Lofty plans include a loft gallery (inset) when art and music switch buildings in the first phase of a three-phase, 6-year renovation project.

$2.3 million renovation set for music, art, theatre, and library

A three-phase renovation project costing $2.3 million over the next six years will begin in May to significantly upgrade facilities in music, theatre, art and the library at Willamette.

Campus musicians and artists are smiling over the first phase of "musical chairs" between the Music Hall and the art department. These two areas will switch buildings, giving art its needed expansion room and putting music under one roof again in the Fine Arts Building on both sides of Smith Auditorium.

A donor who wishes to remain anonymous is providing the major funds to convert the 72-year-old ivy-covered Music Hall into an art building. The east wing of the Fine Arts Building will also be remodeled to accommodate offices and practice rooms for the music division. This "transplant" is expected to be completed by Sept. 1 at a cost of nearly $300,000.

Phase two will tackle the task of turning the Willamette Playhouse into a more functional theatre facility. Preliminary renovation converted the 54-year-old gymnasium into the Playhouse in 1974, but an estimated $500,000 will be needed to remodel it to more adequately serve the growing number of theatre students.

The largest phase of the renovation plan centers on the 38-year-old library. The University has simply outgrown its present facility and collection. A plan to make the high-ceiling reading room into two floors and relocate the entrance to an expanded west side will add at least 30 percent more floor space, 100 percent more stack space and more than double current seating capacity. Preliminary cost estimates put the long-overdue remodeling at about $1.5 million. A starting date for the library phase will be determined after a library consultant has completed work with the library staff and architects.

Architectural details are in progress for the conversion of the 9,700 square foot Music Hall into an art facility. A few alumni may remember the old building as the Willamette Medical College when it was built in 1905. Many other alumni used it as the Science Hall from 1916 to 1941. Music students probably have a variety of recollections, both positive and negative, in reflection upon its 36 years as the music facility.

Preliminary plans call for a complete interior reconstruction. The basement will likely serve as the studios for ceramics and sculpture. (Sculpture will be moving from the basement of the Willamette Playhouse.) An outdoor studio with kilns will extend on the south side. Other areas of the building will be divided on three floors for a gallery, graphic studio, art history room, lecture room, painting and drawing studio, and studios for design, photography, weaving, advertising, and possibly jewelry, plus offices and storage areas. Access for the handicapped and an elevator are being incorporated into the plans. The architectural firm of Chrisman/Grimms is seeking to take advantage of the exposed brick and natural wood on some of the walls for esthetic enhancement.

Less extensive renovation will be needed in the east wing of the Fine Arts Building to accommodate the musicians. Twenty practice rooms, six teacher studio/offices, five teaching rooms and an office for the music division chairman are planned for the space. The fine arts gallery will remain off the foyer of the Smith Auditorium.

The west wing already houses the Dean, music library, recording studio, band and choir rooms, and faculty offices.

Renovation of the Willamette Playhouse calls for comfortable seating for at least 350 people. Interior remodeling would encompass a seminar room, design classroom, set and costume construction areas, studio classroom, make-up and dressing rooms, faculty offices, major performance area, Green Room (for theatre gatherings), publicity and ticket room, cloak room, restrooms, lobby and storage rooms. Also needed would be light boards, instruments for stages and classrooms, and sound amplification and production systems.

Architects will likely have drawings for the renovation of Playhouse done by this fall. Construction will start as funding is procured.

University Librarian Patricia Stockton, in her second year at Willamette, is eager to elevate Willamette's library to "the intellectual and cultural focal point of the campus." In a detailed statement on library modification she notes "it (the library) should be service oriented, inviting, and its operations should be efficient and convenient to the user . . . We should be aware that we are far from realizing these ideals. The present University Library offers neither the materials, the services, nor the environment appropriate to an institution of academic quality."

While holdings are a continuing concern, the rather severe physical limitations in the present building are major constraints to improvement. Phase three of the renovation project recognizes this deficiency.

Willamette is not planning a broad-scale fund raising campaign for the renovation projects because it is making a concerned effort to have its constituents think in terms of contributing to operating funds. "We will be seeking support from selected individuals, foundations and corporations to complete the three phases within six years," said President Robert Lisensky.

Trustees approve $285 tuition increase

Along with the announcement of the $2.3 million renovation project, other matters drawing Trustee attention in February were:

- $285 per year increase in tuition;
- $82 per year increase in room and board;
- student representation on Board standing committees;
- approval of promotions, tenure and sabbatical leaves, and
- review of the University's long-range planning program.

Increases in tuition and room and board fees were a necessity to keep up with spiraling costs. Effective next fall, tuition will be $2,985 per year; room and board $1,438 for the 21-meal plan, double occupancy.

Among the factors prompting the increase were a two-year $400,000 budget deficit, 150% increase in water/sewer costs; 33% increase in medical insurance for employees; 23.9% increase in electricity expense; and other less dramatic but nonetheless higher costs.

Most, if not all, private colleges in the Northwest have announced tuition increases ranging from $190 to $360. "Our increase will keep us in the same relative position to other comparable colleges," noted President Robert Lisensky in a letter to returning students and parents of undergraduates.

Prior to By-Law revisions on Board structure, just two students had non-voting appointments to Board activities, one assigned to the development committee and one to sit with the Board as a whole.

Under newly adopted By-Laws, "each standing committee, other than the Financial Affairs Committee, shall have two students appointed by their appropriate governing board. Except for the committees of the respective colleges, these persons shall represent the two major constituencies, undergraduate and graduate. These persons shall have full right to attend all sessions other than executive sessions and to discuss all matters before the committee but shall have no right to vote or make motions.

"The Financial Affairs Committee shall meet annually with the student/faculty and administrative representatives from the various University budget study committees. Each subcommittee shall have among its membership at least one faculty and one student, without the right to vote or make motions."

The second day of the Trustees' two-day meeting at the Inn at Otter Crest was devoted to reports from the four colleges on "The Next Five Years." Willamette's long-range planning process was reviewed by Larry Large, Vice President for Students Affairs, and Sam Hall, professor of mathematics, co-chairmen of the campus planning committee.

Promotions, tenure, and sabbaticals set

"Roots" theme for black awareness

"Roots" was the theme of the third annual program on black awareness sponsored by the campus Minority Student Union March 4.

As a symbol of the theme, the MSU dedicated a fig tree to be planted on campus "as a visible symbol that Black students are present on the Willamette campus," said MSU President Rosalyn Zeigler. Willamette presently enrolls 35 black students. A plaque with a dedication inscription ". . . to Willamette University and future minority students," will be placed near the tree at a site yet to be chosen.

Special guests for "Roots" were actress Ruby Dee and former Olympic medalist Madeline Manning Jackson. The MSU provided the remainder of the program, including poetry reading by Harry Thompson, dramatic sketches by Kevin Sullivan, an all-campus "African Feed," a vocal ensemble, fashion show of African attire, and a dance to the music of a disco soul band.

John C. Paulus, Prof. of Law; to study historic precedents in Anglo-American law primarily in property, trusts, and decedent's estates in England.

Harry E. Rorman, Assoc. Prof. of Earth Science; to study physical environment of the Eastern U.S. and develop a lab manual for physical geology.

Munich added to off-campus studies

Willamette's active Off-Campus Studies has a new offering. Lewis and Clark and Reed Colleges in Portland invited Willamette to join them in sponsorship of their highly successful "Year in Munich" program.

Other consortium programs have proved popular including last semester's five-college "Semester in London" under the direction of Willamette English professor Ken Nolley. Eleven Willamette students were among the 35 from Gonzaga, Pacific Lutheran, Puget Sound and Whitman who earned four credits in English literature, art history, cinema and sociology at the City University in downtown London.

All of the students lived with English families and took many weekend excursions. A particular highlight was a Thanksgiving feast in Plymouth, England.

Twenty-four students are also back on campus after their Eastern European Study Trip to Yugoslavia (see a first hand report on page 4). Thirty students are presently with earth science professor Harry Rorman in Central America. Another 25-30 are making plans to accompany Dean R.A. 'Buzz' Yocom and his biology instructor wife Libby to Willamette's Japanese sister-college, the International College of Commerce and Economics (ICCE), this fall.

Willamette is presently hosting 28 students and three faculty members from ICCE for seven weeks of courses in English, political science, history and culture.

Northwest Conference basketball crown highlights Bearcat sports scene

The 1977 Northwest Conference basketball championship is the big feather in the Bearcats' athletic bonnet, as Willamette athletes enjoy the leadership role in both men's and women's all-sports standings.

Jim Boutin's hoopers claimed their first outright title since 1960 and the second for Boutin whose troops tied for league honors in 1972. Willamette's 10-4 mark dethroned Linfield. The Wildcats and Pacific shared second place at 9-5, closely followed by Lewis and Clark, Pacific Lutheran and College of Idaho at 8-6.

Willamette's 19-7 season mark sent the cagers into the NAIA District 2 playoffs as the third-seeded team. The 'Cats surprised number two seed Oregon Tech 90-84 at Klamath Falls before bowing to the University of Hawaii-Hilo at Hilo, 86-79, in the District title match.

The NWC title, coupled with a second in swimming and third in wrestling, boosted the Bearcats into a 58-51 lead over defending champion Pacific Lutheran in the John Lewis NWC All-Sports standings after five events.

Willamette women also hold a lead in the WCIC all-sports standings with firsts in field hockey and bowling; seconds in swimming and badminton; thirds in golf and basketball, and a fourth in volleyball.

On the individual front, football end-tackle Gary Johnson gained NAIA Little All-American honors to go with league, district and regional accolades. He's a likely candidate for professional football, drawing interest from several NFL teams.

Craig Reingold closed out his four-year hoop career with All-District honors. The 6-5 team co-captain moved into second in career rebounding behind Bob Lundahl '71 and fifth in career scoring with 1,481 points in 109 games (13.6 average). Reingold was joined on the All-District team by Tony Hopson, a senior transfer from Morehead State, who had a 17.1 scoring average and nearly five assists per game. Reingold also had a 17.1 season mark.

NWC wrestling champions were Tony Anglin (134) and John Tyner (167); three men swimmers claimed District honors to qualify for the nationals, backstroker Rod Cook, freestyler Mike Anderson and diver Todd Ritter, while Cindy Pemberton and Kim Clarkson both qualified for the women's nationals in Pennsylvania.

Cook and Ritter both claimed All-American honors in the national meet in leading Willamette to a 17th place finish among 41 teams. Ritter is the first West Coast All-American diver in the past five years, finishing ninth in one-meter competition and 12th in the three-meter.

South African Chief warns of "disaster"

Chief Gatsha Buthelezi of the South African Zulu tribe and Prime Minister of the Kaw Zulu Bantustan delivered three addresses on the Willamette campus in February. He later had conversations with President Jimmy Carter regarding the apartheid policies in South Africa.

At Willamette, Buthelezi called South Africa "the flash point of the World" because of the oppressive apartheid policies of a white minority government.

While calling for the creation of a united and multiracial South Africa through peaceful means, he didn't appear optimistic that the problems could be worked out without bloodshed.

"We are living in a society structured on real violence, with men of color at the receiving end . . . I am opposed to violence, but it's something you cannot rule out or predict . . . I just try to warn (the White Government) that their whole conduct must lead to it . . . the route they are following is leading us and the whole country to disaster," said Chief Buthelezi.

"Yugo" experience leads to self discovery

By
Lisa Butkovich '78

Picture yourself on a bus. You're sharing a seat with a peasant woman and her chickens. The bus slows to a near stop on the freeway to avoid ramming a horse-drawn cabbage wagon. Outside a cow nonchalantly grazes on the grassy median strip. You're in Yugoslavia and you're glimpsing just some of the differences between "us" and "them." You "become" one of them for three months and you discover yourself.

That was me last fall. I was one of 22 students to accompany Russian professor Tom Berczynski on Willamette's Eastern European Study Tour (EEST). We were a diversified group, ranging from freshmen to seniors, with varied fields of interest.

It's difficult to give a detailed account of one's existence in a totally new environment over an extended period of time. I'm sure there are 22 different accounts, opinions, and impressions.

Here's mine. Most of us couldn't even say "good morning" in Serbo-Croatian—the language for our study—when we first arrived in Zagreb, Yugoslavia last September. Three and a half months later we were fairly comfortable in our "new" language, bargaining with the Yugoslavs in the public market and at least "floating" in the "sink or swim" language emersion.

Our professors were Croats who speak almost no English. Although this had its drawbacks, it was the reality of life on the Zagreb streets as well—relatively few people spoke English. After a month of concentrated language study, we branched into a seminar on Eastern Europe. We heard lectures on everything from religion and the state to the development of the country's foreign policy. We were also responsible for an independent study project, and the language barrier figures prominently there. Most material on the subjects we were considering—urbanism, physical education, criminal justice system, etc.—was not to be found in English.

Zagreb is a very old city, and parts of its historic past are still evident. The upper or "old city," was a favorite place for many of us to visit, not only to see any number of museums or churches, but just to wander the old streets. A variety of "entertainment" also kept us occupied in Zagreb, reportedly the cultural center of Yugoslavia. Ballets, philharmonic concerts and rock operas were all available at very low prices. Most of our group attended a rock concert by Paul McCartney and Wings for $5 each. The price in the United States would be closer to $10.

The value of sport to the Yugoslav cannot be overexaggerated. We experienced soccer season, and "experienced" is the right word! No fury is as great as that of a Yugoslav whose home team has just lost.

We experienced life in "Yugo" by living with Croatian families in private homes.

"We discovered a lot about ourselves through interaction with a totally different culture."

We were fortunate in our homes in many ways: Some students had telephones, and washing machines and television sets and even a car at their disposal. That, however, is not my impression of the average Zagrebian way of life.

The average living space for a family of four is two rooms. Hot, running water is not necessarily a feature of every home.

I was able to live with my great aunt and uncle while first in Zagreb. We had two very small rooms—a kitchen and a sleeping room. The toilet was down the hall, but the bathing facilities were in a shed behind the building. The tub was a cement wash sink. Water was obtained from a pump and heated over a fire next to the tub. Quite a change for someone who was used to a hot shower every morning!

We didn't spend all of our time in Zagreb. Weekend trips to other parts of the country were a must. The Adriatic coast was only 3½ hours by train with relatively inexpensive fare. International "jaunts" were also enjoyed. Ten of us went to Munich for the last days of the famous Oktoberfest. Who could ever forget the "biggest party in the world?" Besides, Munich even had a MacDonal'd's, and the Yugoslavs just don't make a decent cheeseburger.

We had a definite advantage in the centrality of Zagreb's location. Students went to Italy, Czechoslovakia, West Germany and Austria. While WU students were studying in Salem on the first of November, two members of EEST were "basking" in the sunshine on the beaches of Greece. A slight change from the good ol' Mill Stream!

The amount of physical contrast is tremendous in a country of Yugoslavia's size. We visited Sarajevo, and saw the effect of a different religious history—Moslem—on that city. Zagreb's orientation was basically Roman Catholic.

Yugoslavia's capital, Belgrade, was rather anti-climactic. It looked rather out of place in a country predominantly peasant. Belgrade would fit into most west European countries with only minor alterations.

Our Christmas and New Year's holidays were spent in the Soviet Union. Cold is hardly the word for the weather. It was a totally different experience to be in Russia. In Yugoslavia we could talk to people in their language and tourists were not common (aside from ourselves!). Japanese, Swiss, German, French and Irish tourists, as well as Americans, filled the Russian hotels.

Christmas was in Moscow, and we were fortunate to see the Bolshoi Ballet corps dance "Swan Lake" on that night. It was interesting to finally see all of the things in the USSR that we've heard and read about for so long—Red Square, the Kremlin, the Winter Palace/Hermitage.

I enjoyed our Russian visit, but it's not a place I care to visit again. Yugoslavia is different. I am definitely going back; if only to see the progress that the Yugoslavs have made toward their self-managed state.

In reflecting on the EEST program, the obvious conclusion is that it was a fun way to learn. The lessons weren't just the classroom variety. We discovered a lot about ourselves through interaction with a totally different culture.

Everyone was not totally happy with Zagreb—it's not London or Paris—but perhaps that's part of the beauty of it. The food was starchy, the pace of life slower, attitudes were different—but we learned to adjust.

Most of us now know what "culture shock" is upon our return to the states. It hasn't been a very comfortable feeling for me. I look at Willamette and my home in a much different way. I have a greater appreciation for what we have, our freedom to say what we think, do what we want, and go where we please.

The Yugoslavs have many, many problems. No one knows what will happen when Tito dies. Everyone worries. The Serbs and Croats still don't get along. But, for all her shortcomings, Yugoslavia taught me a lot about myself and what I consider important.

Material things are not quite so important to me. I saw my cousins basically very happy with very few material things. I've developed a greater toleration for other people, their beliefs and goals.

Perhaps the effects of our "Yugo Experience" will wear away as we grow back into our regular routines. Perhaps. But for one semester it was different for us; we had to rely on ourselves for what we said and did. We had to deal with a new set of values without the security of the Willamette campus.

I'm sure we'll never forget our times—good and not-so-good—in Zagreb, the Big "Z".

Some of the scenes of the Eastern European Study Tour included the famous Turkish Bridge at Mostar in Southern Yugoslavia; and singing "Jingle Bells" in Moscow's Red Square (below) near St. Basil's Cathedral (far right).

ALUMNI PLAN THREE STUDY TRIPS

Openings remain in three of four continuing education programs for alumni and friends. The Hawaiian trip June 9-27 is filled. A reservation deadline of April 8 is set for the Willamette Retreat at Asilomar on the Monterey Peninsula June 17-19 (see below). Details are being worked out for an Aug. 12-15 visit to the Shakespearean Festival at Ashland, and reservations are being received for the Oct. 8-21 trip to South America to view the eclipse of the sun near Bogota (see below). The spring Shakespearean trip and the field study on political economy in Washington, D.C. are cancelled.

At Asilomar on the Monterey Peninsula . . .

... "Life in the Year 2000" will be explored by four Willamette staff members and up to 100 participants June 17-19. Sponsored by the active Bay Area Alumni Club, the retreat will project 23 years ahead to the political systems, the environment, human needs, business and economics, and educational system expected at the turn of the century. Resource people are Dr. Russ Beaton '60, Director of the Alternative Futures Project; Dr. Sue Leeson '68, Director of the Program in Urban and Regional Government; President Robert Lisensky; and Dean of Administration R. A. 'Buzz' Yocom '49.

Among many of the thought-provoking questions to be discussed: Will American Democracy survive? How will international conflicts be resolved? Can political terrorism be controlled? Can the environment support our present life style? Will the present family structure survive? Can technology bail us out? Can private liberal arts colleges survive?

The retreat includes two nights lodging, all meals (dinner Friday through lunch Sunday), a special welcome party, and tuition at the following fee structure: $53 per person double occupancy; $59 per person single occupancy; $67 per person with deluxe accommodations double occupancy; and $79 per person deluxe single. A $25 per person reservation deposit is due by April 8. Checks should be made payable to Willamette University and mailed to Terry Wagener, 1137 Walpert St. #54, Hayward, CA 94541. (For further information, fill out the form on the Bulletin Board, page 12.)

See the Solar Eclipse at Bogota . . .

... and enjoy a two-week tour of other South American sights with physics professor Maurice Stewart Oct. 8-21. From leading hotels in Bogota, Lima and Cuzco, participants will branch out for city tours, excursions to Zapaquira and the Salt Cathedral; Pachacamac (pre-Inca architecture); Machu Picchu (lost city of the Incas) and the scenic countryside. The eclipse will occur Oct. 12 near Bogota.

Final details on the study-tour are being developed and will be included in a special mailer. Approximate cost of the trip is $1,275 per person, including air and surface transportation, first class accommodations, most meals, entrance fees, English-speaking guides, and tuition. For additional information, fill out the form on the Bulletin Board, page 12.

The Oregon Shakespearean Festival . . .

... lures Willamette theatre-goers for a seven-play, four-day study tour Aug. 12-15 at Ashland. English Professor Wilbur Braden will preview each play and accompany the Willamette theatre goers. The schedule includes four Shakespearean plays: Merchant of Venice, Measure for Measure, Antony and Cleopatra, and Henry VI, Part Three. The other three are Tennessee Williams' Streetcar Named Desire; Eugene O'Neill's Moon for the Misbegotten; and The Rivals by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. The next issue of the Willamette Scene will provide additional details on this study-tour.

Seminar for Alumni leaders coincides with Alumni Day activities May 7

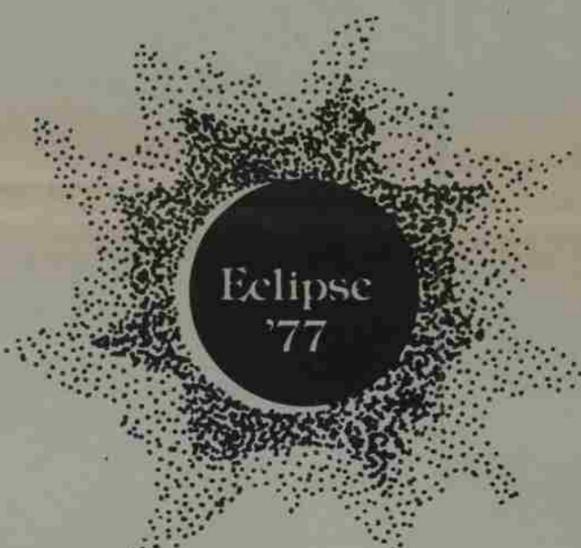

For the first time, the Alumni Association will sponsor an on-campus seminar for alumni club leaders and others interested in becoming involved in alumni activities. It is scheduled as part of Alumni Day events May 7 from 9 a.m. to noon.

The program includes the current slide-sound show used for student recruitment, an address by University President Robert Lisensky, a panel discussion with a student, professor and administrator, and a general discussion session.

The discussion will center on the following questions: How can the University be of greater service to Alumni? What activities can alumni groups sponsor in their home areas and how to go about it? How can alumni help the University attract more students? and other questions related to mutual service.

Following the meeting, a general alumni luncheon will be held featuring Vice President for Student Affairs Larry Large on the topic "Where we are and where we seem to be going." Look for additional details on the seminar in the Alumni Day mailer.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

GSA intern program draws rave reviews

For assistant dean Bob Johnson, assessing the intern program of the Atkinson Graduate School of Administration is like figuring taxes knowing there will be a sizeable refund.

"I knew there would be rewards, but it wasn't until the evaluations came in that we fully realized how successful our intern efforts were for students, employers and the School," said the former long-time government administrator who coordinates the GSA internship program.

Johnson's enthusiasm is generally shared by the participants in a program designed to link management theory with reality and to bridge classroom and work experience in both the public and private sectors.

Reports from the 29 students on paid summer internships last year were sprinkled with such benefits as "increased self-confidence," "new insights," "more clearly defined career direction," and "better understanding of what management is all about."

The School seeks to maintain a balance in its service to both the business and government communities. The internships reflected this objective; 13 were in private industry, 13 in government, and three students served non-profit organizations.

Since employers paid between $500 and $1000 a month ($800 median) for three months, they expected results. They were generally well satisfied. Some of the employers have retained the students on a part-time basis during the school year. A few have asked their interns to consider joining them after graduation. Some are planning to hire interns again this summer.

One firm, Simpson Timber Company, had originally intended to select just one of their summer interns from the Atkinson

School. "We were extremely impressed with the students we interviewed," said Valerie Olivers, Simpson's Placement Administrator, so the company selected three: Judy Latta, Newport; Ed Luttrell, Salem; and Charles Peck, Lind, Washington.

Each intern worked in a different Simpson installation in Oregon, Washington, and California. Ms. Olivers' initial impression was confirmed. "We were even more impressed with the caliber of their performance."

Similar feelings were expressed by George Bailey, Manager of Employment Compensation and Services for Portland General Electric. He tapped Lou Baviello of Naples, Florida to assist in a review of executive and white collar compensation policies for the company. In Bailey's words:

"The quality of the students' performance and the mutual benefits of the program should be attractive to a growing number of organizations."

"An unanticipated illness of a manager under my direction put Lou's management ability to the test. His performance exceeded all expectations and we were able to complete a high-quality project on time while maintaining the necessary daily operations. As a result of this experience, another identified problem area will be a GSA intern project this year."

In another success story, the Metropolitan Economic Development Corporation of Portland selected Lou Hammer of Seattle to help stimulate new opportunities for small businesses under a contract supported by the Office of Minority Business, U.S. Department of Commerce. Hammer and two other students are now working part-time during the school year for the Corporation.

"I was so pleased with the way Lou took on this responsibility," said Corporation Director Harvey Rice, "that I added two more students and assigned Lou to develop our Mid-Willamette Valley activities." Assisting Rice in the Portland area are Monroe Gilmour of Charlotte, North Carolina, and Craig Johnson, Portland. All three of the students are getting first hand experience in new business development, financing and operation.

For their part, students were nearly unanimous in praising the practical aspects of internships. Only a few complaints emerged. Some students hoped that their intern experience would have related more directly to specific career objectives. Others experienced frustration in trying to bring about changes in management approaches where there were long established routines. A few communications problems developed between the intern and practitioners who had been away from formal education for a long time.

"These negatives are to be expected," notes Johnson, who quickly points out that in some cases resistance to more sophisticated management techniques is justified when practitioners have evolved simple and effective approaches to particular problems. "That's where experience is such a valuable teaching aid and we encourage the interns to go in with their eyes and minds wide open."

Intern Sam Pace of North Bonneville, Washington seconds that suggestion. He reported gaining new insight into the many limitations under which management must operate while grappling with ticklish policy issues.

He helped Rudy Miner, Assistant Secretary of Standard Insurance Company of Portland, analyze and compare Standard's fringe benefit policies with those offered by 18 other major Portland corporations. Pace also experienced what he had learned in the classroom, that effective managers need to be strong motivators and leaders, not just technicians working in the compartment of their own expertise.

Susan Gordonier, Salem, also found this to be true. She cited greater self-confidence and the challenge to develop her own resources as one of the major benefits for her. She worked on a study of teacher tenure and salary policies for the Oregon Education Association's Director Tom Rigby in Salem.

Intern Vicki McKim, Bellevue, Washington noted that her experience led her to a more clearly defined career direction. She worked in the Salem office of Truax Oil Company, helping the firm establish an employee benefits program.

Another intern with a new perspective is Joan Henick, Salem. She assisted William Johnson, Assistant Administrator of the Oregon Liquor Control Commission, as a management analyst in the Enforcement Division.

Joan called the internship "a valuable proving ground for the management skills I acquired in the first year core curriculum." She discovered that managing a division requires maintaining a delicate balance between people and procedure.

"The GSA core curriculum provided me with professional expertise in management procedure, but the internship was my lesson in the importance of interpersonal relationships to effective management," she added.

What is the GSA faculty reaction to internship results? Professor Ord Elliott reflects the general opinion that "we try to sharpen the students' internship planning and performance so the students relate what they have learned to the work experience . . . The internship seems to provide them with an understanding of the art as opposed to the science of administration."

Students receive academic credit for their internship work, but the program isn't a requirement. An alternative is to undertake a special research project approved by the faculty. Most students, however, opt for the educational values of the internship's work experience.

Dean Jay Doubleday is impressed with the commitment of the faculty to supervise and evaluate the internship experiences and he anticipates a favorable climate in finding internships for about 35 students this summer.

"The quality of the students' performances and the mutual benefits of the program should be attractive to a growing number of organizations," believes Doubleday. He encourages Willamette alumni and friends to report potential internship opportunities to the Atkinson School.

"We're seeking the widest possible number and kinds of internships so that advantageous choices can be made by employers and students alike. Meshing interests and needs into a mutually rewarding experience is our goal," he concludes.

Dean calls GSA "a huge success"

"He's the kind of administrator our students should emulate."

That's how a colleague characterizes Dean Jay Doubleday who is guiding the Atkinson School through a challenging third year.

Words like "affable," "reflective," "straight-forward," "sensitive," and "solid," are other common descriptions of the new Dean.

The former chairman of the Oregon State political science department joined the Willamette community with a strong conviction for the mission of the new school.

"We need competent men and women who are committed to humane values and high ethical standards leading our organizations," he said, noting that our quality of life depends upon the effectiveness of organizations.

"I see the task of our School to provide the knowledge, skills, and understanding of the superior professional manager for both the public and private sectors."

Considering its three short years, Doubleday terms the Atkinson School "a huge success." He cites a quality faculty, better than expected placement results, thriving intern program (see adjoining article), well-received administration/law combination, and outstanding physical facilities as the major strengths.

Though the quantity of students is below preliminary projections, he believes their quality is also a plus.

"Our real challenge this year is to excite people about the opportunities here. We are not well known yet. We are working hard to establish our identity. We're convinced that the demand for managers sensitive to both business and public administration will continue to increase. Students will come when they recognize the career benefits," believes the Dean.

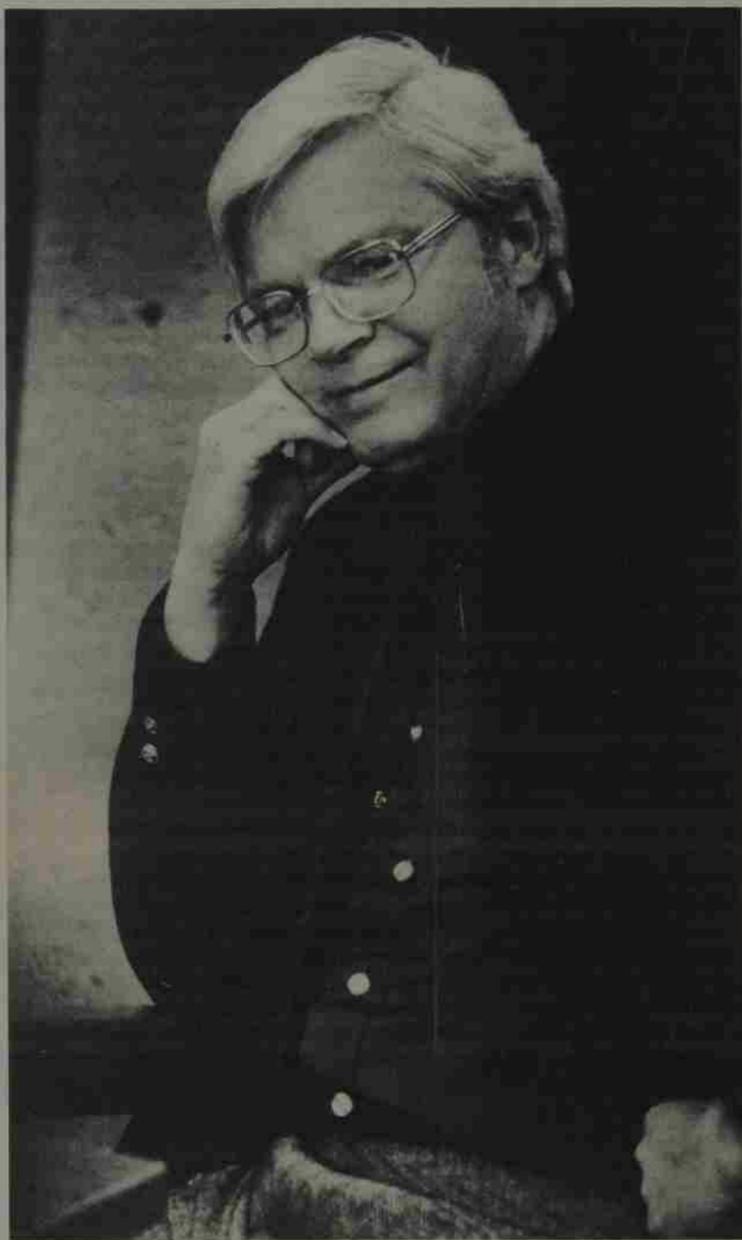

Doubleday's praise for "a fine teaching faculty" comes from two perspectives—his own experiences and from comments of students and colleagues. The 51-year-old native of Colorado has taught at UC Berkeley (where he earned his B.A. and Ph.D. degrees), the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs at the University of Pittsburgh, and Oregon State.

In addition, he served as a consultant for the University of Chile at Santiago and Valparaiso and at the University of Quito in Ecuador.

"Our faculty here is young and energetic with a fine reputation outside the school for research and consultant work as well," said Doubleday.

The most recent report of last year's first graduating class shows 27 of the 33 placed. The percentage is comparable to the leading schools in business or public administration believes Doubleday. Last fall, 28 were enrolled in the second year class, 39 in the first year class and 42 students were taking courses part-time. Sixteen students are in the joint M.A.-J.D. degree program, a four-year combination of law and administration classes.

Doubleday believes the physical facilities of the Seeley G. Mudd Building to be very supportive of the teaching-learning process. The variety of classroom format and size, type and location of the computer, and the accessibility of faculty offices

When asked if Willamette alumni could be helpful to the Atkinson School in any way, Doubleday had an unusually quick answer: "prospective students."

"We're steadily improving our admissions contacts with undergraduate faculty advisors, but we would welcome referrals," he said.

Admission requirements include completion of the Graduate Management Aptitude Test (GMAT), a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college, and references that speak to the candidate's motivation, ability, academic performance, personality and promise.

"I can't stress motivation too strongly," he adds. "I've seen average students rise to the top because they knew what they wanted and were committed to achieving their goals."

The Dean is obviously anxious to "spread the word." He invites alumni to add the Seeley G. Mudd Building to their campus tours when they return for a visit.

"I think Willamette alumni can be proud of the progress and reception of our School. We believe it is worthy of the reputation Willamette enjoys, and one of our goals is to enhance that reputation through well-prepared managers."

Recommendations on prospective students should be directed to Dean Doubleday, Atkinson Graduate School of Administration, Willamette University, Salem, OR 97301 (see form on page 12).

The Class of 1931 had its 45th Class Reunion in May, and there was an excellent turn-out. We invited our contemporary classmates to attend also—classes of '29, '30, '32, and '33. We had the largest group on campus that day. After lunch, we went to the home of Grace and Fritz DeHarpport, and enjoyed each other thoroughly, reminiscing and visiting. Marian Bretz Matujec and Jean Middleton McAllister were assistant hostesses.

Here are some news items from our class:

Mary Joe Wagner Thompson retired as City Librarian, Albany, Oregon in 1973, and now lives in Moscow, Idaho where she is House-Director of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity, University of Idaho. Her address is 507 Idaho St., 83843.

Warren and Louise Brown McMinnee make their home in Tillamook, where Warren is active in law and Louise has worked for Library Development in Tillamook County and the Oregon State Libraries. They have two daughters and four grandchildren. Warren has had leadership in local and state affairs, including State Senate, Oregon Bar, Masons, etc.

Roberta Archibald Dykes lives in the West Slope area of Portland. She has had an active life raising four children, and enjoys her many years of work at the Beaverton Methodist Church. Her oldest son is a professor and research scientist with Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia. The next son is with Pacific Power and Light; daughter number one is married to a nuclear engineer in San Diego, and her youngest daughter is in nurse's training at Good Samaritan. Roberta has four grandchildren.

Virginia Slusser McConnell wanted to be remembered to everyone. Her home is in Fair Oaks, California.

Rosalind VanWinkle Melton came the farthest of anyone to attend our reunion. Her address is 347 Morse Plaza, Fort Myers, Florida 33905.

Howard and Mary Allen Miller have now retired from their teaching positions in Salem, and are now at home in Hemet, California.

Margaret Ghormley, after 30 years at Canby Union High School, has retired and lives in Canby. She was head of the Business Education Department, which included supervising the high school year-book.

Lucile Hixon Peterson of 145 Harvard Ave., Fresno, CA 93704 completed 7,428 sweep-nets for cotton growers, and she continues working with her husband as an Agricultural Chemist supplying San Joaquin Valley growers and vineyardists with sweep-nets and optical supplies.

Joseph B. Felton retired after 24 years as Circuit Judge, Dept. of Domestic Relations in Salem. In 1963-64 he was elected President of the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

Curtis L. and Henrietta Bishop French have been active in the rural communities in which they have lived, and Curtis has now retired from his work as teacher and school administrator in Upper Lake, CA 95485.

Harold and Edith Morange Meiseger now live in Salem, where he is a salesman for educational supplies. They have two daughters and four grandchildren.

Doris Corbin Sheythe and her family have lived on their two acres in Mill City since 1937. She was honored by the school and community upon completing nearly 40 years of teaching. She was the Presbyterian Church Choral Director for 30 years. She has two sons and four grandchildren.

Pat and Mildred Pugh Emmons are enjoying their new hilltop home in Albany. Mildred recently retired from the Albany City Library, and Pat continues his practice of law.

Laurence Deacon has completed 36 years in public education, and 27 years as City Clerk in Mossyrock, WA. He and his wife Dorothy Brant have one daughter and three grandchildren.

45th Reunion, May 7, 1977
Chair: Hayes Beall

Helen Hanke Culbertson is retired after working for Camp Fire Girls for 15 years. In December, 1975, her husband Bob '34, died of cancer. She has one daughter, and Helen lives at 10235 S.E. Stephens St. Portland, 97216.

William and Susan Chadwick Hall are now living in Atlanta, GA. Bill is President of Hall Research Company.

Hayes Beall has recently been appointed by Oregon Governor Robert Straub to the Marion-Polk County Boundary Commission.

Don Egr and his wife Helen divide their time between homes in Oregon City and Yachats on the Oregon coast. He retired in 1972 after a long career in government administrative work, with his last position that of Chief of Employment Branch, Personnel Service Division of the Management Field Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture in Kansas City.

Dr. Waldo Mills is approaching 30 years of practice as a noted chest surgeon in Seattle, where he has also served as President of the King Co. Medical Society.

He and his wife Dolores, an anesthesiologist, have just completed a vacation home on Crane Island in the middle of the San Juans, a location ideally suited for their love of sailing. Son John is a professor at Georgia Tech and daughter Margaret is a doctoral candidate at Harvard.

The Willamette Family has special meaning for Gordon and Velora Williams '47 Morris. All three of their children are alumni—Carla '72 and twins Lee and Ron '75. Gordon is chairman of the Medford High math department and Velora teaches second grade.

Francis Crouch is enjoying amateur archeology in his retirement. He retired in 1971 after 25 years of service for the Veterans' Administration in Seattle and now lives in Edmonds. The history of the Kootenia Indians and collecting pocket watches are his favorite hobbies. He enjoys looking for ancient Indian campsites in Northern Idaho.

I might slip a note in on the Joneses since Malcolm retired this January from his many years with the Public Utility Commission. He started with the Oregon P.U.C. as a counter clerk following law school in 1939. He held positions of comptroller, auditor, Chief Examiner, Assistant Director of Transportation and finally Special Assistant to the Commissioner and Administrative Law Judge handling the review of motor carrier formal decisions. I retired in 1966 after working 25 years as a portrait painter for Hise Studio in Corvallis. Our son, Malcolm Lundy Jr. '62 is a claims adjuster for Hartford Insurance Co. in Portland. We enjoy our two grandchildren and many hobbies. When I first agreed to do these reports on fellow classmates, little did I realize the pleasure I would have hearing from you. Don't hesitate to write.

1938

Una Lee Kruse after attending WU for two years, received a BA from Augsburg in 1938, an MA from Northwestern Univ. in 1939, taught secondary and junior colleges for 5½ years and was married in 1946. From 1962 to 1968, she taught English Comp. at Southwestern Oregon College, but is a homemaker now. Her husband, Fred is an architect, a partnership in the firm of Kruse, Fitch, and Beals in Coos Bay, Oregon. They have three children; Jorgen and Sonja are both graduates of Pacific Lutheran, both married, and Karen is in her 4th years at P.S.U.

Esther Nelson Kraemer and her husband, Kenneth spent the month of October in parts of Europe; Czechoslovakia (mainly Prague) and then to Austria, where they picked up a car in Vienna and motored into Italy, revisiting old favorites and enjoying new ones. It was their fifth trip with marvelous weather. Their daughter, Nancy, is a sophomore at Willamette where she is affiliated with Delta Gamma and most enthusiastic about WU. Their other daughter, Marty was graduated from Whitman College last May with honors in her majors, Art and Sociology. The Kraemers reside in Portland, Oregon.

Dick and Elizabeth Winship Lewis from the cold and snow of New York City, hoping to come to sunny Southern California in early spring for business/vacation.

Dave and Shirley Rice Shearer in Redmond, where there's been hardly any skiing this year. Son Ron graduates from high school in June; daughter Tami is a 6th grader.

Derald and Pat Gentle Granberg from Berkeley, offering to host a wine country trip to nearby Napa Valley.

Ruben and Elizabeth Menashe in Portland, whose son Jack (like everyone else) is heavy into soccer!

More soccer from Chuck and Jo Ann Howard Seagraves. Son Joe at 8 thinks he's a football and soccer champ; 13-year-old Chuck's in junior high and Stan, 16, has fond memories of his European study trip last summer.

A picture of Jan Denney Huglin with husband and 3 children accompanied their card—she's changed not a whit from WU days in '51-'52!

John and Maxine Brown Kent are still living in Gilroy, California, but commuted regularly to Salem during football season where their son is on the Willamette team.

Jean Turnbull Hinkle is an instructor in Learning Skills at Umpqua Community College in Roseburg.

Bea Kauffman, based in Seattle, is into her 21st year as a Flight Attendant with United Air Lines (that must be a record!)

Also in the Seattle area are Janice and John Roehr. He's a radiologist and currently president of the Washington State Radiological Society. They have 2 boys—Benjamin, 15, and 12-year-old Matthew . . . both into soccer!

Sue Says

In the last issue of the Scene we asked alumni to suggest persons they felt should be considered for Alumni Citations or the Board of Directors for the Alumni Association. Many thanks to those of you who took the time to make suggestions. They were much appreciated and carefully considered by the Nominating Committee.

A leadership workshop is planned as part of the Alumni Day activities May 7. Alumni Clubs are sprouting up all over the country, so the Board is eager to assist in the leadership of these clubs with a training session. We will try to respond to the needs of the clubs in developing the content for the workshop. It isn't limited to current leaders. We welcome any alumni who might be interested in becoming more active in a club or starting one in his/her area. More details will appear in the Alumni Day mailer.

For most of us, one of the enjoyable features in the Scene is the Class Notes section. We like to find out what's happening to "old" college friends. Do take a minute to fill out the box on the Bulletin Board (page 12) and let us know what's new with you. If you have a class NewsCat, send the note to the address listed in Class Notes. If your class doesn't have a NewsCat, maybe you'd like the job. Let us hear from you!

About 40 people from the classes of 1966-69 attended a no-host get-together in Portland Dec. 30 to take advantage of the concentration of alumni and holiday visitors in the area. It went over well enough that we'll plan on doing it again this December. In regard to the newsletter, I've heard from about 85 classmates and will be writing up the news. In the meantime, here's info on our classmates from the alumni office:

Susan Corcoran has returned to the United States after working overseas for three years for Citibank, N.A. in Ecuador and Venezuela. She is now living in Miami, Florida and working as the Senior Account Officer at Citibank's Edge Act subsidiary. Susie is second in command of the Personal Banking Group whose international banking activities deal mostly with customers from Latin America. She writes that she is glad to be back in the States again and is enjoying the Miami sunshine.

Susan Thompson DeLuca is living in Las Vegas, Nevada and is teaching at Rancho High in the Clark County School District.

Kenneth Fukunaga is living in Honolulu and is married to Chantis Stinson Fukunaga. Ken received his Ph.D. in psychology in August of 1976 from the University of Hawaii and is presently a consultant with the Honolulu Department of Health.

Dr. Norman P. Hunter is married and living in Portland. He is currently working as an anesthesiologist at Eastmoreland General Hospital.

Darrell and Elizabeth Breeden Dunham are living in Carbondale, Illinois. Darrell is an associate professor at the Southern Illinois University Law School and Elizabeth (G'73) is a speech pathologist with the Williamson County Special Education Co-op.

Peter and Evelyn Silberstein Lutz are living in Napa, California where Peter is teaching Chemistry at Napa Community College. Evelyn (G'69) until recently had been working in various elementary schools as the Director of a Mathematics Lab but is now staying at home with sons, David 4 and Steven 11 months.

Nancy Schnurstein is living in Scottsdale, Arizona and working as a Marketing Rep for Safeco Insurance in Phoenix.

Susan Talbot is living in Edmonds, Washington and teaching in the Seattle Public Schools.

Joan Lincoln Winter and husband Lynn are living in Renton, Washington. Joan is staying at home now with their two year old son Steven Matthew. Lynn just completed his M.S. in computer science at Oregon State and has taken a job as an Engineer at Boeing Computer Service.

Mark Olson, M.D. is back on the Willamette campus one day a week, handling the Friday sick call at the Bishop Health Center. He's in family practice in Salem following graduation from the U. of Oregon Medical School and four years of service as a Navy doctor. His wife is a nurse and they live in Rickreall.

Gerri Ranney Ball recently moved to Edinburgh, Great Britain where her husband, Lance is working toward a Ph.D. in Economics at the University of Edinburgh.

Judi Wallich Rogers and husband Tom (67) live in Bellevue, Wash., with their two kids Peter (7) and Patti (4). Tom is Data Processing Manager for Lockheed Shipbuilding and Judi is a Home Maintenance Engineer and free lance model. We had a great Christmas reunion with Tom's SAE brothers Al Johnson, Dave Beeken, Jim Vidal, and Mike Keuss.

Learned that Chris Keuss now has teenagers! (by marriage) and is working for the King County Park Dept. in Washington.

Linda "Buni" Bennett Scheele and husband Jim are happy in their new home in Walla Walla, Wash. Jim is the new basketball coach at Walla Walla Community College where the first geodesic dome gym in the Northwest is under construction. Buni is busy being a part-time student and a Home Executive.

Terry Harrison and Sharon Ingram Harrison (71) reside in Portland where Terry is working for the John Deere Co. After graduation in June, he is hoping to return to the teaching field. Sharon is taking a rest from 5 years of elementary teaching and staying home to play with son Jon Eric born Nov. 22, 1976.

Glenda Hieber Blanchard and husband Alan live in Salem with their two darling daughters Danielle and Darcy. Glenda somehow manages time for 20 piano students and teaching part-time at the Yamaha Music School.

Also in Salem are George and Lois Dyer. George is a teacher and Lois is busy with her spirited daughter, Jennifer, and preparing for a new baby due in May.

Carolyn Woods Ollikainen lives in Vancouver, Wash. and is taking a few courses at Portland State. She is hoping to get a job as a media specialist so if you hear of anything...

Jim George is Project Manager with the Bank of America in San Francisco.

Teresa Krug Hudkins is the Alumni Director for Willamette University. Keeps her off the street. Husband John is doing graduate work at Oregon State.

Phil S. Myers and wife Mary live in Beaverton, Ore. with their two girls Lara and Lindsay. After four years in the USAF, Phil is now Manager of the Treated Products Dept. of the North Pacific Lumber Co. in Portland.

Bobbie Weidner Pettey teaches 4th grade in Palo Alto. She did some traveling this last summer and visited with Dave and Sue McGeehon Ashby. Sue is learning the banking business and Dave is a Consultant.

Keep those cards and letters coming in and all you folks in the Seattle area, I'm as close as your phone!

1970

Roger Van Hoy is a claims analyst in Beaverton, and is presently attending Northwestern School of Law.

Dave Woster is a biology teacher in North Clackamas School District. He and his wife, Georgia, live in Silverton.

Rick Sparber is office manager for United Finance Co. in Salem. He and his wife, Debra Huffman (71) became parents to Patrick James Sparber on June 21, 1976.

Mary Jo Turek teaches French and Spanish in Ketchikan. She paints, has a weekly radio program, and is currently writing a book.

Carol Miller Nylander is teaching home economics in North Bend, Oregon, where her husband, Nick, practices law.

As for your NewsCat, I am busy raising our two daughters, Tamara, 6, and Colleen, 3. I am also involved in Lifespring, a human potential training organization. Part of my interest in being a NewsCat is selfish: I'd like to be in touch with more old (figuratively speaking!) classmates. So—if you wouldn't mind letting others know where you are and what you are doing, drop me a note or, if you live in the Seattle area, give me a call.

I certainly wish someone would write to me next time so I won't have to make anything up. The reason I volunteered to do this is because I love mail. To date, I have received three letters, big deal. (Thanks Deb, John, Anita.)

Well, here's a filler on me, Linda Rough. I became a court reporter (you know, that guy in the corner of the courtroom with the funny machine)—great job, but you have to learn to keep your mouth shut. Two years ago, two women and I opened up our own freelance court reporting office. What fun: a phone with a "hold" button, a water cooler, even some clients (i.e., remember Charlie Burdell, Law '70?). We love it; come and visit.

If you haven't seen Susan Dickey Mankins for awhile, no wonder. She's a substitute teacher at Tachikawa Elementary School, Japan. Susan's husband is on a two-year teaching assignment there at an Air Force base.

Jeffrey Scott was born July 19, 1976, to Tim and Anita Morre Jones, joining two-year-old sister Sheree. Tim is general manager for public radio station KUMR in Rolla, Missouri.

Having earned his law degree in '76 from W.U., Bruce Bothelo is now Assistant Attorney General for the Alaska Department of Law in Juneau.

Correction: Pam Forsch works at the L.A. I Magnin, not South Pasadena (sorry Pam).

Received this word on Gary Richardson: Having attended Western Business School, he has begun selling stocks for Henkle Northwest, apparently Eugene's answer to Merrill Lynch et al. Gary has reportedly abandoned his original career goal of women's shoe salesman in Portland (a natural outcropping of his B.S. in Experimental Psychology from W.U.)

You guys better start paying back your student loans, or you'll have Shelly Milne Tucker to deal with. Shelly works for the State of Oregon tracking down delinquent student loanees and lives in Eugene with husband Tom. She has some very entertaining stories about encounters with W.U. grads!

Charles Nathan is a tribal programs officer in Warm Springs, Oregon, working with Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation.

Tom True and wife Shelley live in Reston, Virginia, where Tom is with the U.S. Immigration at Dulles Airport.

Saw Corinne Maxwell Stewart (looking great, by the way) and her husband Lindsay, an attorney (Law?), over the holidays. Corinne is a teacher in the Portland area and I happen to know she's strict.

David Stone, a CPA, is now with a management consultant firm in San Francisco. For the past nine months, Dave has been back and forth between his cottage in Berkely and the Blackfoot Tribe in Montana, on a government project bringing medicine to the Indians.

John Wyatt writes (in one of the three letters I got, remember): "I would like to make a nomination for the Outstanding Alumnus Award. After reading over all the grad's accomplishments, I feel that the class of '71 should nominate Bill Shelton, for remaining exactly the same throughout it all. He has vanished into Southern California oblivion, last seen selling beds at Bullock's, living by the beach, and madly involved with a very exciting young woman." Any other nominations?

If you'd like to "make the Scene" or you'd like one of your friends to, please write.

1972

Surprisingly enough small tidbits of news have landed in my mailbox over the past two months and I'm beginning to feel a little more confident about my new responsibility as "NewsCat Coordinator" for the class of '72. The people who have been my closest friends over the past eight years (both at Willamette and after) continue to remain their reclusive selves. Here's to the brave ones!

Kit Hansen (of the famous Kevin Boyd/Kit Hansen Glee troupe, remember?) is a grade school teacher at Huntington Beach School in Huntington Beach, California (that's near Los Angeles). She is also a member of the Irvine Master Chorale—a 130 member choir of the Orange County Philharmonic. The choir, with the addition of Kit's remarkable talent, will visit Europe on a three week concert tour in June '77. By the way, word has it that Kevin Boyd and Eric Thune are singing and playing tunes and such at Gary Funes' newly acquired tavern in Portland, the "Wreck of the Hesperus." Is it true? And Patty Funes is teaching math to high school kids in Portland?

Harry Watkins is a Clinical Technologist at the Tucson Medical Center in Tucson, Arizona. Jim Winn is a Management Trainee at First Mutual Savings Bank in Bellevue, Washington. Michael Cosgrove and wife Sophie Jupp Cosgrove ('75) have been traveling for two months on the "Art History Trail" which goes through France and Italy. They have returned to the states where Mike is teaching in Canyon City, Oregon—living on the edge of a national forest with two horses. How refreshing to us semi-urbanites!

Doug Brown is an attorney with a private practice in Bend, Oregon. Susan Winters is a student at the Banff Centre of Fine Arts in Banff, Alberta, Canada. Mike Dudley is a Resident Adjuster with the General Adjustment Bureau (sounds very personal, eh?) in Longview, Washington. Gayle Hunt will be a graduate student in special education this spring and is living in Stockholm, California. Nick Drakulich and wife Elaine (from O.S.U.) are expecting a bambino soon (their first). He is a practicing attorney with a firm located in the Georgia Pacific Building in Portland, Oregon. Scott Park, Kim Biles, Jim Briggs, Larry Kammer et al—what are all of you doing?

Jay Anderson is a captain serving in the U.S. Marine Corps in Santa Ana, California on the El Toro Marine Corps base. He and his wife Mary have a two year old son, Ian Scott, and a new daughter Nissa Diane (love those names).

My good friend, Nancy Jean Obenhouse Lampton and her charming husband Patrick Lampton ('71) are living in Salem, where she is putting her recently earned master's degree to good use teaching deaf children. Pat is working on special government projects (very exotic I'm sure) at the capital. Nancy is also doing wonderful things with handicrafts (which I'm sure will one day be manufactured world-wide). Another Salem resident is Char Whalin Marsh who has just returned from living all over the U.S. with her husband Mike—he is now at the Graduate School of Administration—Willamette's that is, and Char is taking some additional training in order to begin a teaching career.

Andy Callow Pepple is currently completing her master's degree in education at University of Washington. She included a few notes in her letter to me which I will reproduce for your enjoyment: Dean Petrick is now hosting a new T.V. show on channel 5 called the "Great American Game" . . . Trudy Wischerman Gamponia is finishing her B.A. at Berkeley. Gary Bauer is doing public relations work for the Portland Electric Company. Barbara Furst Call is an officer in the Navy—stationed in New York City (that whole sentence sounds wierd). Betsy Stunz Henigson is working for the Williamsburg Public Library (as a librarian) in Williamsburg, Virginia.

That's all the news I have—in addition the fact that several of the classmates listed above I don't think I ever even met at Willamette has enabled me to not only be objective in my quotes but also slightly humorous in my approach. Once again, keep all of your good resolutions for '77 and why not add some more: jogging, belly dancing and/or rolfing?

1973

Robert E. Biddle and wife, Gloria recently moved from Everett, Washington to Kelso, Washington where he is the assistant pastor of First Assembly of God and head of Youth and Music.

Gail R. Burge lives in Gresham, OR and is Librarian for Sandy Union High School.

David C. Cook is living in Spokane, Washington and is attending Gonzaga Law School.

Michelle Drayton resides in Seattle, Washington and teaches French in a junior high school there.

Madge E. Houser is a secretary for CFS Continental in Chicago, Illinois.

Michael G. Kelsay is a designer for O. & M. Kelsay Jewelers in Salem, Oregon.

Granella R. Key is a farm operator in Weston, Oregon.

Ruth Norris has moved from Portland, Oregon and is now residing in Syracuse, New York and working at the Veterans' Administration Hospital as a Personnel Management Specialist.

Julie A. Staible is Administrative and Legal Assistant for Compagnie Generale De Geophysique Inc. in Denver, CO.

John West is busy preparing for his Masters recital on Jan. 30 at the New England Conservatory of Music in Massachusetts. He also arranged two spirituals for a cappella chorus which were accepted by Lawson-Gould Music Publishers.

Marcia Hauff received her Master's degree at Northwestern University in Organ Performance. Marcia is at home in Livermore, California.

Patti Lalack Breakfield has a new job with Rapides Parish Office of Family Services. Her caseload consists mostly of AFDC clients.

George Horning is a senior biology major at San Diego State University.

David Jory lives in Salem, and is a second-year student at Willamette College of Law.

Douglas Knorr manages the Bon

Marche at the Northgate Mall in Seattle, Washington.

Arch P. Logan also works in Seattle, Washington. He is a rehabilitation counselor for Source, Inc.

Janet Palmer Morrow is working at the U.S. Bank in Eugene, Oregon.

1976

Susan Berkery is a part time graduate student at the University of Maryland.

John R. Cronkrite is living in Salem, Oregon and is a Material Control Specialist for Wah-Chang in Albany.

Dennis M. Fast is Parole Coordinator for the Oregon State Corrections Division in Salem, Oregon.

Sally L. Godard resides in Milwaukie, Oregon and is attending Portland State. She is applying to medical schools and will be working in the Oregon Legislature during the 1977 session.

Marsha L. Hawkins lives in Salem, Oregon where she is Instructional Assistant for Salem Public Schools. The YMCA program is called New Directions, which deals with students from Salem junior high schools who have behavioral problems, providing counseling in an educational setting.

Steven L. Howell is a chemist with Reliance Universal Inc. in Salem, Oregon.

Daniel R. Ivie is living in Portland, Oregon where he is a science teacher at Aloha High School.

Douglas B. Kays is living in Los Angeles, California where he is a student at Southwestern University School of Law.

M. Kristin Kiely recently moved to Anchorage, Alaska where she is with Alaska Mutual Savings Bank.

Lynn Haggard Miller is living in Peoria, Illinois and is a student at Bradley University.

Deaths

THE FOLLOWING ADDITION TO THE BY-LAWS has been proposed by the Alumni Association Board of Directors to define the composition and function of the Executive Committee. This addition will be included on the ballot to be mailed to alumni April 1.

Article V — Section 2: Committees

The Executive Committee includes the President, President-elect, past-President, Secretary, Standing Committee Chairmen, and the Director of Alumni Relations. It shall meet as needed to expedite the business of the Association, and shall perform specific duties designated by the Board of Directors. A quorum shall be a majority of the members of the Executive Committee. All action of the Executive Committee shall be reported to the Board of Directors.
