

V. 1 "DISCOVERY"

FRESHMEN '89

I opened my eyes to the morning
Not quite ready to wake
Yet I threw myself into the mid-morning darkness
And figured this was my day to make.

Chorus

Today was my discovery
Today was my discovery

V. 2.

I don't look for new things
They seem to look for me
They give me new perspectives
And allow me to see.

Chorus

Bridge

Try some new things, try new beginnings
Put away with days gone by
Look for tomorrow, don't dwell on sorrow
Everything will work out just fine.

V. 3

I took a step into the future
And gathered all the ideas I could see
I let them drift freely in my mind
And they somehow fulfilled my dreams

V.4

You too can feel the sensation
of the things I said before
Just Reach down deep within yourself
And open up the great big door .

Chorus

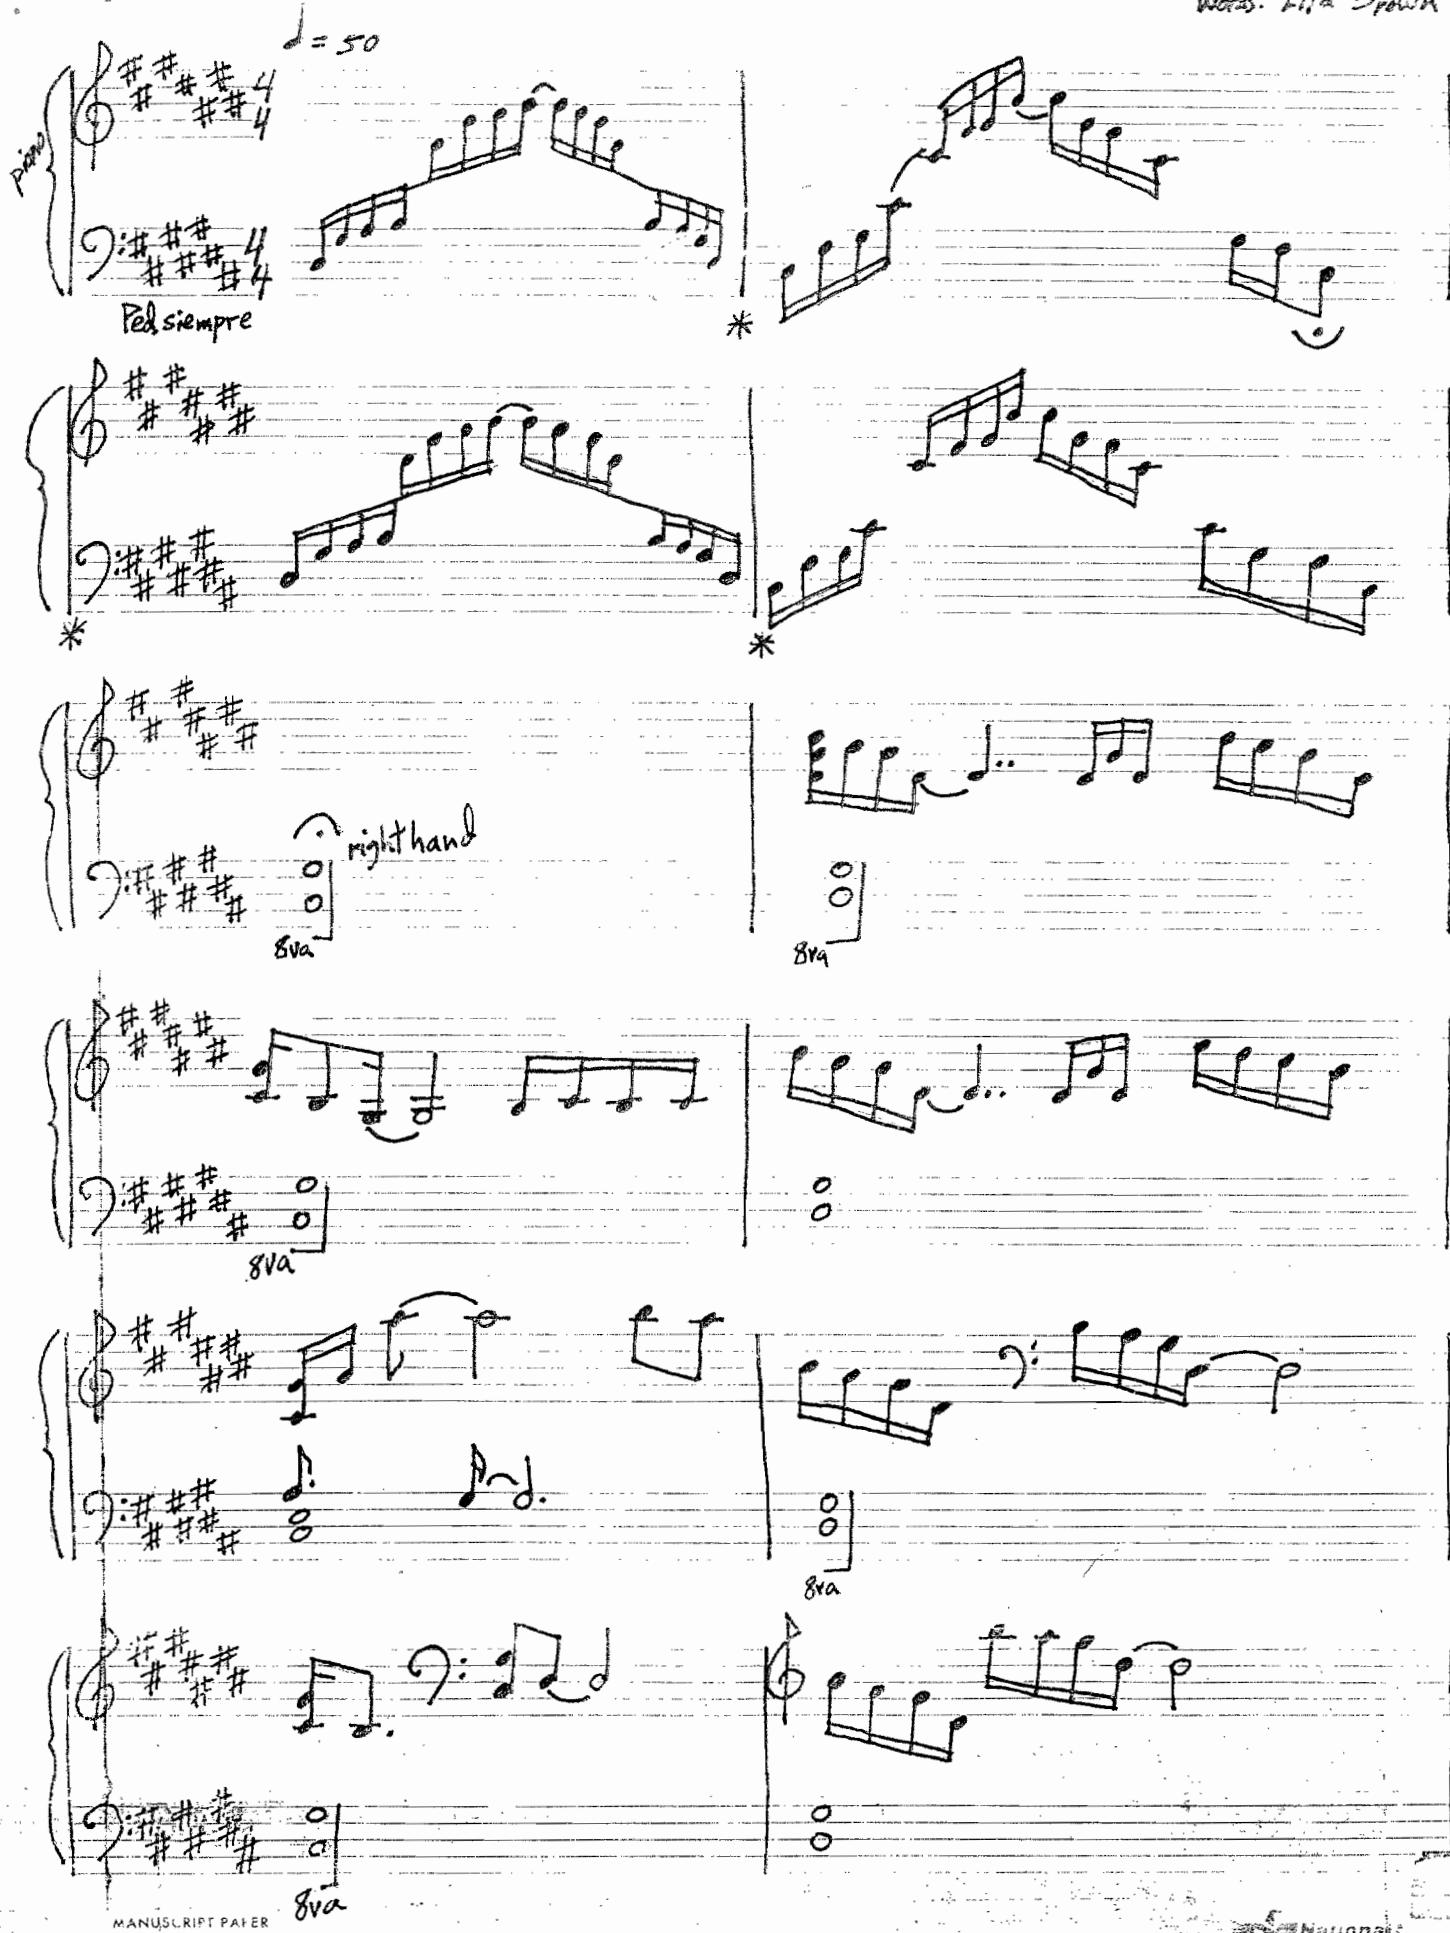

To discovery
Today was my discovery

THROUGH THE YEARS

The lyrics to Through the Years are the thoughts of a young Willamette student walking across campus at night. Whereas the student is normally preoccupied with papers and tests, tonight his thoughts turn to his surroundings. As our T-shirt design depicts, he stops to think for a moment in the quiet of the night about all of the people who must have walked on the same path so many years ago. What were they thinking? Were they worried about the same papers and tests, or did they focus on more important goals. This scene is set by a solo at the beginning of the song:

A misty night, I walk alone underneath the starry sky. The sidewalk washed in pale lamplight as the Mill Stream rushes by.

The song consists of three parts. The piano score is improvisational with three part harmony in the vocals. In the first section, the student thinks of all the men and women who were once a part of the same campus, but people about whom he knows nothing. The first formation, a violin, represents these people. It was discovered in Waller during the renovation and no one knows its story, but like these people, it is a part of the tradition of which the student is now a part.

The second section moves to those men we do know and remember. Remember when... (this year's sub-theme) the men of Willamette fought to preserve our freedom and the ideals of a liberal arts university? The first verse in the section is sung by the men alone, corresponding with the formation of a swastika melting into a peace symbol. He realizes that it is these men who helped preserve the ideals of Willamette and that it is these men who we must thank as we see the crumbling of the Berlin Wall.

In the chorus, the student realizes that when he wakes up the next morning, and every morning from now on, he will "still have yesterday."

The third section follows an upbeat bridge, whereas the tone of the song up to this point has been more serious and pensive. The student's thoughts focus on what Willamette is today. He ponders the idea that he is joining his voice to the chorus of everyone who has gone before him to become a part of his alma mater. The section ends with his realization that no matter where the future leads him, his alma mater will always be a part of him.

A solo returns to repeat the chorus, coming down from his/her (although "he" has been used, the student is obviously every student at Willamette) lofty thoughts, the student once again finds himself underneath the streetlamp gazing across the sky and down to the lamplight washed sidewalk. The song leads into a formation of an eagle flying off, representing both the eagles on our new fountain and the idea that we will take what Willamette's given us into the future, and "like an eagle we will soar."

"LOOKING THROUGH THE EYES OF A CHILD"

CLASS OF '89

Looking through the eyes of a child.

1. Thumbing through the pages of my memory,
To a time when I was small,
Decorations, red and green
And the thrill of the first snowfall.
I can still recall the package
That Santa left for me,
As I opened it up on Daddy's lap,
For all the world to see.

CHORUS

I wake up to a new adventure
Knowing a novel world awaits me.
The discoveries I made yesterday
Give me inspiration for tomorrow.
And I don't know what lies ahead...
It's like looking through the eyes of a child.

2. Many chapters later, as I'm reading on,
I'm a part of the high school scene.
I wonder at the faces 'round me,
Do they share the dream I dream?
We have all grown up together
But, soon we'll drift apart.
We're setting out into the world,
On separate paths we'll start.

CHORUS

In my years at Willamette
Remembering all I've done;
From the hours spent on FRESHMAN GLEE
To the hours spent at the Library,
I think what I have become.
I'm ready for the next step forward.
My future is no longer a dream.
With these friends standing here beside me,
I share the bond of opportunity.
Innovation is our new theme!

3. Filling in the pages of my life,
Growing old and hopefully wise,
Every challenge facing me,
May I greet with sparkling eyes.
Every day is an unopened package
Restoring excitement in me,
Like the child from so long a go,
Who sat on Daddy's knee.

CHORUS

Looking through the eyes of a child.

It's like looking through the eyes of a child.
