FRIEDA'S VISIT--OCTOBER 12, 1962

From the Tower

Awards Are Approved

The Willamette Parents' Association has voted to establish a Distinguished Professor Award following the earlier recommendation of the group's executive committee. The decision was made at the organization's annual meeting held in conjunction with Parents' Weekend at the University, October 19-21.

The first awards will be given at next year's Parents' Weekend.

Each award winner will be given a stipend of $1,000 with the number of awards to be given each year dictated by the amount of money donated by the association for that year.

The association's executive committee also recommended that the $4,000 annual donation by the association for scholarships be increased to $8,000. Any amount given over $8,000 will go half-and-half to the scholarship fund and the award fund.

The group also named new officers for the coming year. They are: Lawrence J. Evans, Portland, president; Franz Drinker, Portland, vice-president; Mrs. Sidney Cooper, Portland, secretary; and J. W. Hull, Hillsborough, Calif., Howard Morgan, Tacoma, Wash., and Mrs. C. A. McMonagle, Eugene, members of the executive committee.

Dr. Paul M. Duell, head of the University's Chemistry Department, and Dr. Martha Springer, professor of biology, spoke to the group on current science trends and developments nationally and specifically the present situation and future plans at Willamette in the science fields.

Other events included in the Parents' Weekend activities were Varsity Varieties with a cast of 29, visits to campus living quarters, the traditional Academic Preview conducted by several faculty members, a barbecue luncheon, an all-campus sing, and a football game between Willamette and the College of Idaho, which the Bearcats won 20-0.

Makes Korean Visit

MARY SUE GELLATLY

"I experienced the kind of love never known before," a 20-year-old Willamette Junior related after her return to college following a summer in Korea working in a remote agriculture area.

Mary Sue Gellatly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gellatly, 1810 SW Canby Street, Portland, referred to this experience as one of many she gained while a member of a college camp which worked on repairing a road, digging a well and building a bathhouse.

Her trip, sponsored by the Korean National Christian Council and the World Council of Churches, was made possible by donations from churches of three denominations, Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational, and from individuals in Oregon and California. She had first been introduced to the idea by Rev. Calvin McConnell, Willamette University Chaplain, who knew of her interest in foreign lands and peoples.

Mr. and Mrs. Del Kay of Orinda, Calif., accompanied by their son, Ron, discuss topics of mutual interest with one of Ron's instructors, Dr. Paul Beal, during Parents' Weekend.

Dr. Robert Gregg of the Liberal Arts College discusses forthcoming trip to the national capital Willamette's Washington Semester representatives, from left to right Lee James, Jim Brown and Justin King.

Enrollment Drops

Enrollment at Willamette University was down this year after a record total last year. This year's total enrollment is 1322 compared to last year's mark of 1346 and the post-war peak of 1320.

Enrollment in all of the undergraduate classes except the junior class was down this year. Compared to last year, there were 391 freshmen, 11 less than last year; 300 sophomores compared to 323 last year; and 160 seniors, 15 less than last year. The junior class showed a two member increase, with 193.

The largest first year class in this school's history has been recorded in the College of Law. This year's total of 76 is ten more than last year's entering class. There are 49 second year class members compared to 41 last year and 31 third year class members while there were 48 last year. Overall, however, the College of Law total enrollment dropped by one.

Graduate full-time students also decreased in number this year, with only seven enrolled compared to 11 in 1961-1962.

Of the total enrollment of 1322, 55 are special part-time students, thus leaving a total of full-time students at 1265.

For the first time in its 121 year career, Willamette University provided an orientation camp for entering freshmen this Fall. Conducted in cooperation with the Salem YMCA, the four-day camp was at the YM's Camp Silver Creek, about 26 miles from Salem.

More than 120 freshmen signed up for the voluntary camp. Freshmen attending paid $15 for the camp. In attendance the entire time were older Willamette student leaders and counselors as well as many faculty members.

The theme of the camp was "Moral Problems and Values," with the University providing the intellectual orientation and the YMCA, under its Executive Secretary, Gus Moore, providing the recreational and activities portions. In the planning for almost a year, this new feature of the Willamette orientation program is geared to "line up the freshman to think and consider important issues and thoughts prior to entering college . . . mixed with recreation and a good time in a beautiful setting," according to Dr. Walter Blake, Dean of Students.

In keeping with the theme, a series of talks were given by Willamette faculty members, each session followed by discussion groups of not more than 12 freshmen, led by student and faculty leaders. Dr. Howard Runkel, head of the Speech and Drama Department, spoke on "Moral Values"; Dr. C. W. Frost, head of the Honors Program, covered the theme from the field of literature, followed by Dr. Martha Springer, associate professor of biology; Tuesday morning's discussion was paced by Dr. Theodore Shay, head of the Political Science Department, with an evening session conducted by Dr. Maxwell Jones, covering the social sciences.

The Rev. Calvin McConnell summarized and evaluated the entire three days' discussions.

Heading this project has been a combined student-faculty committee. Mem-

Juniors Named

Three Willamette juniors have been nominated by Willamette University for study in the nation's capital this spring on the Washington Semester Plan. Named were Jim Brown, Lee James and Justin King.

Brown was president of the sophomore class last year and is a political science major. He is a graduate of Redmond Union High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Brown of Redmond.

James is a transfer student from DePauw University and is a political science major.

King is sports editor of the Collegian and an officer in the Young Republicans. He is also a graduate of Redmond Union High School and is the son of J. L. King of Redmond.

The Washington Semester Plan was instituted about 25 years ago by the American University in Washington, D.C. The plan calls for liberal arts colleges affiliated with the American University to send a certain specified quota of students in any one of the social sciences to Washington for one semester during his junior year. There are 70 schools participating in this program. Willamette has been participating since 1950.

While in Washington, the students will take from six to nine hours of courses. The classes usually meet in the evening, allowing the students much free time in the capital during the daylight hours.

In addition, each student carries on an individual research project for three semester hours credit. The project is basically a thesis involving intensive research in a particular division of the federal government. The research included both interviews with government officials and research in government documents.

There is also a field seminar on American national government in action held three times a week. In the seminar, students are brought into contact with the broad range of governmental and political activity through field visits and consultation with high government officials.

Although the program is open to students in all the social sciences, this year's candidates are all political science majors.

bers were Miss Karen Stone, Creswell, student chairman; Miss Jane Yaple, Ashland, student communications chairman; Miss Vera Haberer, Dean of Women; Rev. Calvin McConnell, University Chaplain; Dr. Blake and Mr. Moore.

Have You Mailed Your Gift?

Goals for the 1962-63 Loyalty Fund are to increase the percentage of alumni participation over the record high of 46% in 1961. Each 1% increase in percent of donors will earn $1,000 bonus—no minimum on size of gift. The second goal is to obtain the $10,000 available from the dollar-for-dollar challenge. Any increase of regular contributors will be matched dollar-for-dollar as well as the total amount of new gifts.

A Short History of Education*

By Richard Armour

Prehistoric Times

Little is known about higher education during the Stone Age, which is perhaps just as well.

Because of a weakness in the liberal arts, the B.A. was not offered, and there was only the B.S., or Bachelor of Stones. Laboratory facilities were meager, owing to a lack of government contracts and support from private industry, but the stars were readily available, on clear nights, for those interested in astronomy. (Scholars, who went around without much on, looked at the stars with the naked eye.)

Prehistoric students, being before history, failed to comprehend the fundamentals of the subject, such as its being divided into Ancient, Medieval, and Modern.

There were no College Boards. This was fortunate, because without saw or plane, boards were rough.

Nor were there any fraternities. The only clubs on the campus were those carried by the students or, in self-defense, by members of the faculty.

Alumni organizations were in their infancy, where some of them have remained. The alumni secretary occupied a small cave, left behind when the director of development moved to a larger one. While waiting for contributions to come in, he idly doodled on the wall, completely unaware that art critics would someday mistake his drawings of certain members of the board of trustees for dinosaurs and saber-toothed tigers.

The Alumni Quarterly came out every quarter of a century, and was as eagerly awaited as it is today.

The Classical Period

In ancient Athens everyone knew Greek, and in ancient Rome everyone knew Latin, even small children—which those who have taken Elementary Greek or Elementary Latin will find hard to believe. Universities wishing to teach a language which had little practical use but was good for mental discipline could have offered English if they had thought of it.

Buildings were all in the classical style, and what looked like genuine marble was genuine marble. However, philosophy classes were sometimes held on the steps, the students being so eager to learn that they couldn't wait to get inside.

The Peripatetic School was a college where the professors kept moving from town to town, closely followed by students and creditors. Sometimes lectures were held in the Groves of Academe, where students could munch apples and olives and occasionally cast an anxious eye at birds in the branches overhead.

Under the Caesars, taxation became so burdensome that Romans in the upper brackets found they might as well give money to their Alma Mater instead of letting the State have it. Thus it was that crowds often gathered along the Appian Way to applaud a spirited chariot race between the chairman of the funds drive and the tax collector, each trying to get to a good prospect first.

The word "donor" comes from the Latin donare, to give, and is not to be confused with dunare, to dun, though it frequently is.

When a prominent alumnus was thrown to the lions, customary procedure in the alumni office was to observe a moment of silence, broken only by the sound of munching. Then the secretary, wrapping his toga a little more tightly around him, solemnly declared, "Well, we might as well take him off the cultivation list."

The Middle Ages

In the period known as the Dark Ages, or nighthood, everyone was in the dark. Higher education survived only because of illuminated manuscripts, which were discovered during a routine burning of a library. It is interesting to reconstruct a typical classroom scene: a group of dedicated students clustered around a glowing piece of parchment, listening to a lecture in Advanced Monasticism, a ten-year course. If some found it hard to concentrate, it was because they were dreaming about quitting before exams and going off on a crusade.

Some left even sooner, before the end of the lecture, having spied a beautiful damsel being pursued by a dragon who had designs on her. Damsels, who were invariably in distress, wrought havoc on a young man's grade-point average.

Members of the faculty were better off than previously, because they wore coats of armor. Fully accoutered, and with their visors down, they could summon up enough courage to go into the president's office and ask for a promotion even though they had not published a thing.

At this time the alumni council became more aggressive in its fund drives, using such persuasive devices as the thumbscrew, the knout, the rack, and the wheel. A wealthy alumnus would usually donate generously if a sufficient number of alumni, armed with pike-staffs and halberds, could cross his moat and storm his castle walls. A few could be counted on to survive the rain of stones, arrows, and molten lead. Such a group of alumni, known as "the committee," was customarily conducted to the castle by a troubador, who led in the singing of the Alma Mater Song the while.

The Renaissance

During the Renaissance, universities sprang up all over Europe. You could go to bed at night, with not a university around, and the next morning there would be two universities right down the street, each with a faculty, student body, campanile, and need for additional endowment.

THE RENAISSANCE...

The first universities were in Italy, where Dante was required reading. Some students said his "Paradise" and "Purgatory" were as hard as "Hell." Boccaccio was not required but was read anyhow, and in the original Italian, so much being lost in translation. Other institutions soon followed, such as Heidelberg, where a popular elective was Duelling 103a, b, usually taken concurrently with First Aid, and the Sorbonne, which never seemed to catch on with tourists as much as the Eiffel Tower, the Folies Bergere, and Napoleon's Tomb. In England there was Oxford, where, by curious coincidence, all of the young instructors were named Don. There was also Cambridge.

The important thing about the Renaissance, which was a time of awakening (even in the classroom), was education of the Whole Man. Previously such vital parts as the elbows and ear lobes had been neglected. The graduate of a university was supposed, above all, to be a gentleman. This meant that he should know such things as archery, falconry, and fencing (subjects now largely relegated to Physical Education and given only one-half credit per semester), as well as, in the senior year, how to use a knife and fork.

During the Renaissance, the works of Homer, Virgil, and other classical writers were rediscovered, much to the disappointment of students.

Alumni officials concentrated their efforts on securing a patron, someone rich like Lorenzo de' Medici, someone clever like Machiavelli, or (if they wished to get rid of a troublesome member of the administration) someone really useful like Lucrezia Borgia.

Colonial America

The first universities in America were founded by the Puritans. This explains the strict regulations about Late Hours, Compulsory Chapel, No Liquor on the Campus, and Off-Limits to Underclassmen which still exist at many institutions.

Some crafts were taught, but witchcraft was an extracurricular activity. Witch-burning, on the other hand, was the seventeenth century equivalent of hanging a football coach in effigy at the end of a bad season. Though deplored, it was passed off by the authorities as attributable to "youthful exuberance."

Harvard set the example for naming colleges after donors. William and Mary, though making a good try, failed to start a trend for using first names. It was more successful, however, in starting Phi Beta Kappa, a fraternity which permitted no rough stuff in its initiations. At first the Phi Beta Kappa key was worn on the key ring, but the practice went out with the discovery of the watch chain and vest.

During the Colonial Period, alumni officials limited their fund-raising activities to those times when an alumnus was securely fastened, hands and legs, in the stocks. In this position he was completely helpless and gave generously, or could be frisked.

Revolutionary America

Higher education came to a virtual standstill during the Revolution—every able-bodied male having enlisted for the duration. Since the ROTC was not yet established, college men were forced to have other qualifications for a commission, such as money.

General George Washington was given an honorary degree by Harvard, and this helped see him through the difficult winter at Valley Forge. Since he gave no commencement address, it is assumed that he made a substantial contribution to the building fund. Then again, mindful of the reputation he had gained through Parson Weems's spreading of the cherry tree story, he may have established a chair in Ethics.

Unlike the situation during World War I, when colleges and universities abandoned the teaching of German in order to humiliate the Kaiser, the Colonists waged the Revolutionary War successfully without prohibiting the teaching of English. They did, however, force students to substitute such good old American words as "suspenders" for "braces," and themes were marked down when the spelling "tyre" was used for "tire" and "colour" for "color."

The alumni publication, variously called the Alumni Bulletin, the Alumni Quarterly, and the Alumni Newsletter, was probably invented at this time by Benjamin Franklin, who invented almost everything else, including bifocals and kites. The first such publication was probably Poor Alumnus' Almanac, full of such homely sayings as "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise enough to write his Alma Mater into his will."

Contemporary America

In the nineteenth century, denominational colleges were founded in all parts of the country, especially Ohio. In the smaller of these colleges, money was mostly given in small denominations. A few colleges were not named after John Wesley.

State universities came into being at about the same time, and were tax supported. Every taxpayer was therefore a donor, but without getting his name on a building or being invited to dinner by the president. The taxpayer, in short, was in the same class as the Anonymous Giver, but not because he asked that his name be withheld.

About the middle of the nineteenth century, women were admitted to college. This was done (1) to relieve men of having to take women's parts in dramatic productions, (2) to provide cheer leaders with shapelier legs, and (3) to recruit members for the Women's Glee Club, which was not prospering. Women students came to be known as co-eds, meaning that they went along with a man's education, and he could study and date simultaneously. It was not realized, when they were admitted, that women would get most of the high marks, especially from professors who graded on curves.

In the twentieth century, important strides were made, such as the distinction which developed between education and Education. Teachers came to be trained in what were at first called Normal Schools. With the detection of certain abnormalities, the name was changed to Teachers Colleges.

John Dewey introduced Progressive Education, whereby students quickly knew more than their teachers and told them so. Robert Hutchins turned the University of Chicago upside down, thereby necessitating a new building program. At St. John's College everyone studied the Great Books, which were more economical because they did not come out each year in a revised edition. Educational television gave college professors an excuse for owning a television set, which they had previously maintained would destroy the reading habit. This made it possible for them to watch Westerns and old movies without losing status.

Of recent years, an increasing number of students spend their junior year abroad. This enables them to get a glimpse of professors who have been away for several years on Fulbrights and Guggenheims.

Student government has grown apace, students now are not only governing themselves but giving valuable suggestions, in the form of ultimatums, to the presidents and deans. In wide use is the Honor System, which makes the professor leave the room during an examination because he is not to be trusted.

Along with these improvements in education has come a subtle change in the American alumnus. No longer interested only in the record of his college's football team, he is likely to appear at his class reunion full of such penetrating questions as "Why is the tuition higher than it was in 1934?" "Is it true that 85% of the members of the faculty are Communists?" and "How can I get my son (or daughter) in?"

Alumni magazines have kept pace with such advancements. The writing has improved, thanks to schools of journalism, until there is excitement and suspense even in the obituary column. Expression has reached such a high point of originality that a request for funds may appear, at first reading, to be a gift offer.

However, if pictorial content continues to increase, it will not be necessary for alumni to know how to read.

This cannot come too soon.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Richard Armour is the author of 22 books of humor and satire, including the recent Golf is a Four-Letter Word. In addition to his books he has written more than 5,000 pieces of light verse and prose for magazines in the United States and Great Britain. He is, as well, professor of English and dean of the faculty at Scripps College in Claremont, California.

Commissioned last spring while Professor Armour was on leave in Japan, "A Short History of Education" is, according to the author, "probably the first piece of the sort written in an unheated Zan Buddhist temple" while the writer was clad "in long underwear, heaviest suit, overcoat, sweater, and goose pimples." Since he had no access to any but Japanese books, he reports the history "had to come out of my head, which is what I am most of the time, anyhow."

Readers who like his approach to the history of education will also enjoy It All Started with Eve, It All Started with Columbus, It All Started with Europa, It All Started with Marx, Twisted Tales from Shakespeare, and The Classics Reclassified.

Professor Armour has a Ph. D. from Harvard. He has taught not only at Scripps College, where he has been on the faculty since 1945, but also at the University of Texas, Northwestern University, Wells College, University of Freiburg, and University of Hawaii.

ABOUT THE SKETCHES

We are indebted to student Dale Bunse, a Junior from Salem, for the line drawings which illustrate Mr. Armour's article.

Many alumni will remember this talented young artist's brother, Donald Bunse, class of 1956.

A view of the center of the Willamette University campus following Hurricane Frieda.

A scene of the capital tree damage described by the Governor as looking as though "a bomb had exploded."

Students were still cleaning up two weeks after Hurricane Frieda struck the Willamette University campus inflicting about $8,000 damage to the grounds and buildings. Some classes were dismissed Oct. 26, a fortnight after the storm, so that students could aid in the cleaning up operation.

All told, it is estimated that the wind storm caused $6,000 damage to the buildings and grounds and that $1,500 to $2,000 will be required to clean up the debris.

A number of fine old trees were lost on the campus while others were extensively damaged. They were not insured.

Damage was also inflicted to several buildings including roof damage to the gym and music building; chimney damage to Lausanne and Waller Hall; glass damage to the library; and damage to two buildings in Oak Villa Courts and the University garage caused by falling trees. The tower on the Fine Arts Building was also blown over by the storm.

Students rose to the cause shortly after the storm subsided, and by Saturday afternoon, much of the debris had been cleared away from the sidewalks and the streets around the University. October 26, students were excused from classes to complete the cleanup.

University officials do not plan to replant shrubs or trees until a study can be completed to synchronize the replanting with the building program. In the meanwhile, landscape architects are studying the problem and also designating certain damaged trees for removal.

Willamette student and star athlete Jim Booth studies the blown-over statue of Circuit Rider Robert Booth, his great-great grandfather.

Students aided in the clean-up of the Willamette campus.

COMPOSER HONORED

ESTHER COX TODD

Esther Cox Todd, '18, Portland musician, was honored August 22 at the national Phi Beta convention by having her work "Western Sketches" performed in celebration of the group's 50th year. She also wrote the suite as well as the score for a musical reading called "En Rapport" which was given.

Mrs. Todd, who has multiple sclerosis and has been confined to a wheel chair for 14 years, was unable to attend the conclave of the national professional fraternity of music and speech, Phi Beta.

Two generations of piano pupils have come to Mrs. Todd. A practical person, she has taught them to play the piano well for their own great personal enjoyment.

Years ago the gracious old colonial home (on the corner of N.E. Tillamook and 19th Street in Portland) was constantly teeming with people. There were four pianos (there still are two), a creative kindergarten going on in all rooms and a full blown wood-working shop buzzing away in the basement.

After her illness, much of this had to be curtailed, but she now found the time and peace for composing and writing, although she still has a large class of piano students.

She has written some 17 symphonic suites and countless teaching pieces, little ballets, operettas, etc. She orchestrates her own music, which is a difficult task.

Portland music circles were not surprised at the honor bestowed upon Mrs. Todd by having her music played at the convention. The first chair musicians of the Portland Symphony have used many of her small scores for their chamber music sessions.

She has never found time to feel sorry for herself. Instead, her "make the best of it" attitude, has made her handicap work for her, not against her.

TWO ALUMS PLAYED KEY ROLE IN DEVELOPMENT OF TELSTAR

Two Willamette University students helped launch Telstar, the first communications satellite from Cape Canaveral, Florida, last summer.

Daryl M. Chapin, '27, and Gerald L. Pearson, '26, played a principle part in inventing the solar batteries which supply power continuously to the miraculous "Ear of the Sky."

Some 3,600 solar cells on the skin of the satellite — coated with sapphires to protect them from space dust — are supplying power to 19 rechargeable nickel-cadmium batteries.

Dr. Chapin is with the Bell Telephone Laboratories in Basking Ridge, N. J., and Dr. Pearson is head of the Electronics Laboratory at Stanford University.

DR. FARNES WITH MEDICAL TEAM

Dr. Patricia Farnes, '53, left in September for Algeria to help that battle-scarred country re-establish its basic medical services.

She is a member of the Rhode Island Hospital Medical Team of 14 persons. She is internist for the group. The Rhode Island team is the fourth U. S. contingent to participate in the restoration of medical service at the 1200-bed Beni Messous Hospitals in Algiers, under the direction of Medico, the medical section of CARE, at the request of the Algerian government. The Red Cross has recruited nurses and

NATIONAL CHAIRMAN

Edwin E. Cone, '41, has accepted position of National Chairman for the 1962-63 Loyalty Fund Drive. Mr. Cone, Lane County lumberman, is currently serving his second term as Mayor of Eugene. He was elected to the Willamette Board of Trustees in 1955. His wife is the former June Woldt, '42. They have four children.

tons of drugs and equipment have been flown to Algeria by CARE.

The emergency arose when large numbers of medical personnel fled Algiers during the recent fighting.

Dr. Farnes attended the University of Oregon Medical School and did research work at Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago.

WILLAMETTE LAW ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OFFICERS

The annual law alumni banquet was held for the first time during Homecoming. Over 150 alumni and guests attended the dinner held at Illahe Hills Country Club.

New officers elected for a two-year term as pictured, left to right: Loren D. Hicks, '49, Secretary-Treasurer; Dean Seward P. Reese, Dean of the College of Law; Richard D. Lee, '56, Vice-President, and Rupert E. Park, '47, President.

Dr. J. H. Garnjobst, Salem, Oregon, retired in September after 51 years spent in the practice of medicine. Dr. Garnjobst did his first X-ray work in 1914. Two years later he did his first X-ray treatment of cancer. Cancer treatment then became his specialization. In 1923 Dr. Garnjobst had begun use of radium, one of the first physicians in the state to use the relatively new treatment. He has probably seen more cancers than any doctor in the state—he is a man who has seen and shared in the advance of the fight against cancer. Treatment of cancer has come a long way in his lifetime, and Dr. Garnjobst says he is optimistic for the future. A widower only this year, he plans to take some extended auto trips around the country, and review some areas he has seen only briefly.

Deaths

SPECIAL NOTICE

Just as we went to press with this issue of The Alumnus, word was received from Mr. Burton W. Preston, '39, that Professor Cameron Marshall, Dean of the College of Music, Willamette University, 1930-38, passed away in Kansas City, Missouri, Saturday, November 3, 1962.

Word has been received of the death of Dr. Paul Irvine, Class of '15, in Auburn, Alabama, August 4, 1962.

Dr. Irvine will be remembered by many Willamette graduates as the composer of the traditional commencement song, "Farewell Willamette," and for his many other campus activities. However, his notable work in education has been accomplished far from his home campus.

He joined the English Department of Auburn University in 1928 upon receiving his doctorate from Columbia, preceded by several years in secondary education. Last spring he retired as head of the Education Interpretation Service, a department of Auburn University which he organized in 1948 for the purpose of interpreting research findings to the general public. His original work in readable English and effective communication earned national acclaim and many honors and he was frequently retained as a consultant in this field by the state and federal governments. His published works in education, public health and alcohol education have had international circulation.

Dr. Irvine's activities were not confined within the limits of his professional career. As chairman of the Auburn City Planning Commission he was given much credit by his fellow citizens for Auburn's reputation as "the loveliest village." He served with the TB Association and on both county and state levels with the Alabama Society for Crippled Children, and still found time in his busy life to direct his church choir.

In July he was presented a special award by the Alabama Society for Crippled Children and Adults for his "... years of untiring, productive, and selfless service to crippled." He also had recently been presented with the John L. Sanders Community Action Award for 1962 for "outstanding work in stimulating understanding of the problems of alcoholism in the schools and communities of Alabama."

The fine influence of his life is reflected in the stature of his family. His son, Dr. Paul, Jr., is Director of Guidance for the State of Pennsylvania. Dr. Donald is Admissions Officer at the University of Georgia, and David is finishing his doctorate in education at the University of North Carolina. His daughter, Ann Irvine Sowell, holds a master's degree in religious education and is working in this field in Atlanta. His wife, the former Gladys Kenney of Virginia and New York City, survives him.

Alabama newspapers were generous in their praise. One remarked editorially, "He did all of these things without making much fuss about it. . . . Paul Irvine was a modest man who dedicated much of his time and considerable talents to serving the human and spiritual needs of his town."

Rev. Carl E. Blackler, '32, died August 23, in Tokyo, Japan. He had been a missionary in Tokyo since 1950. Survivors include his wife, Jewell, and his two children, Michael A. and Jean Anne, who reside at 299 E. Hereford, Gladstone, Ore.

Mr. Benson, 83, retired in 1953 as Oregon Supreme Court Clerk after nearly 52 years' service and for the next six years was clerk for the State Board of Bar Examiners. During his long clerkship, Mr. Benson put his signature on every certificate granted to new lawyers admitted to practice in Oregon; for many years it was his telegram that informed applicants if they had passed the state bar examinations. He was honored twice by the State Bar—once on his retirement in 1953; earlier in 1949 he had received an award for his faithful service to the bar. He is survived by his wife, Harriett, at 815 D St. N.E.

VISITS KOREA

Mary Sue was the only occidental student in the work group which included three co-op members, 42 campers, the latter mostly university students. There were two campers from Okinawa, one from Hong Kong and the remainder were Koreans. All were volunteers.

"Seeing life there—how much the campers were concerned for others—made me more sure of my purpose in life than ever," Mary Sue says. While she has majored in church music thus far in college, she now indicates that since her experience in Korea she has become more interested in social development and assistance in areas with low standards of living. She may devote her efforts in this field when she graduates from college, she says.
