John "The Jon" Arrested

By Paul Oweshit

ASWU treasurer 'John' Roadmaker was arrested last night in Pioneer Court House Square by the Portland Police Department on charges of soliciting prostitution. The charges are the result of an undercover Sting operation which was part of Portland Mayor Buzz Clark's new anti-crime program.

A police department spokesperson said that Roadmaker approached an undercover policeman who was disguised as a woman and said, "Hi babe, I'm looking for a bearcat." When the undercover officer inquired as to how much money Roadmaker had, he allegedly responded, "I'm the Treasurer; despite what those Senators may think, I control all the money. The last bearcat we had cost us $600 dollars, but it keeps disappearing so I decided to go shopping."

At this point the officer threw Roadmaker to the ground and handcuffed him. Said arresting officer Armed Tajmahall, "I'm streetwise; I know what 'bare cat' means, and we don't want no pervert stuff like that in our city. This guy fits our typical profile of someone involved in prostitution, middle-aged, balding, dressed in a business suit. We haven't figured out the ear ring yet, but we think that it may mean he's in the Mafia or something. Frankly, all this talk of 'Senators' and stuff may mean we've stumbled on to something really big. It's too early to speculate, but we think this guy may have links Marko Hotfeild."

"I just wanted a fat, hairy one with no pants," Roadmaker said.

During interrogation Roadmaker reportedly said, "I just wanted a fat, hairy one with no pants." Officer Tajmahall responded, "I might not have shaved my legs for this assignment, but no one's ever called me fat before, and I always wear pants when I'm off duty."

ASWU President Erak Flashman has asked the court to reduce bail to a $5 Bistro gift certificate. The request was made after the judge refused to allow Roadmaker to put the bail on his "WU Card." A hearing is set for Thursday.

Portland Mayor Buzz Clark billed this as "a major step in reclaiming our city from criminals, drug dealers and weirdly dressed long-haired bald guys." He says he will ask the courts for the death penalty.

OLCC Raids Baxter Roaches

By Paul Oweshit

Not long after the cockroaches were discovered in the Baxter kitchen, the Oregon Liquor Control Commission (OLCC) stormed a "ragin' party" there. Many minors were caught with alcohol and taken into custody. OLCC agents said this was a continuation of their crackdown on college students' drinking which began with a similar raid at a fraternity in Corvallis.

Authorities would not release the names of those arrested, but it is known that over 200 cockroaches were arrested. They were all assumed to be under 21 years of age because they were unable to produce any identification. All 200 roaches were sited with disturbing the peace, unlawful entry, and minor in possession of alcohol.

Dim Pierce-none, Semi-Director of Residence Life, said the University could not be held liable for the roaches actions because "...the party was not approved by Residence Life nor have the roaches paid room and board yet." Pierce-none went on to say that the incident would probably cause yet another change in

Do-All to Become God

By Kevin BuysHer

"Wild" Bill Do-all recently gave a lecture in Belknap Hall entitled "God is Dead and I Want His Job." Do-all spent the better part of two hours describing his qualifications in vivid detail.

Do-all argued with God Squad members over the question "is God really dead?" After a heated argument Do-all proclaimed himself the winner by saying "I am right. God is dead. I only speak the truth." Upon this declaration the God Squad stopped arguing. Do-all proclaimed this his first official miracle.

Then Do-all cited his experience. First, he was a successful draft dodger, was educated at the great intellectual center of Santa Barbara, was professor of the semester for last fall, and, finally, has never made a mistake in his life.

Of course, Do-all's most im-

WU Evicts State of Oregon

By Martin TailHer

In a suprise announcement today, Willamette disclosed that it will be foreclosing the capitol to build more residence halls. President Hudson and Director of Residence life Dim Pierce-none revealed at a Faculty Luncheon that they had given the State of Oregon a 60 day eviction notice.

When the capitol building is cleared, Willamette will begin construction of an all-campus dining facility and over 300 rooms for student residents. Hudson was very excited by the proposal. "Of course this will mean fewer internship opportunities, but it also means that every Willamette student will have a place to sleep," he said. "It's also the best looking building in Salem. That will do a lot to raise our image among alumni and prospective students."

Pierce-none was also enthusiastic about the plan. "I've always wanted centralized dining on campus. This

HAIRstory/ History

To the Editor:

In my four years at Willamette, I've been happy to see the Minority Preview Weekend and Women's Week emerge as forces to expand and diversify the Willamette campus. But there's one disturbing prejudice that still runs rampant here.

There is a growing misconception that bald people are somehow disadvantaged, or at least unnatural. A letter published in the Collegian semester blamed my receding hairline on a guilty conscience. This is entirely inaccurate. The fact that I'm going bald has nothing to do with my underhanded, seedy, questionable activities as ASWU Treasurer. My baldness is purely hereditary and is in no way a handicap.

I certainly learned this fact in Washington, D.C. while working for U.S. Senator Mark O. Hatfield. There are bald men (and women) in every level of government, and not all of them wear toupees. But the media hides this fact from us to preserve the myth that bald people are less successful than the rest of the population.

In fact, even history ignores those people who happened to have been bald. Look at the "famous" people in American history. Was George Washington bald? No. Was Abraham Lincoln bald? No. Even Betsy Ross was not bald.

Those figures who were bald have been left out of "history". Caligula (a hero of mine) was supposedly bald, but how many American history books mention him?

The truth needs to be known. Some of the most successful and pompous individuals have been bald. After all, just look at our own ASWU President, Eric Fishead.

Tie -Dye Temper Tantrum

I was sitting around last week trying to think about what kind of wisdom to endow on you shitheads this week when I suddenly realized how futile it all is. You know what I mean?

I mean you guys are all so dumb it makes me want to throw up. You sit around in aren't happy, that you aren't learning and that all you care about is money. You never listen. All I've ever wanted was to be appreciated. Do you care? No.

I think this is all caused by one thing — tie dye shirts. Think of all the terrible things these shirts have shirt. After all, Robbie Pat-ronidge had one on, but do any of you seriously believe he cares about world peace?

That's the whole problem with tie-dye shirts. Their being worn by a whole bunch of people who don't know what they really mean and don't even care. How can these shirts be a symbol of a movement, a spirit or a generation when a lot of the people who wear them now are more concerned with their new BMW than with nuclear weapons? I'll bet half the people who wear tie-dye nowadays have never taken psychedelic drugs either. Let me tell you, a little LSD makes a tie-dye a hell of a lot more symbolic.

I think these people, these false wearers of tie-dye shirts, are just waiting for someone to tell them to stop. The next time you see a fascist wearing a tie-dye, the best thing you could do for yourself and for them is to stop, holler "Bullshit," and publically humiliate yourself and them.

It won't be easy for you, but believe me, it's for the best.

I've tried, you know. I've tried to teach you that you

Tie-dye shirts disappeared after the 60's and 70's. Well, they're back and do you know what that means? Let me tell you, tie dye means injustice my friends.

Tie-dye is the reason the sophomores lost Glee this year. The judges hated the chaotic colors and the attempt to represent peace through a silly symbol like a

Divestment Distinction Discrimination Debated

To The Editor:

While many of the "bleeding hearts" at Camp Willamette may feel good inside about the Board of Trustees' recent decision to divest part of Willamette's financial holdings in companies that do business with South Africa, I feel compelled to write and complain about the discriminatory manner in which this issue has been treated.

Who is to say that the South African Government is more repressive than governments in other Third World countries? For example, why is it that there has not been a larger outcry about the treatment of political refugees in countries such as Argentina, Bolivia, and Paraguay? Is it because ASWU President Erikkk Fishfrier doesn't want to deal with issues that are closer to home? Those who know know that Fishfrier has deliberately kept his head in the sand concerning many issues Willamette should be dealing with, which are much closer to Salem than South Africa is.

In short, I feel that those who call for divestment in South Africa need to be, at the very least, thinking about divestment in similar places in which abuses abound. "My short list" for divestment would include the following:

- South Africa
- South America
- South Carolina
- South Dakota
- South Detroit
- South Korea
- South Pacific
- South Salem
- The South Side of Chicago
- South Vietnam
- South Yemen

When Willamette holdings in companies doing business in these places have been divested, then an only then will we have a consistent divestment policy.

Respectfully Submitted,
Gregg Mull-over-houser

SOILED BRIEFS

Chip Down for 3rd Time

Following a closed session of the ASWU Elections Board, KWU Station Manager and two-time ASWU presidential candidate Dayve Chia-petta announced in a tearful speech that he was withdrawing his candidacy for president.

At issue was an allegation, brought to the Board's attention by fellow presidential candidate Mike Theism, that Chia-petta's entire $80 campaign had been funded by Norma Paulus, who launched an unsuccessful bid to become Oregon's first female governor two years ago.

ASWU President Erak Fishbake, an ex-officio member of the Elections Board, claimed that the decision to withdraw from the race was solely Chia-petta's. Fishbake also denied rumors that he would seek Paulus' support to remain in office another year.

Sororities need Condoms

The Panhellenic Council has formed a Condom Advisory Committee to deal with growing complaints about the new machines. Only two of the sororities have condom machines, but complain they are constantly empty even though the company is filling them twice a week. Chairperson of the Advisory Committee said "We don't know what is happening to them but we'll stay up all night if we have to in order to find out the truth." ASWU President Eric Fishandchips has sent a letter to President Hudsins protesting the scarcity of quarters on campus.

Overbearing Sentenced

In a top secret session of the Executive Committee yesterday evening, it was determined that WITLESS Senator Mark Overbearing was responsible for the destruction of the senate minutes for the meeting on February 22. The Board will recommend to the full senate that Overbearing be charged with obstruction of justice and destroying government records, and that he be subsequently sentenced to lunch duty at the Keepa Slugma Fraternity House for the remainder of the year.

Overbearing, while admitting that he wished he could withdraw his infamous suggestion made that evening to Keepa Slugma Senator Robby Patronage that Patronage leave the meeting and "go to the bathroom," claimed that suggestions of malfeasance on his part were unjustified. "I am not a crook!" exclaimed Overbearing, upon hearing of Executive Board's decision.

Dirt Covers HelmsAward

Rumor has it that the front-runner for this year's Jesse Helms Award, the distinction for the student who demonstrates the most "friendly good cheer" to others at Willamette" and who best upholds the ideals of Alexander Hamilton, Frederick Neitzsche, and Pat Robertson," is none other than Keepa Slugma member "Raggedy" Andy Dorschester.

According to an unnamed source whose name was withheld-by-request, ASWU President Erk Fishstick, talking with Awards Committee Chairman Shon Pittrack, claimed that the award needed to go to a member of his fraternity in keeping with the precedent set at Senior Skits last month.

It was further claimed that Pittrack had coveted the prize for himself this year, but was consoled when Fishstick told him "Shon, after a year of serving as ASWU President, you'll be a cinch for the award your senior year."

Tower Remains Timeless

Vice President for Academic Affairs Samm "Monty" Hall announced the administration's latest decision regarding the Whipple Clock Tower's continued loss of time. Rather than attempt to again repair the tower and to keep it running at the correct time, the University will issue Timex watches to all entering students, and will encourage returning students to purchase watches of their choice with the special tuition remission they receive at the start of the academic year. Agreeing with the new policy, ASWU President Eric Fishbait noted that "The Tower's like the President. It doesn't have to work, it just needs to look good."

Governor pledges Phi Delta Theta House

By Pam Stuck-up

The Phi Dolt's have found a new home! After reading about the Phi Dolt's plight in a recent edition of the Collegian, Governor Neil Goldschmidt invited the fraternity to move into the governor's mansion stating, "This house is too big for one family and with a house full of Phi Dolt's I won't need to invest in a new security system. I have always been impressed by the security that the Phi Dolt's have had at their fraternity parties. Besides, my seventeen year old daughter would love to have college parties on the premises."

Now that the Phi Dolt's have resolved their residence dilemma the campus is predicting that the move into the governor's mansion is going to change their animal image. Being so close to the political power of Oregon is going to enable them to become the next Kappa Sigma fraternity on campus.

Rumor even has it that many members of Keepa Slugma are dropping their pins so that they can be eligible to receive a bid from the Phi Dolt's. If the Keepa Slugma chapter folds due to a lack of numbers the Phi Dolt's plan to use the "carrot house" as a base for all future political action.

The campus is also predicting that most freshmen will choose to be Phi Dolt's next year during fall rush. Not only will the house have political clout it also won't be eating Marriott food as Mrs. Goldschmidt has offered to be the fraternity cook. The Phi Dolt chapter lives and is on its way to taking over the campus.

ASWU President Eric Fishflake claimed to be responsible for the governor's decision. "Well, I work for him, at least," Fishflake stated.

Rehms of Trash

By Kiss my Gaits.

The arrogant left-wing sponsors of the Streams of Thought series announced yesterday that they would heed the recommendation of the Collegian's Vanguard Point editorial and not stuff mailboxes with their over priced, over-sized posters.

After weeks of agonizing debate, the group has generated an alternate plan that will eliminate the inconvenience of their last "stuffing." Committee Co-Chair Merc Overbearing said the group's plan used a two pronged attack to deal the problems raised in the article.

Part one of the plan called for the use of 78 weight paper instead of 80 weight as they used last time. Committee member Jon Blakk said "We felt that we could compromise in the area of paper weight without losing the quality of the posters and we saved nearly $3."

The group called the second phase of their plan "revolutionary" and said it would effect the future of all campus stuffings. This part of their plan eliminate the need for students to extract its over-sized posters from their boxes, the group would simply "tastefully dump the posters on the floor near the mailboxes in the University Center."

Student reaction to the decision was mixed. ASWU President Eric Fishface squirmed "I do believe it is a revolutionary decision and, even though I was not involved in the decision, I feel that my revolutionary leadership makes it my right to take credit for it." Fishface said the he and Windy "Vanna" Willdo were planning a rally in support of the decision.

Other students echoed the sentiments of Kert Redface when he said, "I don't get much mail, so I look forward to that trash!"

University Center Manager Tony Noubbles favored the decision saying "If they are tastefully dumped they will be much easier to pick up." Noubbles added that tasteful dumping was not defined and so he was not sure how much easier it would be to pick up.

So we will all just have to wait and see how this new plan will work and how it will affect the future of all-campus mailings.

Hudsin Exterminated

By Paul Oweshit,

600 cockroaches released President Hudsin unharmed and were freed on their own recognizance after a 3 day seige in the basement of Sparks Center. The multitude of insects fled the Baxter kitchen shortly before the health inspector arrived for a second visit. The roaches rushed toward Sparks, consuming two unsuspecting Freshmen in the process.

By noon the cockroaches reached the racketball court in the bottom of Sparks where Hudsin was napping. The President reserves the same court for an hour nap each day.

The crazed roaches surrounded Hudsin until his screams attracted nearby weight lifters.

The Police and Fire Departments arrived quickly and negotiating teams went to work. The cockroaches demanded free passage to west campus and respect for their rights as individuals.

The seige finally ended when police threw in gas bombs and trapped fleeing roaches with several Roach Motels at the door.

The roaches were warned and rereleased in Baxter kitchen to await the return of the Health Department.

According to Eark Fishface, "I'm sure glad everything worked out all right. I was concerned about my buddy Hudsin."

The Bistro Proficiency Test

Please pass to gain admission to the Bistro.

President Hudsin promised Willamette students that tuition would not increase "unreasonably" for a while. To guarantee a steady money flow Hudsin plans to:

- win the grand from the Wide World of Poetry
- let the Whippie clock run even slower so we stay another year
- charge the ducks (and cockroaches) tuition (rumor has it that Rez Life wants to slap on room and board, too.)

The best thing about Senior Skits was:

- Marc Overbite as himself (classroom scene)
- Erk Fishbait as himself (Tim Pisson scene)
- the Fishbait Best Friends award

Many people wonder why the Freshman won THE Glee. The Freshman don't. Our surprise came because:

- they practiced during the Freshman Year Experiment
- they bribed the judges (mommy and daddy.) Those lessons from the juniors, "Dad, I'd like to buy a soda pop..." really paid off.
- overcrowding in the dorms helped them move around efficiently as amoebas.

Willamette is a Liberal Arts institution (uh-huh) and works hard to rid society of its ills. This year South Africa, women and the hungry were in the forefront of the community consciousness. That is, unless you're more worried about:

- SAGA
- getting out of class on time
- washing and waxing your brand new BMW

We work hard to make a difference.

What makes news at Willamette? Anything that begins with a K, I guess:

- K-Sag (Y'know, AZWU, the Beastro, all the good stuff)
- K-UW (Y'know, Top 40, radio fuzz, all the bad stuff)
- karrots, the toy for Student Bodies (all from K-Sag.)
- The Kollegian

Here at Willamette we work hard and play hard.

- True
- False
- One out of two ain't bad.

Hudsin really loves this campus. Especially:

- hearing the 'taped' chimes from the clock tower
- Penrose's impossible triangle (it reminds him of his ideas)
- visualizing himself standing on the Hofeld balcony (though he's a little bit jealous he didn't get one too)

The best thing Jon Roadmaker did all year was:

- skip class
- graduate
- pee in a cup at Senior Skits

The most welcome guest at WU this year was:

- a cow
- Tom Wolfe (he didn't come)
- Ronald Reagan (he didn't come, either. He was still welcome)

the alcohol policy at Willamette. Pierce-none elaborated on his reasoning behind the changes by saying "If we don't change the alcohol policy every week how are we supposed to find a reason to put the Batas on Social Probation each week?"

The OLCC believes that the Roaches do attend Willamette, even though the University denies it. The OLCC came to the conclusion that they were Willamette students because all the roaches listed their occupation as "bugging the Salem community." The OLCC says as soon as it has any evidence it will prosecute any and all parties associated with the incident.

Erk Fishface and Jon Roadmaker issued a statement on behalf of ASWU saying that they were not invited by the roaches therefore do not have any responsibility.

President Hudsin was not available for comment since he was out of the office on his usual Wednesday trip to the BMW dealership.

The court date for the roaches has been set for the third Tuesday in September 1990.

Vote OK, lacks Initiative

In last Thursday's vote, 53% of the students voted for the measure, while 38% percent were opposed. The remaining 9 percent of the ballots were marked "the Egyptian for all four spots", and subsequently destroyed.

Commented ASWU President Erkc Fishwich, "It's a great improvement over last year's results [in the vote on the same measure]," although he noted that the vote was still short of the two-thirds majority necessary to pass as a student initiative.

Olson Targets ASWU

In an action which surprised even his most ardent supporters, former State Senator Bill Olson (I-Medford), who was recently recalled by his Southern Oregon constituents, announced a write-in candidacy for ASWU President, an office he previously held in the early 1970's.

"I want to return to the simple days of ASWU, when I didn't have to worry about partisan bickering, or wonder whether someone was looking over my sholder whenever I did something," claimed Olson, who has not contacted any Greek organizations for an endorsement.

Derel Foller, a Willamette student and Olson's former Administrative Assistant, will be in charge of Olson's campaign. Current ASWU president Erwok Fishbreath commented that "Foller should be in a good position to see what needs to be done (on the campaign); he's run for ASWU office twice, himself."

Jell Skynard and Eric Fishhead are now sponsoring the Nuclear-Free Individual program. Skynard commented "since our Nuclear-Free Zone was a total failure, we've decided to make this an individual thing. We foresee significant support from the 60-80 IQ crowd which includes most freshman girls and frat members."

Skynard instructs supporters to wear the cut-out button (below) so that Soviet satellites can photograph them and not destroy wearers. "They only respect strength," he stated.

Skynard also requests that each nuclear-free individual memorize the following pledge and recite it five times a day while facing Mecca.

Invisible Illusion?

The Physics Department is offering a $5 reward to anyone giving information leading to the apprehension of Penrose's Illusion. The Illusion was last seen across from the U.C. It was wearing a fresh coat of gold paint, courtesy of the Maintenance staff. Any information on the missing Illusion's location or artistic merit should be sent to Professor Morwice Stallwart. ASWU President Erak Fishmonger has also offered a piece of cheese cake as a reward.

Dean in Brice's Scandal

The Dean's Search Committee released its list of finalists for the position last Friday. Professors Loo Gooble, Bub Hawkinsun, and Shairen Shooman have been selected as finalists from a field of over 53 applicants. ASWU President Airic Fishmate denounced the committee's findings, charging bias among the committee members, and announced that he would form his own Presidential Commission to search for "more suitable candidates".

"I wasn't even asked to be on the committee," complained Fishbake. "Besides, every one of the finalists are teaching courses [committee member] Errin McWrath is currently taking."

While acknowledging the "strange coincidence", Professor Hawkinsun categorically denied that there had been any attempt to influence the committee members. "Sure, I treated Errin to lunch at Brice's every day last week," Hawkinsun said. "But I'm just trying to do my part to improve student/ faculty relations."

S Africa ups Endowment

The white-dominated South African Government announced last week that it would invest a "substantial" amount of its money in Willmette University. The decision came after studying many American universities.

Prime Minister of South Africa P.W. Botha said the factor which won the day for Willmette was "the Board of Trustees refusal to fully divest from companies doing business in South Africa." Botha felt this action showed that there were people, in positions of power, outside of South Africa who could understand their point of view. President Erin Fishfuck has formed an Ad Hoc committee to oversee the budgeting of the funds.

Cheats Get Endorsement

Willamette's new "Fishman Year Experience" has accomplished what it set out to do; it has encouraged a sense of unity between the members of the Freshman class that cannot be beat.

The Freshman class is so unified there are a few students who are even beginning to write identical papers for their seminar classes. Said one freshman, "How can professors accuse these poor individuals of cheating when it is really the fault of the common experience which has turned them all into clones and robbed them of their individuality? These kids should not be punished but should be admired for achieving unity of the mind as a direct result of their Fishman Year Experience. Besides, that's what they made word processors for." ASWU President Erc Fishbreath commented, "Yeah, they caught a few, but the Keepa Slugma pledges say the odds against getting busted are still 8-3."

Ex-Editor "Reamed"

Ex-Vanguard Co-editor Rick Spoonless was released from an English hospital on Tuesday after recovering from "a stress related illness." The stress was apparently caused by a letter from a friend in the "Rathole" which informed Spoonless that his former co-editor John Ream has "given in and joined the establishment" by becoming editor of the rival Collegian. After his release, Spoonless said he would start editing his own edition of the Vanguard from England which he would mail to students at Willamette. Said Spoonless, "I've been Reamed." ASWU President Erk Fishbrains said, "Yeah, I had the same reaction, but I ate three pounds of pasta and I felt better."

provides us with a fantastic opportunity. How many college students can say that they've eaten Saga under the dome of a state capital building. I'll finally have my Saga-dome."

Pierce-none also said that the capital space should help alleviate the overcrowding problem on campus. "I knew things were getting bad when we were cramming six students into a two person room. The Capitol will provide us with space for up to 600 students."

This is, according to Hudsun, quite a bit more space than Willamette actually needs. "It will allow me to raise both enrollment and tuition in the same year, though," Hudsun stated.

East-side Saga Manager Linda Bangles stated that Saga will begin the move to the Capitol a little earlier than the rest of campus. "It will take us some time to rip out all out the equipment in Baxter, Doney, Wish, Shepard and Lee and move them across the street," she stated. "We also have to escape before the cockroaches find out where we are going."

ASWU President Erc Fishmonger was less than enthusiastic about the move. He remarked "Goldschmitt is so pissed at Hudsun that he fired all of his interns from Willamette. I lost my job, man, I thought the Hud and I had this all worked out."

Oregon Governor Neil Goldschmitt was not available for comment.

Student reaction to the announcement has been mixed thus far. Freshman Aarronn McceGraph was gleeful when he stated "This means I'll get into the capitol before I'm 20. That's much earlier than I had planned."

Many students were concerned about the quality of rooms in the capitol. "It's all marble and brass and stuff," stated sophomore Michelle Shutzpah, "it'll be a real pain in the neck to heat."

Hudsun stated that students could expect a $900 tuition increase and a $700 room and board increase next year. "And don't even try to move off-campus," he warned.

"Yeah," Pierce-none added.

pressive qualification is his enormous ego. "All the students want to take my classes," he said. "More than that, they all love me. I've already got a significant following. What other diety wanna-be's can say that?"

Do-all stated his goals as God. "If elected," he promised, "first I would fire the Hud. Then I would shoot all political conservatives. Only the liberals would survive; everyone else would go up against the wall! Additionally, I would put a stop to everthing that isn't French. After all, France is the last bastion of civilization."

Do-all also stated that he felt he would be a much more pleasant God than the last one. "I won't have any of this burning in Hell shit. I'm not too stressed about pre-marital sex or worshipping false gods. I just kind of take things as they come."

He stated that he had only thought up one official 'sin.' "The only thing I consider truly evil is not liking Voltaire. Anyone who does not like Voltaire can just find some other planet to live on."

When asked about his plans for the future, Do-all stated that, "Oh, this is just the tip of the sacreligious iceberg." He stated that his most pressing goals were to completely dismantle the Catholic Church and rewrite all of human history.

Students at the meeting were mostly shocked by Do-all's declaration. History major Marfa Ben-it declared "I guess this means I won't be able to argue with him anymore," as she stared mindlessly into space.

ASWU President Erc Fishfood, also in the audience, was miffed. "I was going to run for God myself," he stated. "Do-all just got there ahead of me."

At first the audience was skeptical, but with credentials like these who could argue with him? By the night's end, the attendees were ready to start the campaign of Bill Do-all for GOD!!

Whenever we feel like it.

Behind Every Man is Windy Will-do

By Karen Lyingdown

It is often said that behind every good man is a good woman. Here at Willamette the saying is, behind every ASWU man is Windy "Vanna" Will-do. Denied the actual power of office solely because of bad timing, Windy has resigned herself to controlling power behind the scenes.

It has been said she practically lives at Kappa Sigma North where both President Eric Fishface and Secretary Lawrence Dudley reside. Rumor has it that she is furthering her quest for control through her involvement with the secretary.

The men of course are oblivious to her tactics. Typical males, they figure that no one with that much blonde hair could possibly have the brains to control the political life of Willamette. Little do they suspect that the blonde hair is just a disguise; it's really mouse brown.

Always anxious that she is going to lose power, Windy suffers severe stress due to her attempt to keep her finger in every event that occurs on campus.

Seldom does she do any of the hard work for a committee or a planned event but she never hesitates to claim all of the credit. Of course she received lessons in the art of credit snatching from the master himself, Eric Fishface.

Windy says the two things that were hardest for her to take credit for were the Willamette divestment movement and this year's women's week.

Rumor has it that Windy is going to postpone her graduation so she can run for ASWU president and finally be recognized as the real leader of this campus.

When asked what she plans to do if her election bid fails Windy stated that she planned to work for "The Hud" so that she could finally control all of Willamette's policies and have a say in all planned activities. Good luck Windy and take care of that ulcer.

Fishmen Year Experience: the First Year

By Pat Cookandski,

The faculty council has released a preliminary report about World Blues, the freshman seminar. Pronouncing the class a success, faculty member Michael Staylow declared that "things happened that weren't even supposed to happen."

"For instance," stated history professor Bill Do-all, "the freshmen really learned to hang together. Where else could they learn the finer points of cheating except in a class where 400 students study the exact same things?"

Freshman class The Glee Manager P.J. Mossy was also enthusiastic about the seminar. "We used the extra time during the weekly all-class lectures for marching and singing practice. I think that had a lot to do with our phenomenal The Glee success this year."

Chemistry professor David Goodknee stated that he and ASWU president Eric Fishshit have worked out some new ideas for next year's seminar. "We're working out a Bistro proficiency requirement for next year. It's very encouraging, and also fattening."

Goodney stated that each freshman would be required to spend at least one hour a week having coffee with one of the World Views faculty. "We figure this has two main advantages. It promotes faculty-student conversations, and it also means that the Bistro has a guaranteed income."

Fishshit said that he had also begun working on a poli-sci requirement with Professor Bob Hawking—Sun. Each freshman would be required to spend at least one hour a week at an Ad-hoc ASWU committee meeting. A freshman in Senate would be exempt from this requirement.

When asked if he thought the new ideas would alienate potential freshmen, Staylow stated, "It might. If so, eh, then we'll have smaller classes."

Admissions councilor Stev Fuckyouchi was excited by Staylow's remarks. "Smaller classes means a smaller faculty/student ratio. That's good news for admissions advertising. Besides, it also means we won't have to put six freshman in one room. That was an experience unto itself."

When asked why they don't just call next year's program "Fishshit's views: The Fishshit year experiment," Fishshit remarked, "I really don't know, but I've formed my own committee to look into it."

Women's B-Ball Clobber Men's Football

By Tracee Rysinger

The Willamette campus saw a rare event in sports last weekend at McCulloch Stadium when the women's basketball team took on the men's football team. The men suffered the ultimate in embarrassment as the women rolled over them to win 42-7. This was the first win in an athletic contest for the women who managed to lose all of their basketball games during the regular season.

With Donna Kalama at quarterback, the lady bear-cat's air and ground attack were virtually unstoppable. On the opening drive of the game, Kalama connected with tight end Janine Pringle for an 80 yard touchdown pass.

Then, after a fumble by the men's team on the women's 20 yard line, running back Kathy Kelso broke through the middle for a fifty yard gain. This set up another scoring drive for the women as Kalama connected with Sabrina Petersen for a thirty yard touchdown pass.

Up 14-0 just 2 minutes into the first quarter the women never looked back. The defensive line of Lively, Noble, Andrus and Thom was able to hold the men's rushing attack to a meager 30 yards due to their superior strength and size. (If I were Joe Broeker I'd lock the men in the weightroom and lose the key until next season.)

During the women's locker room victory celebration Coach Cheryl Brown commented on the game. "It was great to finally get a win under our belt. We were very disappointed with the dismal showing we made in the league this year and we needed something to boost player morale and confidence."

"I decided to challenge the men's football team to a game after seeing a few of Joe's players in the weight room

"I knew the men would be no match for us."

while my girls were working out. You know, we eat fast food greaseville after every road game and the girl's have really bulked out."

"I knew the men would be no match for us. The only problem now is that Coach Broeker has been recruiting all of my players and I might not have a team left next basketball season."

Football: Deferred Rush: A Passing Fad

By Myke Theeesson

In a surprise decision last Saturday, Willamette Men's Football Coach Joe Broke-up announced that the team would be instituting a policy of Deferred Rush for the 1988-89 Football Season.

"It's gonna' be a hell of a year trying to make all our yardage by passing," Broke-up said, "But Dim Pierce-none says we're gonna do it, and we're gonna do it. I've got my contract coming up next year."

The Phi Delta Thata-way House, in which most of the football team currently resides, appeared to be less eager about the change. Phi Dolt President Snott Coughie argued, "It's not fair. They keep taking away the only things we can utilize to make our presence felt at Willamette. First they took our house away, now they're saying we can't run the football. Pretty soon, they'll tell us the only vegetables we can eat are carrots."

In a separate interview, ASWU President Erk Fishingpole had no problem with the imposed decision. "What would be the big deal," Fishingpole argued, "if Residence Life mandated carrots once in a while?" It would probably do them some good."

"The Great Actors."
