

Robert Moulton Gatke 1896-1968

IN MEMORIAM

WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY will miss a dearly beloved servant. A student, teacher and historian whose devotion spanned 54 of the University's 127 years. His works will live on not only through the words of his Chronicles of Willamette, but through the lives of the many students and acquaintances who were influenced by his teaching and friendship. Dr. Robert Moulton Gatke was at work in his basement office at University House the day before his death, researching and writing the second volume of the Chronicles. A thoughtful phone call informed us that he wasn't feeling well, but he assured the secretary that he would be back to work before long. That evening, Dec. 5, his doctor sent him to Salem Memorial Hospital with lung congestion, possibly pneumonia. After being treated, he told his wife not to tarry at the hospital but to go home and get a good night's rest, since he was feeling quite well. He died shortly later of a cardiac arrest. A public memorial service was held on Dec. 9. Portions of the eulogies by President G. Herbert Smith and his close colleague, Dr. Daniel Schulze, are printed on the next two pages.

Be Still, My Soul

Be still, my soul: the Lord is on thy side;
Bear patiently the cross of grief or pain;
Leave to thy God to order and provide;
In every change he faithful will remain.
Be still, my soul: thy best, thy heavenly friend
Through thorny ways leads to a joyful end.

Be still, my soul: thy God doth undertake
To guide the future as he has the past.
Thy hope, thy confidence let nothing shake;
All now mysterious shall be bright at last.
Be still, my soul: the waves and winds still know
His voice who ruled them while he dwelt below.

Be still, my soul: the hour is hastening on
When we shall be forever with the Lord,
When disappointment, grief, and fear are gone,
Sorrow forgot, love's purest joys restored.
Be still, my soul: when change and tears are past,
All safe and blessed we shall meet at last. Amen.

memorial service for Dr. Robert M. Gatke

“THE INVESTMENT
OF HIS LIFE IN THE TEACHING OF
INSURES
TO HIS LABORS.”

AT THE request of a generous benefactor, these words were inscribed on the wall of a college building which he provided:

“Alma Mater's love inspires the love of all true sons and daughters.”

Robert Moulton Gatke found something in his Willamette experience which inspired him to a lifetime of devotion and service as a student, teacher, alumnus, and historian. His love for Alma Mater was expressed not only as a member of the faculty, but also in his interest in every phase of the life, development, and activity of the University.

Upon graduation in 1919, he was selected as permanent president of his class. No gathering pleased him more than the alumni reunions at commencement. This year he was eagerly anticipating his class' 50th anniversary reunion.

Robert Gatke's formal education at Willamette resulted in the Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1919, the Master of Arts in 1920, and the Bachelor of Divinity from Kimball School of Theology in 1921. He was ordained by the Oregon Conference as a minister of the Methodist Church in 1920. In 1923 he took leave from the campus for a two-year residence at American University in Washington, D.C., where he held a fellowship and earned a Ph.D. in history and political science. Counting his teaching as a graduate fellow in 1919, he taught for 43 years. He formally retired in 1961, but continued to teach one class through 1963.

In 1942, Dr. Gatke expressed the satisfaction which he had enjoyed in his professional work in a comment pub-

THOUGH recently engulfed in a labor he loved—research and writing the Chronicles of Willamette—Dr. Gatke always had time to answer questions and converse with visitors to his basement office at University House. He had completed manuscripts through the War Years and was engaged in research through 1954 at the time of his death.

lished in the preface of his monumental Chronicles of Willamette when he wrote:

“To maintain a critical spirit, proper balance and perspective in writing a history of the University, where as a student and teacher, the writer has already spent twenty-eight happy years, and where his life and interest continue to be so largely centered, is no easy task.”

Publication of the 700-page Chronicles appeared at the time of the centennial observance and culminated more than 20 years of research on the part of a busy teacher who carried a full academic load in summer as well as during the regular school year. This work was indeed a labor of love by the author, published without any financial sponsorship by the University.

As must be true of all devoted teachers, Dr. Gatke's abiding primary interest was in the personal relationships with the young people who were his students. Their problems were his, their trials weighed heavy on his spirit, and their achievements provided his greatest satisfaction and reward. This interest in students was shared equally by his wife, Estelle, also a Willamette graduate, and their home at 280 Richmond S.E. has always been a haven where students found a warm welcome.

As Willamette's first professor of political science, Dr. Gatke had the satisfaction of seeing many former students take important responsibilities in the government of his city, state, and the nation.

Following the recent election, his cup of satisfaction was filled to overflowing when the results in the race for U.S. Senator for Oregon indicated that Robert Packwood had been elected to join Mark O. Hatfield in this high office. Both were senior scholars of Dr. Gatke in political science.

Had it not been for his devotion to teaching, Robert Gatke's interest in horticulture might well have provided his vocation. As an avocation this interest resulted in the creation of much of the beauty of the Willamette campus. Since 1934 Dr. Gatke has served as adviser in landscaping and beautifying the campus, and personally planted most of the rhododendrons. Modest reference was made to this work in the pages of the Chronicles:

“A general landscape plan prepared by one of the professors who has long been interested in landscaping as an avocation was accepted with a view of a long-time development of the campus.”

The love which Robert Moulton Gatke held for his Alma Mater was reciprocal. As tangible evidence of appreciation of a lifetime of service and devotion, Dr. Gatke was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters in 1967. This fall, the Board of Trustees voted unanimously to rename the former College of Law building Gatke Hall in his honor.

But more significant, the investment of his life in the teaching of young people insures immortality to his labors.

—President G. Herbert Smith

*"NO MORE LOYAL
SON OF WILLAMETTE EVER GRACED ITS HALLS OF LEARNING,
NOR, I THINK,
EVER WILL."*

IF I WERE to use a single word to summarize the life and activity of Robert's life, I think it might well be LOYALTY, for in all his varied relations he demonstrated this quality to a high degree.

We can never doubt the loyalty he felt to the members of his family circle, and the concern he had for each of these, how he was interested in their well-being and happiness. Even the last concern that found expression, of which we know, was not for himself but rather for his beloved wife, whom he urged not to tarry longer at the hospital but to go home and get a good night's rest, since he was feeling quite well now.

Who is there, who has observed him through the years, that dare say he was not loyal to his friends and associates? Many there are who must feel a deep sense of gratitude to him for making life easier and happier for them, and there are those who would say that he was generous to a fault with his friends. No amount of extra effort in their behalf was too much for him.

His loyalty to, and interest in, his students is a well-known fact. For them, no amount of extra time spent in counsel and advice was begrudged, and the number of those who found it financially possible to continue their education because of his aid, is by no means small. That same loyalty to them followed them into their careers, also.

The University which he served so long and well is the benefactor of loyal and constructive support. It was "his" University and for it he wished to labor, as he did indeed, into the years of retirement and until the very last day before his passing. Anything done in behalf of the University brought him joy and anything done to bring harm to it grieved him deeply. No more loyal "Son of Willamette" ever graced its halls of learning, nor, I think, ever will.

Last, but by no means least, I would mention his loyalty to the church and all it stood for, of his faithfulness as a minister to a number of churches, of his service on committees and commissions, of his many years as Church School Superintendent, and many other evidences of his belief in and work for his beloved Church.

In closing, I should like to apply the words penned by Longfellow at the passing of his close friend, Charles Sumner:

*"So when a great man dies,
For years beyond our ken
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men."*

That is our heritage, for assuredly Robert's light shall lie upon the paths of men far beyond our "ken."

—Dr. Daniel H. Schulze

PUPIL and professor reminisced at a recent Freshman Glee. Senator Mark O. Hatfield '43 was the first of two of Dr. Gatke's senior scholars to reach the U.S. Senate from Oregon. Robert Packwood '54 defeated incumbent Wayne Morse to give Willamette two senators and joy to their major professor. Many other former students of Dr. Gatke have attained distinguished careers in government service, a source of great satisfaction for him.

Memories of Mr. Willamette Endure

JUST a few comments from friends, students and associates serve to represent the esteem held for "Mr. Willamette."

Former Governor Charles A. Sprague, editor and publisher of the Oregon Statesman, wrote: "Dr. Robert M. Gatke, whose death . . . shocked the community, stood as the personification of Willamette University. . . . He truly embodied the personality of the university, its traditions, its moral and religious rooting, its desire to promote learning and its ideal of service. Rightly he has been tagged as "Mr. Willamette."

Assistant Secretary of State in Oregon, Jack F. Thompson, another former senior scholar for Dr. Gatke, said: "The fondest and most endearing memory I have from Willamette is my association with Dr. Gatke. His counsel and advice on any questions brought to him was always on point and always proved to be helpful. He was the most erudite, wise and kind man I have ever met."

The men of Sigma Chi fraternity benefited from his advice for over a decade

through his service as chapter adviser. One recalled "Dr. Gatke faithfully attended our executive meetings, and his counsel always proved to serve our best interests."

While the shock of his death prompted many similar recollections, many of his former students took the occasion of his retirement in 1961 to convey their appreciation. State Representative Hugh McGilvra wrote then: "How well do I recall in the late 1920's how a group of 'angry young men' welcomed your courses in the field of political science . . . You sensed this interest and did something about it." That "something" was the establishment of a political science department at Willamette which produced, among other notables, U.S. Senator Mark Hatfield, who called his major professor "a triple-thread man in the fabric of his University." He referred to Dr. Gatke's role as a fine teacher, writer and landscaper.

Memories of "Mr. Willamette" will endure.

*Selection of a Rhodes Scholar caps a successful year;
Construction starts on University Center*

SELECTION of a Rhodes Scholar from Willamette in December capped a successful year on the campus. Hikaru Kerns, a senior in political science, became only the fourth Willamette student to earn the honor since British philanthropist Cecil Rhodes launched the program at Oxford University in 1902. Only 32 scholars are selected nationally to receive the $2,500 scholarships for two to three years of study. Termed by Professor Theodore Shay as "a truly outstanding young man in all respects," Kerns will probably take up Asian studies. He plans to teach in college.

Willamette's other Rhodes Scholars include Edward J. Winans '07, now a retired missionary who served in China for 47 years; Paul T. Homan '14, a retired economics professor; and Thomas A. Bartlett '51, who attended Willamette for two years before receiving a Ph.D. at Stanford and becoming President of American University in Cairo.

After a temporary lull in construction on campus through most of 1968, activity resumed in November with the ground breaking for the $1.25 million George Putnam University Center which is slated for completion this December. The project is part of the $12.5 million Fund for Educational Excellence which reached the halfway point in time this past year with nearly $7.5 million received or pledged. FEE 125 received a sizeable boost in 1968 with a record $1,771,853.45 in gifts and grants.

Pertinent to the physical growth is the nearly completed acquisition of 21.8 acres of land south and west of the campus through the Willamette Urban Renewal Project.

With unrest on college campuses gaining wide attention this past year, Willamette students expressed themselves largely in a responsible manner. The Summer issue of the Alumnus summarized many of the changes sought by the students. Among the recent developments is the formation of a Black Student Union by the 12 black students on campus. The Student Senate recognized the BSU which listed its goals as seeking black professors, more black students, library books about black people and by black authors, and black courses. A course entitled "Black Culture in Africa and America" was approved by the faculty for the spring semester to be taught by Dr. John Rademaker of the sociology department.

The growing concern over human relations led to the formation of a Human Relations Committee of faculty members and students. At President Smith's request, the committee was charged with "keeping alert to human relations on campus as they affect students dealing with each other as well as the relationship of students with faculty."

Along with a new awareness in human relations, students have sought involvement in community service projects. Two such projects have been under the auspices of VISTA. Last spring some 53 students volunteered to serve as tutors for the Valley Migrant League's adult education program, and this fall, 25 students have been participating in a program for low income families to help supervise recreation and other activities in weekly meetings at Bush Elementary School near the campus.

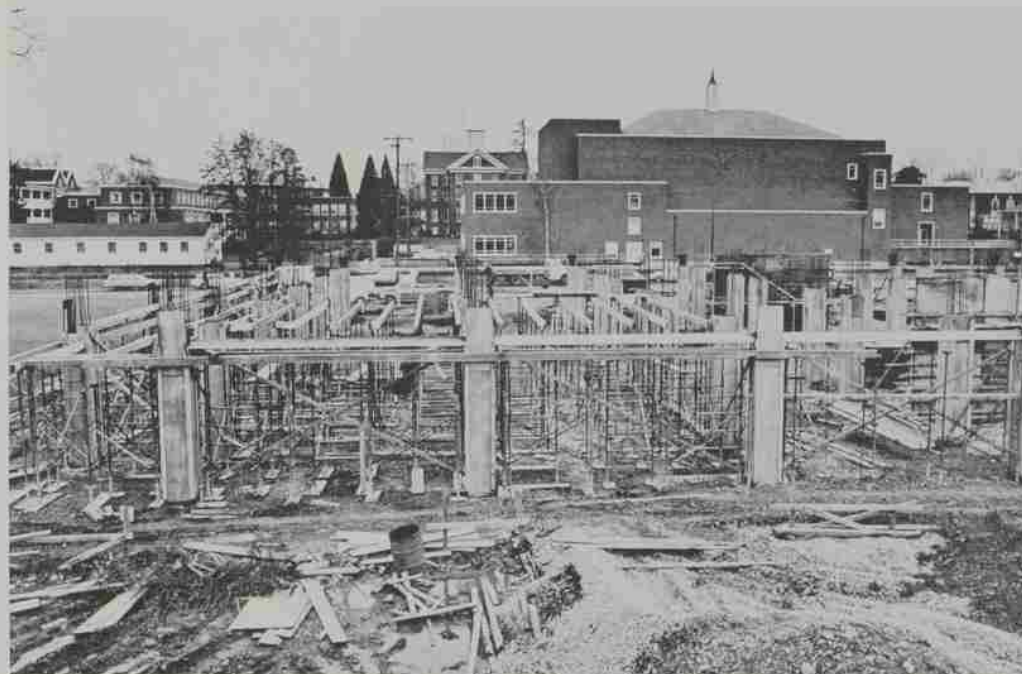

Another community service project lured the six fraternities in a joint effort. Over 70 men participated in a "walk-a-thon" to draw attention to a $6 million bond issue to provide Salem with a new Civic Center. The 22 minute well publicized walk served to show how widespread are the offices of city government. The bond issue passed, which will put city government under one roof and provide for a new city library.

HIKARU KERNS
Fourth Willamette Recipient

Other notable achievements in 1968 included the placement of the chemistry department on the approved list of the American Chemical Society; receipt of a $234,000 National Science Foundation grant, a part of which provided an IBM 1130 computer system; a record enrollment of 1,570 students; and sports championships in tennis, golf, cross country and football (see pages 6-7).

CONSTRUCTION on the George Putnam University Center had reached the above stage by January 1, 1969. The contractors are aiming for a December 15 completion. The building will measure 96 by 168 feet and contain 48,300 square feet of floor space on three floors.

Fine Bearcat Season Ends

“QUARTERBACK Mike Shinn took the snap and rolled to his right, put a stutter-step move on the defensive end and pitched blindly back to the trailing halfback.

“By the time he discovered the ‘trailer’ was out in front blocking, a Puget Sound defender had scooped the ball off the lush green turf for the go-ahead touchdown.

“Shinn’s Willamette University teammates weren’t knocking each other over to greet him as he slumped to the sideline. His coach, Ted Ogdahl, a man of commendable composure, simply mumbled, ‘It’s best to play it conservative down there.’

“To the hometown folks in Willamette’s windy stands, the gray afternoon became a darker shade of gloom. Apparently the Bearcats’ unbeaten season had just gone the way of the wild pitch.

“This certainly couldn’t be happening to the Mike Shinn, later to be honorably mentioned as a Little All-American, tabbed as the Northwest Conference’s best quarterback, and owner of virtually every league passing mark, including a career performance of 315 completions in 633 attempts for 4,725 yards?

“It was, but the reasoning behind such acclaim was illustrated by Shinn’s final act that afternoon as he rifled an 18-yard scoring toss into a mild Oregon hurricane to reclaim victory . . .”

So wrote Seattle sportswriter Blaine Johnson who believed Shinn’s and Willamette’s grid success in 1968 deserved out-of-state coverage.

Certainly the Bearcats of ’68 got out-of-state exposure as they rode a 9-0 regular season record to a third place national rating on the final National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics grid poll. The high finish propelled Ogdahl’s titlists into a four-team playoff for the national title. Willamette drew Troy State of Alabama for a Thanksgiving night clash at Montgomery, Ala. A breakdown in pass defense and the absence of three key players aided a Troy State blitz, 63-10. The lopsided score hit the record book, but none of the Bearcats believe they were over-matched against the eventual national champions.

Road Rougher Than Expected

The road to the playoff took some interesting turns. Pre-season indications pointed to a straight, smooth walk over all scheduled opposition since all but three Bearcats returned from the 1967 title team which was declared tops among Oregon small colleges.

Two-thirds of the way through the first quarter of the opening game against a strong Nevada team, Little All-American tailback Jim “Tiger” Nicholson left the contest gripping his shoulder. His scapula was broken and he didn’t return to action until Thanksgiving night.

At that early misfortune, the burden of carrying the Bearcats offensively fell to Shinn’s passing and whatever else developed in the way of a running game. The development of a devastating defense, sparked by Little All-American Calvin Lee at linebacker, softened the loss of Nicholson’s rushing heroics and actually was largely responsible for Willamette’s lofty poll perch.

in Alabama

Shinn is the first to admit that his passing effectiveness hinged upon the assembly of fine receivers, led by All-Northwest split end Gib Gilmore, and a mobile pass protection crew.

Shinn's sharpness was necessary, as the Bearcats had to overcome a series of injuries during the season. Shinn later reflected: "What made the season so rewarding was the way we overcame obstacles." These obstacles included the loss of Nicholson for nine games; his replacement Osa Morgado for four games with a broken finger; outstanding defensive back Tom (YT) Williams for three games with a broken rib; guard Dave Cook for five games with a knee injury, and defensemen Jay Brunner and Dave Woster a game each for shoulder and ankle ails.

Appendectomy Sidelined Lee

A week before departure to Alabama, Lee was decked with an appendectomy. The husky Hawaiian offered his muscular midsection to a surgeon with a sense of humor. The good doctor reported after surgery that it wasn't the appendix after all, but an imbedded Pacific Lutheran halfback. About the same time, offensive guard Gus Arzner was taken to the hospital with pneumonia. The absence of both men hampered the depth-shy Bearcats at a time when they needed perfect health.

Willamette did get a physical and psychological boost when Nicholson rejoined the squad in time for two weeks of workouts. He was 15 pounds lighter at 180 and hadn't regained full strength, but his presence buoyed Bearcat hopes for an upset over the highly touted Red Wave.

The eight-hour DC-7 ride to Montgomery, cradle of the Confederacy, was a bit rocky, but not nearly as rugged as the ball game two nights later at Cramton Bowl, site of the annual Blue-Gray game.

Troy's quarterback, Sim Byrd, the leading thrower in the NAIA, took advantage of missed assignments in the Bearcat secondary to throw six touchdown passes before leaving the contest midway in the third quarter. His replacement fired two more TD passes to complete the aerial blitz before 12,000 fans.

Willamette settled for a 40-yard field goal by Gilmore in the first half (a new playoff record) and a 15-yard TD pass from Shinn to Morgado in the fourth quarter. Nicholson led rushers with 115 yards on 21 carries.

After painfully viewing movies of the game, Ogdahl admitted that "we probably wouldn't have beaten them, but if Shinn could have had one or two more seconds to set for the pass, we had receivers open on every play and could have scored more."

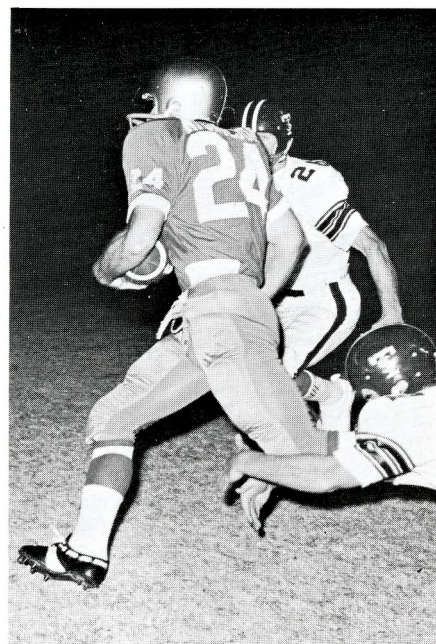

Pass protection broke down at Cook and Arzner's spots, causing Shinn to rush his throws and to scramble away from the large Troy linemen. Byrd had time to throw and took advantage of every Bearcat error in the defensive secondary.

District's Top Team

Back at home, the Willamette squad was again selected the top team in the District, Ogdahl was named football coach of the year, and Shinn was selected player of the year. Joining Shinn for all-star honors were Lee, Gilmore, defenders Tom Weathers, Al Ellis and Williams, and offensive guard Jeff Knox. Nicholson and Gilmore have received letters from professional teams in the NFL, AFL and Canadian League, and Shinn is considering the Canadian League.

Ogdahl has classified his 17th Bearcat team as "an intelligent team mentally with the quality to rise to the occasion." He loses Shinn, Nicholson, Gilmore, Knox and Ellis among the all-stars, but only two depart from the defense and some rising young talent on offense have prompted Ogdahl to assess the outlook for next year as "excellent."

An encore of 1968 will be extremely difficult.

QUARTERBACK Mike Shinn (top) found himself surrounded too often against the hard charging Troy Staters who eventually won the NAIA crown. But, in leading the Bearcats to a perfect 9-0 regular season record, Shinn became the all-time career offensive and passing leader in the Northwest Conference with 4,862 yards and 4,725 yards, respectively. He also broke four other records during the year and was named to the Little All-Northwest team. Above, tailback Jim Nicholson chalks up some of his 115 yards in the playoff game. While Nicholson regained health for the playoff, Little All-American linebacker Cal Lee was sidelined with appendicitis.

Seven to Serve Alumni Association

Alumni have elected seven officers and directors to serve the Willamette University Alumni Association. They will direct efforts to promote the interests of the University and to maintain and establish mutually beneficial relations between the University and its Alumni.

Larry Standifer '55 is the new president. He is the head athletic trainer at the University of Oregon and heads the physical therapy department in the Student Health Service. He replaced Eugene Lowe '49 who now serves as ex-officio member of the Alumni Board. Lowe is with the Ohio National Life Insurance Co. in Salem.

President-elect Dale Gustafson '56 is sales promotion manager for North Pacific Lumber Co. of Portland. Mrs. Morris R. Hunsaker (Jean Shepherd '52), a Salem homemaker, will serve as secretary.

The three directors include Mrs. W. Travis Cross (Beverly Briggs '49), Robert H. Donovan, Jr. '47, and Donald E. Barckley '50. Mrs. Cross, a Salem homemaker, also serves on the Salem Parks Advisory Board. Donovan is assistant principal at Waldo Junior High in Salem, and Barckley is Toll Studies Administrator for United Telephone Co. of the Northwest in Hood River.
