FAMED WORLD ARTISTS SLATED FOR SERIES

Jerome Hines

Four world renowned performances which include a baritone, French pianist, Russian violinist and Chorale group, will be presented by the Willamette Distinguished Artists Series this season.

The appearance of Jerome Hines, leading Metropolitan Opera basso, on November 19, will launch the 1958-59 concert series in the Fine Arts Auditorium on the campus. Acclaimed by the N. Y. Herald Tribune as "An artist, in both acting and singing, who may well stand up against any of our distinguished foreign visitors at the Met," the handsome, six-foot-six inch California born singer is celebrating his twelfth anniversary with the operatic company.

Considered to be one of the most gifted of the younger pianists, 23-year-old Philippe Entremont will be highlighted on February 11. In the tradition of the great virtuosi, the brilliant lanky Frenchman has been greeted with joyous welcomes wherever he has journeyed. Always re-engaged by his concert audiences, he is currently on his fourth cross-country trek of the U. S. and Canada.

Harmony and magnificence in the performance of Igor Besrodni, young Soviet violinist, will interest the Series audience on March 11. Making his American debut this year, Besrodni has won high praise throughout the Soviet Union and in such countries as Poland, Finland, Germany, Great Britain, France, and Japan. As with Marian Anderson's appearance last year, he is being presented under the cultural exchange program.

The final artist performance will be April 8, when the Robert Wagner Chorale group makes its third coast-to-coast tour of the United States. Presenting concerts in leading concert halls on the West coast and Europe, the group has appeared on radio, television, motion picture sound tracks and on some dozen hit phonograph records. Ranging in number from 16 voices to 255, depending upon the music to be interpreted, the Chorale group reflects a unique mixture of musical perfection and audience-moving enthusiasm.

Tickets for this series may be obtained by writing in care of Concert Series Manager Willard Bunney or from Stevens and Son Jewelers in Salem.

WILLAMETTE THEATRE

You have three stimulating evenings ahead during the 1958-59 theatre season.

November 14 and 15 are the dates set for Death Takes a Holiday, by Alberto Cassella. This play shows Death coming to earth to take human form for three days in order to discover why people fear him. He finds it is love that causes this fear, because people do not want to leave their loves—people, beauty or love of things. While Death is on earth he falls in love with a girl, but we will leave their solution for you to see one of those nights.

A bill of one-act plays will be presented on March 6 and 7. These will be announced at a later date.

May Weekend will conclude the theatre season, April 30 and May 1. The modern farcial comedy, Out of the Frying Pan, by Francis Swann will provide an entertaining evening.

Tickets are available by writing the Drama Department at Willamette or through Stevens and Son Jewelers in Salem. Curtain time is 8:15 p. m.

ART GALLERY

The month of November will feature an exhibit by Demitrios Jamison, Professor of Art at Oregon State College. Senior students will present the show in the gallery in December. January will feature a showing by William Hixson, Professor of Art at the University of Washington in Seattle.

The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9:00 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. and can be entered from the east side of the Fine Arts Building. The interested public is invited.

about the cover

Showing freshman Stuart Hall about the campus is Willamette's popular new Dean of Students, Dr. Walter S. Blake.

Because much of what a new Willamette student goes through now-a-days is new to many alums, Stuart Hall, a typical incoming freshman shows us in pictures, scenes of "orientation" week.

After becoming well "orientated" the freshmen and trudging upperclassmen set their alarm buttons to another year of lectures and burning midnight-oil.

Willamette offers a unique challenge to the eager freshmen who will find it is not one round of parties, football games and stimulating lectures. For freshman Stuart Hall and his friends, the next four years at Willamette will be the serious business of getting a quality education.

WE HAVE MOVED

The Alumni Office, headed by Jerry Whipple, is now located on the first floor of Waller Hall in the former east wing of the auditorium. The staff will be happy to welcome all alums and show them our more spacious surroundings. If you can't drop in to see us, why not drop us a line about your activities, job and family.

What Does THE 1958 FRESHMAN

by Don Scarborough, '53

Gone are the uncomplicated days when all you needed to get into Willamette was a good high school record and the price of admission. Today's frosh must first find his way through a labyrinth called Orientation Week from which he emerges in time for registration, already a veteran, sure of himself, his head held high beneath cardinal and gold beany.

Much of what a new Willamette student goes through now-a-days is all brand new to many WU alums who showed up for classes one day many years ago and exited four years later with diploma in hand and no recollection of how they ever managed to find their way around.

Stuart Hall, a typical incoming freshman, could tell you what it's like to get pointed in the right direction at the very start of so important an event.

Stuart got his first taste of Willamette orientation several years ago in Beaverton High School where Willamette-trained teachers are self-appointed talent scouts and salesmen. Athletics also played a big part in his decision. An all-conference center last year at Beaverton, he wanted a university where he could play football just for the sport of it while he got a good education.

With the help of recommendations, a 3.5 GPA, athletic ability, and leadership background which included student body presidency, Stuart won provisory acceptance. Last year that would have been enough. But this year for the first time Willamette began taking only freshmen who passed the College Board Examination—a nationally set up test to help a school choose its students more scientifically. The test is given at specified times during the year at testing centers throughout the nation.

Stuart and about 380 others passed and awaited the opening day of Orientation, Sept. 14.

Because of football practice he beat his fellow freshmen to the campus and had a week's jump on them in learning his way around the campus and Salem.

The next Sunday afternoon, more than one week before school opened, the throngs poured into Baxter, Lausanne and Doney and milled around, nervously awaiting their introduction to college life. President G. Herbert Smith presented his traditional "Welcome to Willamette" talk that evening in which another innovation was tried out: inviting the parents to sit in with their sons and daughters.

Monday morning, the race was on. For two hours an introduction to the administration. Separate orientation assemblies for men and women. Another welcome by the academic deans. Two panhellenic meetings, and that evening, at last, some mixed-company social life—a YMCA-YWCA party.

Something that has been with Willamette a long while—the English placement examination—used up most of Tuesday morning. In recent years the old standby test has been replaced, however, with one which measures reading comprehension in addition to basic English skills. The results of this, plus other information, was used to place some students in a special class given this year for the first time: Psychology 101, a one-hour course on how to get the most out of college. Intended to develop study skills, the course uses tests and a mechanical device to increase reading speed as much as 100 per cent. One hundred fifty colleges using the same methods report some reading speeds increased from 250 to 500 words per minute.

The English test is uncanny at picking out weak spots in what many a freshman had thought was a good grasp of the language. Stuart, who had received "A's" and "B's" in high school English, learned that his forte was not as strong as he thought and will be given special attention in one of three English classes, graduated to meet varying needs.

Something relatively new has been added by the language department, a language standardization test and a proficiency test. One rates your high school French, German or Spanish, and tells you in which language section you belong at Willamette. If you're good enough, the other can meet the Willamette requirement for two years of foreign language.

Rushing began Tuesday afternoon at the four fraternities and five sororities (A fifth national, Alpha Phi, was added last year.) "Rush" is the right word for it. There was hardly time in the day for everything, and the more time allotted for orientation (it wasn't always one week) the more things pop up to fill the time. Stuart for one, found some faults in the system and recommended one whole week for orientation and another week for rush, he being unmindful of Parkinson's Law that would predict, in Willamette's case, two jam-packed pre-school weeks instead of one.

More tests came the third day, music theory exams for music students, and later, General Classification tests for everyone. The whirl of Greek rushing, exchange dinners and open houses took up at noon and lasted until 9:45 p.m.

The fourth day it was a physical exam, then rushing functions until late evening.

By Friday it was time to plan a study program. Advisors, armed with high school records and the results of English, General Classification, language and music tests, counseled each student and helped fill out his study program to make certain he took what he was best qualified for and did not overlook required courses, such as PE and AFROTC.

That night was the big occasion for 194 men and women who received pledge pins. The Collegian described the scene: "Blood-shot eyes, anemic palors, fatigue shakes, and a general "I'd give anything to be able to sleep for years," attitude.

Stuart, taking advantage of the Inter-Fraternity Council rules allowing men to pledge two weeks after the start of school, waited and made his decision in leisure.

"Everything is so fast, you can't really decide anything right away," he said.

Saturday, registration. The process was changed last year to spread some of the procedure over three buildings. So now the long lines that used to be restricted to the library are also found in Eaton Hall and Waller—although any grad would admit the waiting is better organized and that registration is much easier.

So this was what the class of 1962 went through even before their first class. Some grads who survived with less hand-in-hand direction may wonder why all the bother. But the facts prove that proper orientation means a less bewildered student and a more efficient scholar. And the more a professor knows about a student, through batteries of intelligence and psychological tests, the better he can teach him.

As a freshman, Stuart Hall speaks highly of Willamette's orientation program for its direction in both academic fields and social life.

"It's a big step from high school to college," he said, "and I think Willamette has made it a lot easier."

Ted Ogdahl, assistant professor of physical education and football coach, is Stuart's advisor. →

NEW COURSES ADDED FOR FRESHMEN

Advanced Section of Sociology Offered to Selected Group

Another course new to Willamette freshmen this fall is an advanced section of Principles of Sociology.

Selection of students to the advanced section was made by compiling high school records in the social sciences and by other tests and measurements of the ability and interests of the students.

This division of the sociology class will allow for more rapid advancement by those who have a background for the subject and permit each student to proceed at a pace which is most comfortable and rewarding to him.

College Orientation Course

Willamette has joined 150 colleges and universities across the nation this fall in the presentation of a new psychology course on freshmen college orientation and skill development. Originally an experiment for veterans returning to school life after the Second World War, like programs have proved successful in helping freshmen receive maximum benefit from college life.

Dean Walter Blake, who has written the text for the course, will teach with the aid of the newest equipment. To improve study skills in reading students will use the control reader made by Education Developmental Laboratories. Reading speeds of students have been increased from 250 to 500 words per minute with this machine aid.

"College Orientation," the text by Dean Blake, is now in its fourth printing and is used by 43 colleges in courses similar to the Willamette program. The course will be worth one hour of credit.

Physics Class to Have it Hard; Easy 'Terminal' Also Offered

A new course in the Willamette University physics department will make physics stiffer for students preparing for careers as engineers or scientists.

The course—General Physics for Scientists and Engineers—is open only to students who have had calculus and is designed for those who will need physics and calculus for further professional preparation.

Also offered is a physics course which does not require calculus—designed for chemistry, premedical and biology students who must have physics but not calculus. This can be described as a "terminal" course, one for students whose physics needs are limited.

Dr. Robert Purbrick, head of the department, says the new course has partly been the result of the new emphasis on science. And it has been made possible because freshmen are now entering college with a better preparation in mathematics.

Three years ago Willamette inaugurated an advanced mathematics course for freshmen which included not only analytic geometry but calculus. This was made possible because of the improved background of students. Because freshmen can now cope with calculus, they can use it in physics and now make greater strides, taking more advanced math courses sooner.

Russian Language Course Offered

Willamette's first course in the Russian language is now being offered. Miss Marija Udris, professor for this new subject, came to the U.S. after living in Latvia, Russia and Germany. Miss Udris, now a U.S. citizen, taught for ten years in high schools and colleges in Riga, Latvia and then spent three years with the ministry of education as a foreign language inspector.

After teaching in Germany, she came to the United States as a displaced person.

GRADUATE AWARDS OUTSTANDING

Again Willamette graduates demonstrated that the quality of their work qualifies them for graduate scholarships, assistantships and fellowships in schools all over the country.

Twenty-six June graduates were awarded fellowships and assistantships to graduate schools throughout the United States and Europe. These grants represent almost $50,000 toward graduate study.

Practically every major field in the university is represented, including chemistry, mathematics, physics, economics, English, French, history, law, philosophy, political science, speech, drama, religion and journalism.

LAW PROF HAS WORK PUBLISHED

A 52-page article by Dr. John C. Paulus, College of Law professor, has been published in the summer issue of the Iowa Law Review, a nationally-distributed publication.

The article concerns interpretation by the courts of wills which involves securities. Dr. Paulus has published articles in other legal fields but this is his first article on wills.

Dr. Morton E. Peck

50 DISTINGUISHING YEARS FOR DR. PECK

Dr. Morton E. Peck, professor emeritus, celebrated his one-half century mark at Willamette this September.

Dr. Peck is the founder and curator of Willamette's famed Herbarium and the author of an invaluable book for naturalists, "A Manual of Higher Plants of Oregon," including some 37,000 entries.

The Oregon Federation of Garden Clubs in June presented Dr. Peck its highest annual award. Other top honors awarded Dr. Peck in the past were by the Oregon Academy of Science and Sigma Xi, national research honorary. His book and his Herbarium are acknowledged the most complete of their kind in the United States, earning him requests for scientific samples and help from universities and botanical gardens in America and several foreign countries.

Sharing Dr. Peck's achievements and enthusiasm has been his energetic wife, Jessie. Two hours after their wedding ceremony in Cornell, Iowa, where he was an instructor in botany, they were on their way to the British Honduras to collect specimens for museums in the U.S., Great Britain and Germany. Since that beginning they have collected untold thousands of plants.

After coming to Salem, weekends and vacations were spent gathering specimens. Because life was less sophisticated in those days, people looked in wonderment at Dr. and Mrs. Peck as they tramped around with pressed flowers under their arms.

Hot days and rainy days of outdoor adventure and the realization of useful scientific achievement, are now wonderful memories to these two interesting people.

SENIOR AT WU AWARDED TOP HONOR

For the second year running, a member of the Willamette chapter of Phi Delta Theta has won the most coveted honor the fraternity can give. Bill Long was named recipient of the Arthur R. Priest award in late summer. Last year Vic Backlund received the honor.

Selection was based on scholarship, campus activities, leadership and athletic ability. He has a "B" plus grade point average and last year was president of his class and of the campus Phi Delta Theta chapter.

For two years he was center on the all-Northwest Conference football team and last year was elected to the Little All-American team of the National Association of Inter-Collegiate Athletics. At Willamette he has held the Florian Von Eshen scholarship for outstanding students.

Long, a Salem student, will receive a $500 award. He will graduate in February in Political Science.

DR. SPRINGER NAMED TO AAUW GROUP

Dr. Martha E. Springer, professor of biology, has been named to the Committee on Higher Education of the American Association of University Women.

During her two-year term Dr. Springer will attend two committee meetings in Washington, D. C., and make several visits to colleges and universities around the country to examine their standards. She has just completed a two-year term on the Committee on Standards and Recognition of Colleges and Universities.

METHODIST GIFTS HIT NEW HIGH

The Methodist contribution to Willamette's educational program during 1957-58 was $18,740, topping last year's total by about $2,000.

The largest contribution came from the Oregon conference of the Methodist Church which turned over $10,813.

In addition, 105 local churches in the state raised $7630 during November at the annual Willamette Day observance. Each church was aiming for $1 per member contribution total but fell short as the over 48,000 member conference averaged 38 cents per member.

Only church in the conference achieving the goal was the Forest Grove Methodist which turned in $650.

The First Methodist of Salem has budgeted a goal of $1650, or $1 per member, for next year.

Other Methodist support for Willamette came from outside the conference as the Alaska conference contributed $293.

Faculty . . .

Sixteen freshman faculty members are being welcomed to Willamette this fall. Having survived the exuberant frosh and the hectic activities of Orientation Week, they are now settling down to schedules.

Walter S. Blake, new Dean of Students, was formerly with Maryland University. He is also Associate Professor of Education.

Dr. Milton Hunnex, Associate Professor of Philosophy, is a graduate of the University of Redlands.

Dr. William P. Baker joins the English Department from Southwest Texas State Teachers' College, where he was assistant professor of English. Dr. Baker, a Milton scholar, and author of the book "Milton's Prose Works," will instruct freshman English, Chaucer, Renaissance, and World Literature.

Maurice B. Stewart, assistant professor of physics, comes to Willamette from the University of Alberta and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Newcomers in the Air Science Department are Major Walter A. Fagan, Jr., who replaces Major Kenneth Pennell as assistant professor of Air Science, and First Lieutenant C. Paul Muzzio, instructor in Air Science.

Professor Arthur Courtney takes the post of visiting assistant professor of law, replacing Professor Charles A. Jens, who is on a year's leave of absence.

New to the language department are Miss Marija Udris who will instruct classes in Russian and German, and Mr. William L. Shellnut, instructor in Spanish and German.

Dr. Albert H. Dehner is the new head of the Economics department.

Filling in for Dr. Shay who is in India on a two year's leave of absence is Professor Gordon Means, acting as the visiting assistant prof in political science.

Robert L. Prare is the new instructor in sociology.

A newcomer to the Music College faculty is Miss Nona Pyron, professor of violincello. Also new to the music faculty are two woodwind instructors, Albert Chambers and Donald M. Hibbard. Both have dual jobs this year. Besides tutoring Willamette music students they also teach music in the Salem public schools.

Several faculty members have been promoted for the academic year 1958-59. They are: Henry F. Cooper to Instructor of French; Dr. Paul M. Duell to Associate Professor of Chemistry; Dr. Noel Kaestner to Associate Professor of Psychology; Clarence A. Kraft to Associate Professor of Spanish; John Lewis to Associate Professor of Physical Education; Theodore Ogdahl to Assistant Professor of Physical Education; Richard A. Yocum to Registrar and Assistant Professor of Psychology.

Dr. Burton C. Bastuscheck, Religions and Sociology Professor, was awarded a Doctor of Theology degree from Iliff School of Theology in Denver, Colorado, this summer.

LAW STUDENTS HIGH IN BAR EXAMS

The College of Law scored in outstanding fashion on the Oregon bar examinations taken in July and announced in September.

Out of 31 members of the 1958 June class who took the exam, 27 Willamette law students, or 87 per cent, were successful.

An even more remarkable achievement is the fact that out of 44 law students who entered the College of Law in 1955, 31 have now passed bar examinations in Oregon and elsewhere.

REESE SEES NEED FOR MORE LAWYERS

The law profession is faced with a serious future shortage of trained attorneys, College of Law Dean Seward Reese told a gathering for the opening of the Law school's 75th year.

He said fewer lawyers were admitted to the bar last year than in 1927 and statistics show that there are fewer law students in school now than there were in 1927.

Reese said increases in population and specialization require more and more trained men and women in the legal profession.

SPORTS

Bearcats Unbeaten to Date

With all due regard to the commendable principle of turning the other cheek, the Willamette Bearcats were out for revenge when Linfield arrived Oct. 11 for the annual renewal of an old grid rivalry.

Last year Linfield had headed off Willamette's drive for the Northwest Conference crown by defeating the Bearcats

Here Linfield's Rick Hintz is tackling Willamette's ball carrier, Jack Berkey. This play went to the 7 yard line, but was called back for clipping infraction shown in this picture. Willamette speed and defense routed the Wildcats 33-0.

27-14 at McMinnville. And this was after the Cardinal and Gold had monopolized the first half of the game and run up a 14-0 halftime lead.

This year the Bearcats vowed to avenge Black Saturday 1957 and did so in a convincing display of power and speed to cap off Parents' Weekend. Final score: Willamette 33, Linfield 0. The Willamettes, in gaining 401 yards against the Wildcats, showed that they merit the distinction of being one of the top small-college teams in the nation.

The Linfield win was the most one-sided in the series since Spec Keene's 1941 warriors administered a 43-0 licking to the McMinnville club. Willamette is now leading 25-7-2 in the series but in recent years the Wildcats have become increasingly harder to cope with.

Despite four straight victories (including the Linfield tussle) Willamette coaches Ted Ogdahl, Jerry Long and Vic Backlund caution that the season is far from over. Whitman was still to be played Oct. 18 at Walla Walla at this writing. College of Idaho was to be played Oct. 25 in Salem and a date with Lewis and Clark was still due in Portland Nov. 8.

In between, the Bearcats for their annual Homecoming mix, will host the College of Puget Sound Loggers on Nov. 1 at 2 p.m. This will be the big chance for alumni to see the 1958 version of the Bearcats in action.

Willamette has the edge in the CPS series, holding a 20-13-4 record. Last year the Bearcats triumphed 35-6.

Personnel that have figured prominently in Willamette's wins to date are backs Keith Driver, Jack Berkey, Earl Jambura, Denny Sarver and Stan Solomon; ends Bill Wall, Terry Kent, Lee Weaver and Rex Domaschofsky; tackles Gary Raid, Bob Griffin, Howard Stroebel and Jim Robinson; guards Marv Cisneros, Stu Hall, Dennis Mihm and Doug Austin; and centers Bill Long and John Hinds. Long, a second team Little All-American last year, is proving this year that he is among the leading candidates for the first team bid.

A key to Willamette's success this season has been the ability of its gridgers to keep a play alive. In coaching parlance this is the so-called "second motion." It was demonstrated to Linfield in blocking, tackling and running.

On one second quarter play, Willamette halfback Stan Solomon tried a run around right end, ran into several Linfield defenders, reversed his field and scooted around left end for a 56-yard touchdown run without a hand being laid on him.

'CATS TOP NATION AGAIN IN OFFENSE

Willamette continued their winning ways on the national scene. In statistics released recently, the Bearcats were shown to have maintained their position as the first ranking offensive team in the NATA. An average of 438.5 yards per game kept the Bearcats at the top of the heap, where they have been since the opening of the season, when they piled up an impressive 538 yards.

600 On Hand For 8th Parents' Weekend

Over 600 student sons and daughters greeted their parents Oct. 10 and 11. The parent-count exceeded by at least 100 the previous registration high of 530 last year.

Ralph P. Coleman of Portland was named president of the Parents' Association at an hour-long business meeting Saturday morning. He succeeds F. F. Holcomb of Portland.

Leander Quiring of Hermiston was elected vice-president of the group and Mrs. Hugh McGilvra of Forest Grove was named secretary-treasurer.

Members elected to the association board for the next year were Elmer A. Berglund, Salem; Holcomb; Mrs. Olin E. Parrett, Portland; and Judge Homer R. Spence of San Francisco.

The weekend included a dramatic production Friday night, open houses, an academic preview with professors, the annual all-campus sing and the Willamette-Linfield game.

Checking the "Collegian" for campus news are Fred F. Holcomb and Ralph P. Coleman, while President G. Herbert Smith looks on.

75 YEARS of Law

LAW AND CHURCH LEADER TO KEYNOTE CEREMONY

Robert Burnham Watts

Keynoting the 75th anniversary celebration of the Willamette College of Law will be Robert Burnham Watts, vice-president and general counsel of the Convair Division of General Dynamics Corporation and priest of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Watt's career in the law has been a distinctive one. Among his other offices, he has served as assistant and chief assistant U. S. attorney, the Southern District of New York and general counsel for the National Labor Relations Board. Before the Supreme Court of the U. S. he personally tried and made records on key constitutional cases. He has argued in every Circuit Court of Appeals and in 14 cases before the Supreme Court, he prevailed in 13.

He studied privately as a candidate for the Episcopal priesthood and was ordained in January of this year and presently is assistant to the rector, St. James-by-the-Sea parish, La Jolla, Calif.

Watts will speak at special ceremonies in the Fine Arts auditorium beginning at 8:15 p. m., October 31.

WILLAMETTE'S COLLEGE OF LAW — FIRST IN PACIFIC NORTHWEST

In 1883 when the Willamette College of Law was founded as the first in the Pacific Northwest, Westerners took their law training in lawyer's offices and tended to be dubious of "classroom booklearning."

However, Willamette's Law school provided the best of both theory and practice needs. This ideal teaching method plus an equally ideal location, has made the 75-year old college of law a source of leadership for the state and the Northwest.

The College of Law has always played a vitally important part in the life of the

Dear Friends:

The 75th anniversary of the Willamette College of Law will culminate in a special ceremony in the Willamette Auditorium beginning at 8:15 p.m. on October 31st, when Robert Burnham Watts, general counsel of the Convair Division of General Dynamics Corporation, will be the keynote speaker. Preceding this ceremony, at 6 o'clock p.m., there will be a dinner meeting of the alumni of Willamette College of Law and their wives at the Marion hotel. I hope that every Willamette lawyer who can possibly do so will attend.

Among the lawyers who were graduated from the Willamette College of Law there is an increasing pride in the fact that our alma mater has achieved recognition as one of the fine law schools of the country. The superior quality of the educational program is attracting outstanding students from an increasing number of undergraduate schools in an ever widening area.

It is gratifying to find that this pride of our law school has been expressed by so many of its alumni in a material way. An increasing number of gifts to the Loyalty Fund were made by Willamette lawyers during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1958. This support is vital to the continued growth and improvement of the school.

We are looking forward to the opportunity to join with the students, faculty and friends of the law school and our fellow lawyers in paying tribute to our law school and its founders.

Cordially,

Wm. M. McAllister

EX-REGISTRAR JORY DIES

Harold B. Jory, '15

Harold B. Jory, who retired as registrar in August, died September 26 in Palo Alto, California. Mr. Jory suffered a severe coronary thrombosis the previous Friday.

Jory served as registrar for twelve years. Previous to the position he worked in high school administration in the state of Washington. He graduated in 1915 and his wife, the former Eva Hogue, graduated from WU in 1916. His MA was earned at Stanford.

Mr. and Mrs. Jory were traveling leisurely through California selling athletic equipment manufactured by the former Willamette coach, Chester Stackhouse. They were making their home at 1407 Gretel Lane, Mountain View, Calif., near their two daughters.

Mrs. Jory requested in a call to President G. Herbert Smith that in lieu of flowers, contributions be made to the Jory scholarship fund for the university. The fund was started many years ago when Jory's father was head of the WU math department. "Eventually, it is hoped that the fund can support a math student and will be known as the "Jory scholarship," Dr. Smith said.

The following excerpts from a recent editorial in the Collegian paid tribute to Mr. Jory. "I want to pause a moment to pay heartfelt tribute to my friend and colleague, Harold Jory, who died last week. Willamette has never had a more loyal alumnus nor a more representative one . . .

He had the distinction of being the first to sing the poignant "Farewell Willamette," since sung annually at commencement only. He was a member of the first quartet to sing the traditional May Day "Make Way for the Queen Today." And he would tell you with a twinkle in his eyes that he was probably the first student to "go out for football" all four years without making the first string. But more important, Harold Jory was "first" in the hearts of many faculty members and students.

We shall painfully miss his towering figure, his merry eyes and friendly smile, his booming voice, his masterful Registrarship, his unfailing good nature and gentle good humor . . .

Salem tribute and recognition were given Mr. Jory at a faculty meeting, at the following Sunday service at the First Methodist church and during the Rotary Club meeting following his death.

Recognition was given in the presence of Willamette students during chapel service.

ALUMNI GATHERINGS

Seattle area alums got together for a picnic, September 14. Because of rain, last minute plans were made and they moved to the downtown Y. In spite of damp weather they reported a good turnout.

The Salem area reported a fine turnout at their annual picnic in August at Bush Park. Around 100 alums and their families attended and the wonderful barbecued chicken supper was provided by the Willamette Food Service. Fun for the little folk was provided during the hotly contested sack races.

WORLD ATOM CONFERENCE ADDRESSED BY GRAD

Willamette's science department made world news again recently when Clyde Wiegand, class of 1941, delivered a major address at the International Conference on Nuclear Electronics in Paris, France.

Wiegand, an expert in nuclear age electronics with the Atomic Energy Commission at Berkeley, Calif., worked on America's first war-used atomic bomb and was one of the discoverers of the anti-proton, a major breakthrough in the study of atomic structure.

Dr. Wiegand studied physics under Prof. Earl Brown, now retired. After graduation he established several radio stations in Salem and in San Francisco where he met the late Dr. Ernest O. Lawrence, inventor of the cyclotron and one of the world's foremost atomic scientists. Impressed with Wiegand's abilities, Dr. Lawrence appointed him to work at Los Alamos on the first atomic bomb dropped in World War II.

Later he received his Ph.D. from the University of California. Working there with the AEC, he was a member of a four-man team that discovered the anti-proton in October, 1955.

Dr. Wiegand worked at Berkeley with the cyclotron and its big brother, the bevatron, and in May, 1957, was sent to Geneva, Switzerland, to help construct a 12-nation cooperative nuclear research laboratory.

TRUEBLOOD ATTENDS BREAD LOAF CONFERENCE

Dr. Paul G. Trueblood

Dr. Paul G. Trueblood, '28, Head of the English Department, was named last summer a Contributing Member of America's oldest and most famous writers' conference, Bread Loaf Writers' Conference, held annually on the Bread Loaf Mountain Campus of Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vermont. At this gathering of editors, publishers, literary agents, and well-known American authors, meeting annually to present and discuss book-length manuscripts, Dr. Trueblood, a recognized Byron scholar and author of a book on the poet, contributed two manuscripts.

The highlight of the Conference for Dr. Trueblood was the very rare privilege accorded him of being invited to spend an afternoon with Robert Frost on the poet's farm at nearby Ripton, Vermont. The wonderful afternoon with America's greatest poet included a visit to the poet's weatherbeaten log cottage at the head of a grassy lane bordered by loose-laid stone walls and birch trees, a browsing expedition with Frost in Middlebury's superb bookstore, and, best of all, the delightful humor, penetration, and wisdom of Robert Frost's conversation.
