Distinguished Artists Series

Three solo artists and a ballet team will comprise the 1957-58 Distinguished Artists Series sponsored by the student body.

Appearance dates are: ballet artists Kovach and Rabovsky, November 23; baritone Leonard Warren, January 22; pianist Seymour Lipkin, February 6 and contralto Marian Anderson, March 5.

The Kovach and Rabovsky Russian ballet team appeared during last year's series and received such wide acclaim that they were invited back to Salem this year.

Baritone Leonard Warren, who has sung with the Metropolitan Opera company for 15 years, is a frequent performer on major television and radio programs such as "The Telephone Hour," "Voice of Firestone," and "Toast of the Town."

A former child prodigy who started to play the piano at three and gave his first concert at four, Seymour Lipkin is known both in the United States and abroad.

The famed Marian Anderson who made headlines as the first of her race to sing with the Metropolitan opera is perhaps best known for her presentation of the Negroe spiritual.

Reserved season seats for the series are on sale at Steven's and Son Jewelers in Salem.

WU To Be Featured on TV

Willamette University and students will present the program Nov. 19 on the "Community Workshop" series over KGW-TV at 11:30 A.M.

The college of law was featured August 26 over this same series, which is sponsored by the Oregon Colleges Foundation.

Former British Minister To Speak

The Right Honorable Anthony Nutting, former British Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, will be guest speaker at the third annual Willamette Lecture Series, November 14 and 15.

Nutting has chosen as his topics for his three lectures: "Anglo-American Partnership", "The Muddle of the Middle East", and "Nationalism and the Free World Survival."

Lectures will be presented Nov. 14 at 11:00 A.M. and 8:00 P.M. On Nov. 15th the lecture will be at 8:00 P.M.

The annual lecture series, established by the George H. Atkinson Fund, draws noted speakers in various fields of interest to the campus. There is no charge for the lectures which are held in the Fine Arts Auditorium and the interested public is invited to attend.

Willamette Theatre

The play's the thing, and there are three stimulating evenings ahead during the 1957-58 season.

Thunder Rock, by Robert Ardrey, will be presented Dec. 6 and 7; Summer and Smoke, by Tennessee Williams, Feb. 28 and March 1; Squaring the Circle, by Valentine Katayev, will conclude the season on May 1 and 2.

The first play is presented in observance of Christian Resource Week. A young man asks, "Is the world worth working for?", and six persons out of the past, who have their being only in his mind, help him to the final answer.

The second production is a story of frustration and redemption in a small town in the South. An inhibited woman hesitates until her chance is past.

And to conclude the season they will take you behind the Iron Curtain for some farcical fun with communal living and the marriage registry. It's a gay comedy about young Communists and their democratic problems.

Tickets are available at Stevens & Son, Jewelers in Salem. Curtain time is 8:15 P.M.

Art Gallery

On exhibit for the month of October has been a showing of drawings by Anne Kutka (Mrs. David McCosh) of Eugene, Oregon. The month of November will feature an exhibit by Mrs. Fred Heidel of Portland. Senior students will present the show in the gallery in December, followed by a mosaic exhibit by Sister Elizabeth Noreen, from Marylhurst, in January.

The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and can be entered from the east side of the Fine Arts Building.

Editor's Note:

Over the past year over 2,000 information cards have been sent to alumni.

The hard, cold, statistical data received by this office have been invaluable in keeping basic alumni records. Your cooperation is most appreciated.

In the daily routine of records it was most refreshing to receive the following letter. We share its humor (and maybe his sentiment) with you.

June 20, 1957.

Dear Alumni Office:

I was shaken a bit when I recently received your little postcard form, and it lay here on the desk quite a while. I meditated. Should I or shouldn't I? But I did. I told all; bared my soul. "Degree" rocked me a little I'll admit, and I was tempted to put in my then-present temperature (98.6). But I filled it out like a little man. And I mailed it to you, didn't I?

But then—Oho! Yesterday I receive another of your clever little double-cards (attached along with a piece of my fingernail it took to un-do the staple).

You want, I notice, my wife's full name. That's all right. No objection. After all, a name is sort of public property; "public domain" I think is the word. BUT THEN, then, you sly, beady-eyed creature you, you add "etc".

Now "etc", brother alumnus, covers an almighty lot of ground. Must I disclose her weight? Horrors! Her age? Better I should go and file for divorce first. Does she snore? I mean, after all, is the Alumni Office (nice meaty name there) a sort of direct mail Peeping Tom? There are some "etc"'s I won't reveal—no matter what. Brainwash me. Most "etc"'s, my brazen friend, are sacred, I'll plead the fifth amendment, yes I will.

But—I've gone this far . . . so MY WIFE'S MAIDEN NAME WAS _____

As to the "etc" I can only answer this: Yes.

Fraternally,

The Cover

Getting ready for the Homecoming game November 9 with Pacific, coach Ted Ogdahl gives fullback Vic Backlund last instructions. Senior Vic Backlund, a "four-point" student, is an all-around athlete. This year he will have lettered in football 3 years, baseball 4 years, and basketball 3 years. He has made all conference in football and baseball, and second team in basketball.

After this magazine had gone to the printers, word was received that Vic was awarded Phi Delta Theta's highest national award, October 16, at a banquet in Lausanne hall.

Presenting the Arthur J. Priest Award, which annually goes to the nation's most outstanding "Phi" was Dean Donald DuShane of the University of Oregon. The award carries a $500 scholarship.

a brief sketch about one of Willamette's great friends

WELL DONE...

by Robert C. Notson, '24

"Willamette has been my number one project. Serving as president of the board of trustees has been the finest experience of my life."

C. E. McCulloch placed a hand on the arm of the interviewer for emphasis. His eyes danced as he talked and a smile lighted his features. This was "Ed" McCulloch who last June relinquished the gavel of the Willamette University Board of Trustees to Truman W. Collins after 12 years of fruitful service.

It has been said that you do not refuse a request from Ed McCulloch. His kindly, earnest sincerity has motivated many influential and able persons to join him during those dozen years in the strengthening of a great educational institution for vital service to youth of the Northwest in the decades ahead.

"What did he remember as the highlights of his tenure as president of the board?"

The building of Baxter hall in 1946 at a cost of some $750,000.

The erection of McCulloch stadium in the Bush pasture area and the transfer of the athletic field to this outstanding plant, toward which he was principal donor.

The building program which brought three modern structures to the inner quadrangle — the Auditorium-Fine Arts building, the Doney Hall for Women and the Bishop Health center. These buildings were erected at a cost of nearly $1,200,000.

The appreciation of the investment portfolio of the university by approximately $1,000,000 as a result of skillful management.

"I think the turning point for the university may be marked by two important things," Mr. McCulloch said. "The first of these was the election of Dr. G. Harbert Smith as president in 1942 and the decision in 1946 to go ahead with the construction of Baxter Hall for Men.

"Herb Smith's leadership has been a source of satisfaction to us all. He is a man of ideas and the rest of us have responded to his recommendations.

"But, as I look back, I think the most difficult decision I had to make as president of the board was when we decided to build Baxter Hall. The costs were considerably above our expectation. It was the beginning of the post-war inflation. Several of my closest friends wanted to wait, anticipating a drop in prices.

The honorary degree, Doctor of Humanities, was conferred upon Mr. C. E. McCulloch in June. Assisting is Mr. Isaac D. Hunt, member of the Board of Trustees.

"I felt and Herb felt that we must go ahead and provide proper dormitory facilities for men. Most of us thought that prices were going up. It took courage, but we went ahead, and it was a happy decision. Our architect told us a year later that the same building would have cost us nearly 20 per cent more."

Mr. McCulloch takes a great pride in the fact that all of the buildings erected under his leadership have been first class construction—concrete and brick. They are built for the future as well as the present.

These buildings have changed the entire aspect of the campus and made the oldest institution of higher learning west of the Missouri also one of the most modern in physical plant.

Mr. McCulloch was born in Peoria, Ill., son of a Methodist minister and district superintendent of the area. He took his AB from Ohio Wesleyan. He was an OW letterman in football during the 3 years he attended law school.

After graduation he taught two years and then took law at Bloomington Law School, a department of Illinois Wesleyan. In 1908 he and his brother, W. C. McCulloch, bought one-way tickets to the west. They stopped briefly in Spokane and then came on to Portland, the last stop on their tickets.

They liked Portland and decided to stay. Both have had distinguished careers in the law. Ed became a law clerk in the firm of Carey & Kerr, predecessor of the firm which he is a senior member.

His father followed the boys west and for many years had a large men's Bible class at First Methodist church. Ed became a member of the church and from that membership was drafted by Bishop Titus Lowe and Dr. William Wallace Youngson to serve on the Willamette board. His wise counsel and legal astuteness very soon led to assignment on the executive committee where he helped to shape many policies.

The McCulloch's daughter had attended DePauw, following the family tradition in the middle west. It was there that the McCullochs met Herbert and Eugenia Smith. Dr. Smith was the youthful dean of students. The friendship established was continued from time to time as "Herb" visited Oregon in the course of duties as general secretary of Beta Theta Pi social fraternity.

When a new president was to be named at Willamette in 1942, Ed McCulloch recommended Herb Smith. It was a proud moment in August of that year when he met "Herb" at Portland's union station and welcomed him on behalf of the board. In 1945 this association was strengthened by election of McCulloch as president of the board.

Mr. McCulloch's favorite radio and TV program was the Halls of Ivy. He reveled in the skill with which the erudite Dr. Todhunter Hall, played by Ronald Coleman, handled problems delicate and big. For fun he compared himself to Dr. Clarence Wellman, the bumbling chairman of Ivy's trustees.

But Ed McCulloch was no bungler. For his part, Herb Smith said Dr. Hall's finesse always gave him an inferiority complex because solutions to Willamette's problems did not come so easy to him.

Ed McCulloch says that the association with the fine members of the Willamette board, with Herb Smith and with C. M. Bishop and Isaac Hunt on the endowment committee has been an "inspiring and warming experience". He has served in many civic enterprises, on many corporate boards, but has found none so pleasing to him as the service on the Willamette board.

In the line of presidents of the board, of which Jason Lee was the first, Mr. McCulloch was number 13. He was a lucky choice. Although he thought it advisable for reasons of health to decline reelection to his post, Mr. McCulloch is far from through with his work for the university. He will continue on the board, the executive committee and the endowment committee.

"We still have a few things up our sleeves," he said with a wink.

About this article

Since postwar II, the problems of private higher education have been extremely difficult. It has taken devoted men and women to answer them. One such man has been Mr. McCulloch. This article is a tribute to a Christian scholar whose strength of leadership has seen Willamette continue to maintain and to grow in the heritage that began 115 years ago.

Mr. Notson, newly elected vice-president of the forty-five member board of trustees and managing editor of "The Oregonian" is well-qualified to write this story.

The University...

Truman Collins To Head Board

The Willamette university board of trustees elected Truman W. Collins, '22, Portland lumberman, president at its annual meeting June 1. Mr. Collins succeeds Charles E. McCulloch, Portland attorney, who asked to be relieved after 12 years as board president.

Mr. McCulloch was named president emeritus by the board in recognition of his long and able service.

C. L. Starr, '13, also of Portland, retired as vice-president and was named vice-president emeritus. Robert C. Notson, '24, managing editor of The Oregonian was elected to succeed him.

Tinkham Gilbert, '21, Salem, was re-elected secretary, and Otto J. Wilson, '38, Salem auto dealer, was elected assistant secretary.

Scholarship Cups

Delta Gamma and Beta Theta Pi again earned top positions in scholarship for the spring semester, women's and men's organizations respectively. The Delta Gammas placed the highest of all living organizations on campus. Each of the two will receive one of the rotating scholarship cups.

Three Royal Freshmen

Three royal freshmen are enrolled at Willamette this year. Alice Eastman was the Portland Rose Festival queen for 1957; center, Judith Hansen, Astoria, Ore., was Miss Oregon in the Miss America contest; and Pat Holcomb, who was a Portland Rose Festival princess in 1957.

Fall Enrollment Up

Willamette's fall enrollment reached 1150, 32 more than last year's total, registrar Harold B. Jory announced.

The College of Liberal Arts listed 964, the College of Law records 119, and the remaining 67 are attending the College of Music. As usual, men lead in total enrollment with 726 compared to 424 women.

Of the Liberal Arts students, 366 were freshmen, 272 sophomores, 150 juniors, 135 seniors, eight graduate students and 33 special students.

Seniors Get Awards for Graduate Study

Approximately 25 per cent of the 1957 graduating seniors in liberal arts have been awarded fellowships and assistantships to graduate schools throughout the United States and Europe for this year.

Thirty-two of the 146 graduates received a total of more than $49,000 in prize money toward graduate education.

These fellowships will take them to Switzerland, Wisconsin, Illinois, Rhode Island, Washington, New York, Massachusetts and France.

No Eight O'Clocks, Please!

Registration day for the freshmen presented this familiar picture in the library. Bill Corner, freshman majoring in science, is talking over his schedule with Dr. Cecil R. Monk, professor of biology.

Education By Television

Two large brown boxes with glass fronts, newly located in Chresto Cottage light up before the faces of some 50 students for an hour of fundamental chemistry—via TV.

The 27-inch television sets will also "speak" to a group of 15 students for the start of a course in U. S. history.

The classes will sound the beginning of a revolutionary experiment in teaching—educational television.

Beamed from transmitters at Corvallis, Ore., educational TV Channel 7 will broadcast history and chemistry lectures every Monday and Wednesday. A third class, which will offer a course in the fundamentals of education, will be tuned in only occasionally.

Willamette is the only private college in Oregon using educational TV.

The Monday and Wednesday television lectures will be followed Friday by a class discussion, conducted by a professor.

Dr. Paul Duell, assistant professor of chemistry, will supervise the chemistry course and Dr. Chester C. Kaiser, associate professor of history, will supervise the history course.

An insight into the effectiveness of the TV education experiment will be drawn from a comparison of the TV classes and the regular history and chemistry classes.

Degree Conferred On VP

Richard Petrie, Financial Vice President, was honored, June 10, by his alma mater, Monmouth College, in Monmouth, Illinois.

He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Law for his outstanding work as an undergraduate and for his 25 years of service to the college as faculty member, admissions director, public relations director, and business administrator. His work as business manager and financial vice-president of Willamette university was also recognized.

Meatless Meals Aid Hungarian Student

In exchange for four meatless meals last Spring, Laszlo Dazsoofi, Budapest, Hungary, has come to the Willamette campus.

Laszlo (more often called Lotzi) is interested in pre-med and left Hungary last fall after the Russian retaliation. As a student at the university in his capitol city he was arrested with 400 fellow students, and had his papers taken. Since it is impossible to live in the communist-dominated countries without papers, Lotzi found it necessary to leave his home without even farewells to his family.

The Willamette committee worked through state and national agencies, including the World University Service, to bring him here.

Typical Law Student Married

Willamette College of Law opened its 75th Year this month with an average law student who is probably married, been in the army and taken his pre-law schooling in Oregon.

This statistical study of the college was released by Dean Seward Reese.

First year students are more family-minded this year, too. Three out of five students are married, while in the entire student body, the figure drops to one out of two who can claim brides. There are 83 children of students, one budding attorney claiming five of these.

The average age of this year's law student is about 26 years. The youngest is 21 and the oldest over 40.

This year, enrollment has reached 119. Breakdown by classes is first year, 60; second year, 32; third year, 35 and unclassified, two. Enrollment is limited in order to keep the close contact of instructor and student.

National Merit Scholars Enter WU

Three holders of National Merit Scholarships are among the freshman class this fall; William Richter, Salem, Ore.; Barbara Sherk, Portland, Ore. and Paul F. deLespinasse, Vallejo, Calif., son of Frank and Helen (Childs, '34) deLespinasse, '36.

National Merit Scholars are chosen from the top students of the United States in state-wide contests conducted every year.

Union Carbide Program Expands

The Union Carbide scholarship program, of which Willamette was an original member among liberal arts colleges, is now expanding to include 48 colleges, technical institutions and universities across the country.

The expansion includes the establishment of 268 four-year engineering scholarships, bringing the total of Union Carbide undergraduate scholarships to 660.

The two Willamette recipients of the scholarships this year were Dale Mortensen, Hood River, and Mike Myers, Portland.

All Union Carbide scholarships provide full tuition for four years of undergraduate study and allowances for books and fees and include an annual grant to the college.

Faculty . . .

Eight professors have joined the Willamette faculty for the first time this fall, three in the ROTC department and five in the liberal arts.

Dr. William Merrill, who will teach courses in economic theory, came from the business administration school of Georgia State College. He is a graduate of Harvard and received his MA and Ph. D degrees from the University of Illinois.

Dr. Homer H. Hawes has been named associate professor of education. He received his B.A. from Harding College, his M.A. in secondary education, his M. Ed. from the University of South Carolina and his Ph. D. in history and philosophy of education from Michigan State University.

Dr. Paul M. Duell joined the faculty as an associate professor of chemistry, replacing Dr. Charles Nichol, who is now teaching at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Duell was formerly an instructor of chemistry at Kansas State college, where he received his B.A., M.A. and his Ph. D.

Thomas Brand will teach a three-hour course in business law. Dr. Brand graduated from Stanford University in 1951 and from the University of Oregon Law School in 1954.

Charles A. Ruud, newly selected Director of Information, is also an addition to the faculty, teaching a course in the History of Civilization.

New air science professors include Capt. Douglas Weart, who has been named as an assistant professor. Capt. Weart graduated from West Point and took further training at Mather AFB.

Capt. William Wright, also an assistant professor, was an instructor in advanced navigation at Mather A.F.B. before coming to Willamette.

Sergeant Leslie Ostlund served in Portland, Ore. before coming to Willamette as records clerk.

After a year's leave of absence, Dr. James Fonseca is being welcomed back with a promotion to an assistant professorship of German and Spanish and with a recently earned doctorate. Dr. Fonseca married during the summer.

James A. Nickel of the Mathematics Department also completed his doctorate during the summer and has been promoted to an assistant professorship.

Early in September Dean and Mrs. Robert Gregg combined an eastern business trip with visits to relatives and friends. Mrs. Gregg's visit to her home in Bennington, Vermont was saddened by the death of her mother who had been an invalid for some years. Dean Gregg attended the first annual session of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce Committee on Foreign Policy in Princeton, N.J.

Dr. and Mrs. Parker, of the College of Law, spent the summer on an extended trip to Scotland, England, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and France.

At the close of the summer school Dean Geist directed the Voice Workshop sponsored by the National Association of Teachers of Singing on the Willamette campus August 12-16.

Dr. Cornelius, Assoc. Professor of Political Science, participated in the Citizenship Clearing House Workshop on Teaching Politics, held at Princeton University. This was followed by his attendance at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association in New York.

A month was spent by Dr. Kaiser, Assoc. Professor of History, in Washington, D. C. doing research in western history at the Library of Congress and the National Archives.

A. Freeman Holmer, associate professor of political science, was the author of an article on the Oregon legislature's overhauling of the state election code which appeared in the September issue of the National Municipal Review.

Traveling on an Atkinson grant this summer, Dr. and Mrs. Chester Luther covered nearly 8,000 miles in 13 states and 4 provinces of Canada and were on the campuses of 38 colleges and universities. Their object was to visit, in states of the midwest, liberal arts colleges similar to Willamette. They also managed to visit several former Willamette students and faculty.

Dr. Chester Luther and Dean Robert Gregg attended the 3-2 Conference on Engineering Affiliation at Columbia University on Oct. 6-9. The conference was held at Harriman House Campus, about 40 miles north of New York City with over 100 attending from forty different colleges and universities.

Under this program a student may follow a science course for three years at Willamette, transfer to Columbia for two years in engineering and receive a BA in liberal arts from Willamette and a BS in engineering from Columbia.

Willamette has similar programs with four other schools, Carnegie Tech, Stanford, Northwestern and Southern Calif.

Dr. Cecil Monk and Don Breakey of the biology department attended the annual conference of the American Institute of Biological Sciences at Stanford university August 25-29. Over 3,000 scientists from universities and research institutions throughout the world met at the convention.

Burton C. Bastuscheck, Assistant Professor of Religion and Sociology, was the author of a meditation used on August 28, by an estimated eleven million people around the world who are readers of THE UPPER ROOM. THE UPPER ROOM, a devotional guide, has a world circulation of more than three million copies. Mr. Bastuscheck's meditation, with the others in the July-August issue, is a part of the ministry of 70,000 churches in the United States and Canada.

Businessmen Mean Business

Oregon's Independent Colleges are finding that business has a real interest in higher education—and are doing something about it.

The Oregon Colleges Foundation was incorporated five years ago, after three bank presidents had given their corporate support for the independent colleges and universities in the state of Oregon in a lump sum to be distributed by the colleges themselves. Perhaps, they reasoned, there would be business executives who would respond more readily to the appeal of the college presidents working together, than separate and competing calls for aid from the ten accredited non-tax-supported colleges in the state. Over 5,000 firms who give through the State Association throughout the country today are convinced that the plan is a good one, and here to stay. This plan will be utilized by all the states in the union when the Inter-Mountain Regional Association is organized.

In the past five years, since the inception of this new corporate support plan, the directors of the various State Foundations have uncovered much information regarding the general attitudes and motivations of the corporate world towards financial aid to independent higher education. Businessmen, in the business world of today know, and can easily recognize a sound investment. It would be hard to convince one to invest money in a "dying" industry. When facts, supported by figures prove that Oregon's ten accredited non-tax-supported colleges bring a high return to business and industry, because they HELP industry while HELPING THEMSELVES, through an increased financial support from alumni—up 93% in the past six years, and increased financial support from churches—up 62% in the past six years, those same shrewd businessmen can see that independent higher education in Oregon is not standing still, but rather is continuing to grow stronger.

Since 1952, the Oregon Colleges Foundation has been expanding in order to do the job of informing the general public, and keeping them aware of the problems and needs of the independent colleges and universities of the state. The presidents of the colleges do the soliciting, going in pairs according to itineraries and schedules arranged by the Executive Director. Each President is pledged to give the Foundation 15 days a year. In addition (starting this year) a faculty member, or trustee member of the college also has been committed to give 15 days each year to the Foundation for solicitations. The presidents find the experience valuable even beyond the financial return. They gain from working with each other. They profit from their interviews with business leaders of many kinds, carrying back both information and inspiration to their campuses.

To those of you—alumni, churches, parents, friends—who support your colleges through annual giving, it will be of interest to know that your gift is a powerful stimulant to corporate giving. One of the questions asked most frequently by businessmen is "what are the alumni and other direct constituencies doing?" The fact that we can report an increase in support from alumni of 93% in the past six years takes on added significance under these circumstances.

What about "recessions" or "depressions"? Would a poor business year set back the colleges in their corporate support? Spreading the base—encouraging many small gifts as well as the large ones—offers a quick answer. Last year, Oregon presidents made solicitation calls on 423 firms in several Oregon cities and towns, and obtained gifts from 96, or almost 25% of those visited. We hope soon to have over 200 firms investing in the independent colleges, through the Oregon Colleges Foundation, with an ultimate goal of raising 5% of our Colleges' operating budgets through corporate giving through the O.C.F. That, the Foundation believes, is the best possible protection against losses from business recession.

This fact, coupled with what we mentioned before—that alumni and church affiliations, and friends are behind their own schools, adds incentive and reason for perpetuating the existence of our system of independent higher education in Oregon through corporate support.

So, as you can see, it is a cooperative action. Unless business sees that you, the products of our independent institutions, want to see these schools not only exist—but also grow in quality and size, it becomes difficult to enlist their cooperation.

We have painted a glowing account of the percentages in increases from alumni and churches in the past six years. Indeed, it is encouraging. But with the booming rush of students seeking a higher education today, and with the anticipated 100% increase within the next ten years, it will take money to build new classrooms, dormitories and laboratories. It will take more money to keep top-qualified teachers and professors on the staff of your alma mater. The Oregon Colleges Foundation is doing its part in encouraging corporate support. But we need the support of you—the Alumni—to make our combined effort as strong as it will need to be these next years. Industry will help us, if we can continue to prove to it that we are helping ourselves!

GOVERNMENT IN ACTION . . . FROM A RINGSIDE SEAT

A story on what one teacher did during summer 'vacation'

by Don Empey, '54

During the past summer as one of a group of sixty teachers, I had the opportunity to attend a five-week seminar in our nation's capitol called, "The United States Government in Action." That is precisely what everyone saw and heard, government in action—from a ring-side seat! From a visit to the Pentagon to a witness of the Senate debate over Civil Rights, from the hearing in the Girard Case before the Supreme Court to the trial of Jimmy Hoffa, it was action all the time.

The Washington Seminar is an example of one of the many ways teachers are continuing their education during the summer months. It has been said that when one ceases to learn he ceases to teach. Many people ask, "Do the teachers of today keep abreast of new developments in their profession and in the rapidly changing world around them?" A survey of the activities which teachers participated in this past summer will certainly reveal that educators are aware of their own education and are continuing to learn. During the summer recess thousands of teachers went in many directions to continue their education. Many probably did not go far from home, perhaps to the nearest university for a summer session or workshop. Others found their way to industry-sponsored technical schools. Some teachers travelled across our country while still others went abroad.

One opportunity for summer study is provided by the National Education Association. This association provides some forty-two study programs in various parts of the world. One of these, the Washington Seminar, is typical of the nature of the many programs in which teachers are taking part and thus enriching their work in the classroom. Let us discuss some of the high points of the Seminar and thus use it as an example of one way teachers are continuing their education.

The Seminar classroom consisted of the entire Capitol City and the surrounding area. For example, when the section dealing with the making of Federal Law came up for study, teachers found themselves in various parts of the city—right in the midst of the process. Committee hearings and Congressional investigations were visited. Representatives of pressure groups were contacted as were leaders of political parties.

Don Empey began his second year of teaching U. S. history this fall at South Salem high school. He was graduated from Willamette in 1954 and earned his M.A. degree from Stanford University in 1955. His wife, the former Mary Reeb, class of 1956, also teaches in the Salem school system.

Mr. and Mrs. Empey with Representative Walter Norblad at Our National Capitol.

The study of the Executive Department also offered an opportunity for on-the-spot investigation. Meetings were held with members of President Eisenhower's advisory staff. Each of the Cabinet Departments was visited and briefings held. When it was time to visit the State Department, an entire week was set aside for a study of the United States in world affairs. Included in the program were several discussions of particular aspects of American Foreign Policy, visits to embassies, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the Pan-American Union building.

Not only did the teachers gain new insights into the operation of the Federal Government, but they also studied many problems and developments within the field of education. The Seminar took advantage of the Washington scene to make a study of the problems confronting the recently integrated District of Columbia School System. Visits to the N.E.A. headquarters and the U. S. Office of Education proved enlightening. Wherever the group visited, a great amount of printed material was distributed which would be helpful in the classroom back home. Audio-visual aids lists were compiled, as were reading lists, for later reference. Every effort was made to find ways to aid the teacher in his classroom work.

Almost everyone participated in special tours on the weekends. Places of historical interest highlighted these adventures. Visits to Gettysburg, Williamsburg, Jamestown, Bull Run, Mount Vernon and Monticello helped to make the past live again. Needless to say, the camera supply dealers were overjoyed with most of the individuals in the group who "want all my students to see it too."

All participants who took the Seminar for academic credit made a special study of some particular field of interest. While data gathering took place in Washington, the writing of the report was saved until time would permit at home. Then everyone who was interested in another's work could have a copy mailed to him. This way the group learned from one another.

This brief explanation of the Washington Seminar should give the reader an idea as to the way many teachers are spending their summer. Teachers are continuing their education; they need to and are expected to. The Seminar is only one of the many devices now in operation to make the educator's education more meaningful. Teachers realize that learning must not cease the day they receive their diplomas. The high enrollment at colleges over the nation and the number of teacher-study tours around the world this past summer reveals this fact. The results of studying, whether it be a summer workshop, a trip to Europe, or the Washington Seminar, can mean only one thing. It means teachers will be able to do their work more effectively and thus help to develop better students.

about a REUNION

Alumni Day, June 1, saw the return of the largest group of alumni ever to visit the campus.

It was a lovely day . . . sunny and warm and groups of alumni were everywhere—greeting old friends and making new.

The "Alumni University" sessions were filled to capacity.

There was a record number at the class reunions which were held in the dining room of Baxter Hall. In the evening the tables were filled at the Alumni Day Banquet, presided over by popular "Gus" Moore, Alumni Association president.

It was a day to be remembered!

LOYALTY FUND CONTINUES TO GROW

The Willamette Loyalty Fund totaled $6,424.99, according to results of the 1956-57 Fund, announced by Jerry Whipple, Director of Alumni Affairs. Final tabulation of last year's Fund, ending June 30, 1957, showed that 565 alumni gave an average gift of $11.37. This represents a donor increase of 104 per cent over the preceding year's 254 gifts.

CLASS OF 1932

Back on the campus to celebrate their 25th reunion, members of the class of 1932 gave in pledges and cash $4,983.02 to Willamette. Dr. Clarence Poor, general chairman of the class fund, reported that fifty-one out of ninety-eight members made contributions. The gift has been invested and the annual interest earned will be given to the Loyalty Fund for faculty salaries.

THREE CLASSES SHARE HONORS

The class of 1951 leads all others in the number of contributors. Final totals show that twenty-six of its members supported last year's Fund. With their gifts totaling $352.23 the class of 1927 topped the list in the most dollars given. Honors go to the class of 1919 for the greatest percentage (48 per cent) of its members responding.

OFFER ENCOURAGES ALUMNI GIFTS

This year's—the 1957-58—Loyalty Fund has been assured an additional $15,000 contingent only on alumni response. A friend of Willamette, impressed with the importance of annual alumni support, has offered the University $15,000 if a like amount is received during the Fund year from the alumni. Class representatives, enthusiastic with the growth of alumni giving and the generous impetus of the $15,000, are now busy preparing to launch the 1957-58 drive.

ART OF MOVEMENT

by Dr. Gale Currey

Alida Gale Currey, Ed.D, Professor of Physical Education studied modern dance with the following . . . . .

Mary Wigman—Wigman Schule, Dresden, Germany. Three weeks' course in modern dance.

Hanya Holm—Pupil of Wigman, guest instructor in modern dance at Mills College, California. Three summer courses . . . six weeks each.

Bonnie Bird—Pupil of Martha Graham, guest instructor in modern dance at Mills College . . . one summer course . . . six weeks.

Rudolf von Laban—"Art of Movement"—modern dance course at Ashridge, England, summer of 1956. Three weeks' course.

Dr. Currey was honored for her thirty years at Willamette University, on Alumni Day last spring. Professor Lestle J. Sparks presented her with a handsome plaque and a scrapbook filled with letters from former students.

Modern Dance is a challenging and satisfying experience by means of which personal growth may be developed, appreciations enlarged and personalities expressed. For these reasons dance is growing in its appeal and is being included in the educational experience of more and more boys and girls, and college men and women today. Dance is for all students to experience within the limits of their capacities. The average student has more capacity than he thinks he has, and is very often surprised by what he can accomplish through this medium of expression.

Whether or not a student becomes skilled in performance is of little importance, educationally. Most of the educational value in dance is achieved through problem solving. The body as an instrument of expression discovers and explores the many possibilities of movement. A student learns to meet barriers and conquer them, to think logically so that an idea will be communicated clearly, and especially how to work with other people and share ideas. All these values will aid the student in understanding himself and others.

Everyone has his own particular style of moving. He develops a type of sensitivity, a kinesthetic awareness, that depends to a great extent upon the structure of his own body. It is also a challenge to the student, however, to try to reproduce the movement of others that is accurate in form, rhythm and quality.

Rudolf von Laban, a great European leader of modern dance, now arrived at the age of eighty years, declares that dance is the basic art of man and should be a part of every child's educational experience. He believes that there is an inner urge in all children and adults as well, to perform dance-like movement as an unconscious form of outlet, and that the schools should foster this urge by introducing children very early to the world of flow of movement and to the strengthening of their spontaneous faculties of expression. Laban has been very active for a number of years developing his ideas in England, and today in most of the elementary and secondary schools in England the "LABAN MOVEMENT" is now a part of the curriculum. He also is the director of a school for the training of teachers in his "ART OF MOVEMENT" and it has become the goal of every teacher of physical education in England to enroll in classes in this school for a part of his educational experience.

An observer of a modern dance group will soon notice that the pleasure given by dancing can surpass even the physical satisfaction which is produced by other forms of exercising the body.

SPORTS

Football

At juggling football personnel, Coaches Ted Ogdahl and Jerry Long can rate as experts as they manage to field two complete teams from a squad of 33 this season. So far there isn't a lot of difference in performance of the units as Willamette University rolls along, impressing opponents despite overall youth of the Bearcats.

To the University of Hawaii game at Honolulu, Ogdahl was able to take only 25 players. For Ogdahl it was what he called a "splendid habit" of making trips to Hawaii on official football business. He played for Willamette there in 1941 the day before the Pearl Harbor attack, played there twice in 1946 with the professional San Diego Bombers, and coached Willamette in 1952 in a 7-7 tie with Hawaii at Honolulu.

But, once again, the 'Cats were unable to overcome the strong Rainbow team. This was the first defeat for the scrappy Willamette squad thus far this year. They tied the Cal Aggies and dumped both Whitworth and Lewis & Clark.

Remaining games will more than likely decide the king of the Northwest Conference this season.

Alumni will have their day at the Willamette Homecoming at the Pacific game when they will see the Ogdahl-Long edition in action.

One of the field leaders in the "Pacific storm" is senior Vic Backlund, a Willamette hero at end the past three seasons who was converted to fullback this season. "He's adaptable, and strong," Ogdahl says.

After Pacific tests the Bearcats in Salem Nov. 9, last year's championship Linfield College team will be host to Willamette Nov. 16 in the finals—always an all-out struggle between near-by rivals.

Basketball

From this distance, it looks like an elongated, green basketball season for Willamette's Coach John Lewis.

Helping to give it length will be some tall freshmen who almost brush the branches as they walk around the campus. There are six of them 6 feet, 4 inches or taller and on them Lewis will depend for the help to go with his five lettermen. Lost are 6-7 Neil Causbie from Albany, Terry Ziegelman from The Dalles and Don Hoy from Newberg, 2nd team all-conference choice.

There is experience among the returnees, who have two pre-conference season tournaments. One is Eddy Grossenbacher, the soph guard from Milwaukie on the Far West Conference Invitational Tourney first team all-stars last years. Others are seniors—Vic Backlund of Bandon, Ron Taylor of Corvallis, Dick Hartley of Boise and Masa Watanabe of Hawaii.

Freshman prospects include 6-7 Pete McDowell of Juneau, Alaska; Buz Wilfert, 6-6, Albany; Gene Harris, 6-5, Madras; Tom Chase, 6-4, Burlingame, Calif.; Spence Erickson, 6-4, Hood River; Alan Warfield, 6-4, Massyrock, Wash.; Ron Russell, 6-2, South Salem; Fidel Gaviola, 6-2, Woodburn; Bob Olinger, 6-2, Milton; Jerry Auvinen, 6-2, Olympia; Jerry Coon, South Salem.

Up from the junior varsity are Larry Lynn and Lee Weaver, two high J.V. scorers for last season, Gerry Wimmer and Tom Watson.

Scholar is Aided By Soviet Films

Dr. Hollis Huston

Dr. Hollis W. Huston, '44, visiting professor of religion at Ohio Wesleyan University, holds out some hope for Western scholars who may need scholarly cooperation from the Soviet Union.

Since his graduate school days, Dr. Huston has been writing periodically to libraries and museums in Russia, which are known to have many important New Testament manuscripts. But all his requests went unanswered as had those of other scholars.

Last year, while he was doing post-doctoral research in New Testament on a Fulbright grant in England, Dr. Huston did a service for the cultural affairs officer of the American Embassy there. In appreciation, the officer offered to do anything he could to help Dr. Huston's research.

The officer tried a new approach by sending the request directly to the U. S. Ambassador through diplomatic channels.

For several months, Dr. Huston heard nothing, until recently, when a package arrived for Dr. Huston from the State Department. It contained a microfilm of a sixth century Greek manuscript of the four gospels from Tiflis. This is a manuscript which in the past quarter century has assumed tremendous importance in textual studies of the New Testament.

He also received photographs of a fragmentary fifth century papyrus manuscript of the first seven chapters of I Corinthians.

From the photographs received, Dr. Huston has been able to identify several more sheets of this manuscript than were known to exist and he intends to publish a transcript of the complete text soon.

Grad's Treatise Draws National Notice

Arthur S. Miller's class of '38, book, "Racial Discrimination and Private Education—a Legal Analysis," was published in September by the University of North Carolina Press.

In this book he analyzes the legal position of private schools. He says that a change in these schools may be "... the wedge that opens the doors of the public schools in many parts of the South." Among the questions considered by Prof. Miller are: Will private and denominational schools soon be required to admit Negro students? Just where do these type of schools stand amidst efforts to bring mixed schools in the South?

A six page article, with excerpts from the book appeared in the Sept. 27, 1957 issue of U. S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT.

Mr. Miller is professor of law at Emory University, in Georgia. His B.A. was earned at Willamette University and his L.L.B. from the Stanford University School of Law.

Willamette Legal Aid Clinic Shows the Way

This matter of equal justice for all gives a conscientious lawyer—and there are some—a lot of trouble because the poorest people seem to get into the deepest trouble.

Of course, a penniless man accused of a crime gets a court-appointed lawyer, paid at the rate of $15 a day by the county. This is about what a lawyer, with his overhead, must make each hour to stay in business. So he absorbs it, if his business is good, or he sloughs off, if its marginal.

But the worst kind comes with the man who has been accused of nothing at the moment, but who wants to accuse someone else of something or fears he soon will be the subject of a pointed finger. Nobody doles out even $15 a day for him to give to an attorney.

That's where legal aid societies take over in many larger cities. Lawyers band together to spread this burden equally, and charge on a basis of ability to pay only.

Most western cities have no such system. Salem, in fact, is the only city in the Far West with a legal aid "clinic," and one of the few communities of its size in the nation with any legal aid system.

Salem's is unique in the Far West because it is operated by a university, never makes a charge, and uses a clinic system, not an appointment system.

All a person has to do is walk into Willamette University's law school between 2 and 4 p.m. any weekday and tell his story. The mere fact that he comes there is accepted as evidence—and the only evidence needed—that he can't afford a professional.

Senior law students do the counseling. The sponsor is the Marion County Bar Association, and the money (some $400 a year for stamps, stationery and incidentals) comes from the United Fund.

Willamette's legal aid clinic now is an even ten years old and is handling cases at the rate of 400 a year. State law prohibits a student trying a case in court, but guiding a client up to that point is considered an invaluable experience.

Besides the obvious benefits, there are others, like allowing practicing attorneys to reduce the number of no-pay cases they must handle. And a number of such clinics would effectively block any moves toward government subsidizing of legal aid for the needy.

An interesting point is the location of this unique clinic—a small, private college. Such a venture probably would be too hot for a state college to handle because many lawyers would look upon this as the first step toward state control.

Too, a large school tends to stick to straight and narrow, producing its graduates from as simple a machine as possible. Clinics and the like upset the production line.

Without state-operated schools, America still would be dependent upon older civilizations. But without the private college, education might become an inflexible formula without innovation or new thought in the dozens of "touchy" fields like law.

HOME COMING

On Your Calendar Today!*

Plans are under way for a Homecoming bigger and better than ever . . . the enthusiasm of the students is certainly contagious . . . plans for the living organizations hotly contested sign contest already are underway.

The week-end starts early for the freshmen and freshmen profs (new faculty members), with a leaf rake at 5:00 a.m., followed by doughnuts and coffee. The decision of the judges for the sign contest will be made at 9:00 a.m., but students will have to wait for the announcement to be made at the dance Saturday night.

Something new has been added to the week-end . . . "Varsity Varieties", the annual student talent show, will be presented. This will be a really great entertainment, for the talent at Willamette has been original and refreshing.

Saturday will start with registration and open house at 11:00 a.m. followed by the Bar-B-Q at 11:45. Since there will be pre-kickoff events, it will be on-to-the-game by 1:45. The greased pole climb after the game will decide how long the freshmen must wear their caps. Immediately following will be a mixer with coffee and doughnuts for the alums at Doney Hall.

Sororities and fraternities are planning dinner for their alums. Be sure to let them know if you and your spouse would like to join them.

Topping off the day of fun and frolic, will be the gala dance in the gym at 9:00. The students have you in mind, alums, so let's all be there!
