different departments. The purpose of these lectures will be to show the part philosophy plays in the different fields of study, Burlingame said.

Plans are being made to bring a series of films to the students and the proceeds from these films will be used to bring guest speakers from other schools. One of the speakers the group hopes to secure sometime during the year is Alburey Castell, professor of philosophy at the University of Oregon and author of the text book used in introductory philosophy courses here.

Wesley Hoedown, Hayride Tonight

Wesley will have an old-fashioned hoedown tonight in a barn 15 miles north of Salem. A hayride will provide the transportation and the wagon will leave from Lausanne Hall at 7:30.

There will be apple bobbing, all kinds of dancing, and refreshments will be in the form of box desserts which the girls will provide for the boys to buy. The money will be used for a worthy charity.

Cotton skirts and blouses will be the fashion for women and the gents should arrive in jeans and plaid shirts.

Any questions can be adequately answered by Jim Davis at Baxter Hall.

Law Students to Get Practice In Procedure at Moot Court

"I object. . .!"
"Overruled."

These words will echo throughout the halls of the College of Law on November 10, when the law school will be the host for the regional competition of Northwest "Moot Court," practice trial procedure.

Feller, Sigmund Rated A-1 Cadets

Dan Feller and Volney Sigmund were named distinguished AFROTC cadets this week.

Upon the recommendation of the ROTC detachment, the two cadets may apply to air force headquarters for commissions in the regular air force upon graduation. Qualifications for distinguished ROTC cadet include outstanding leadership, high moral character, aptitude for military service, high academic standing, and participation in campus activities.

Feller, a physical education major, served as president of the Letterman's club and the junior class, and was secretary of Arnold Air society. Recipient of the Von Eschen scholarship, he is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and is a three-year letterman.

A psychology major, Sigmund is president of his fraternity, Beta Theta Pi. He lettered in track and football, is the recipient of two scholarships to Willamette, and was president of his class when a sophomore.

The annual activity will be Willamette's third year of participation. Other colleges of law attending the "Moot Court" will be Montana State, University of Washington, and the University of Idaho. The semi-final arguments will be Washington vs. Willamette and Idaho vs. Montana State. The final winner will go to New York to compete in national Moot Court competition.

Moot Court is a method used in law schools simulating actual court room procedure. There are defense and plaintiff attorneys, sometimes student juries, and the judge is either a faculty member acting the part or actually a professional justice.

George Wagner and Duane Ertsgaard will argue for Willamette with Robert Thompson assisting with the written brief. This year's moot case will deal with the problems of whether the rule in McNaghten's Case should be retained as the test for insanity.

Cats Bop C of I From 2nd Spot

FOOTBALLS bounced and slithered all over the field last Saturday night as Willamette posted its second conference victory, clubbing College of Idaho 13-7.

The game was played on a water-soaked McCulloch stadium turf in driving rain. The weather conditions undoubtedly accounted for part of the 17 fumbles amassed by the Coyotes and Bearcats. Willamette was more alert on the defense as they nabbed 9 of the 10 Coyote fumbles and six out of seven of their own miscues.

THE WIN put the Bearcats all alone in second place of the Northwest conference, a spot they haven't enjoyed for two years.

Three thousand Parents' Weekend fans were brought to their feet as Roy Barnes scored the victory clinching touchdown. The freshman Bearcat wingman grabbed the second half kickoff and raced 80 yards up the middle for the TD that salted away the game.

WILLAMETTE'S first touchdown after a non-scoring effort against Lewis and Clark the weekend before, came in the fumble riddled first quarter. Coyote Gary Collins, standing on his own 20-yard line, watched a fourth down pass from center fly over his head and bounce to the one-yard line. Bearcat Bill Wall flopped on the rolling pigskin, and then burly Charlie Koani bulled his way into the end zone on the next play.

TOMORROW evening at 8 p. m., in McCulloch stadium, the two platooning Willamette Bearcats play host to a very tough and determined Linfield College squad.

The Linfield Wildcats are believed to possess the proper personnel on their 1956 team to make it one of the best turned out at the McMinnville school in several years. They are now riding a three-game winning streak, largely due to the terrific aerial attack they boast.

Last weekend the Wildcats spoiled Whitman's homecoming festivities by dumping the Missionaries 14-13. The game was highlighted by the sensational pass receptions of Jerry Beier, the throwing of Ron Parrish and the fine running of freshman fullback Dick Spray.

LINFIELD'S LINE is experienced and has shown very well this year. Leading the forward wall for the Wildcats are all-conference guards Vic Fox and Howard Morris. Russ Kofford and Dick Holliday hold down the tackle positions.

Kofford was an all-conference choice as a sophomore last year. At the center spot will be Cliff Allen, with veteran Les Hershey in reserve. Hershey has been hampered by injuries.

Coach Paul Durham has four outstanding ends in Howard Glenn, Bill Hughey, Hank Crawford and Beier. In the backfield are halfbacks Bob Flood and Vern Marshall, with two brothers competing at the fullback slot, Dick and Sel Spray.

WILLAMETTE has been working hard on pass defense in an all-out effort to curb the throwing of Ron Parrish. The Cardinal and Gold gridders will again use their two platooning method, which has paid off so big thus far.
