Willamette Woman Reigns as Round-Up Queen; WU Law Grads Top Oregon State Bar Average

An average of 87½ per cent of Willamette university law graduates passed the 1952 Oregon bar examinations, according to figures released recently by the State Supreme Court. The state average was 68 per cent.

This is the third year that Willamette has exceeded the state average, said Dean Seward P. Reese of the University law school. Twenty-one of 24 Willamette applicants passed, comparing with 95 per cent in 1951.

The group passing the state bar included:

Charles Lester Cloudy, Thomas Cornelius Enright, Jack Patrick Farrell Jr., Artis Wilbur Goakey, Carletta Jacquelyn Hendricks, Ervin Bodily Hogan, Albert Roderick McMullen Jr., Donald Francis Marshall, Robert Lauren Miller, James Borden Minturn, Eddie Nordyke, Harold Wellesley Pierce, Glenn Delaney Ramirez and David Carlisle Swart, all of Salem.

Roland Vilas Brown, Bertrand James Close, Robert Paul Jones and Robert Lee Olson, all of Portland. Vervyle Grant Mumpower, Clackamas; Warren Harry Albright, Corvallis; Martin John Hoffman, Redmond.

New Faculty Members Added To Willamette Teaching Staff

Several additions have been made to the Willamette university staff, with two full-time faculty members, six part-time instructors, two AROTC officers, and a new chief accountant obtained for the coming year.

The full-time professor is Thomas Russell Bennett who replaces Dr. Edward Kollmann as associate professor of philosophy and as head of the department of philosophy.

Part-time instructors hired by the University are Mrs. Margaret Oettinger who will teach Latin and Spanish; Mrs. Ursula Wilson who will assist in the library in addition to teaching German; Rev. Richard C. Wedel, instructing part-time in the religion department; and three new instructors hired to teach in the sociology department, Frank Washburn, Virgil O'Malley and Donald Miller.

Dr. Bennett, besides heading the philosophy department, will also offer one course in the religion department, "religion and life."

He received his A.B. degree from West Virginia university and earned his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago where he had a fellowship in religion from 1947-'50.

Studied in London

During the summer of 1948 Dr. Bennett studied at the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London on a University of Chicago scholarship for European study. There he studied under the world renowned British historian, Arnold J. Toynbee.

Mrs. Wilson graduated from Willamette in 1951 and has been assisting in the library for the past two years. Sociology instructor Frank Washburn, better known as "Scotty," graduated from this University in 1950 and

The Last Word . . .

Now that you, the freshman class, has been properly orientated to Willamette university, I feel it is imperative for you to absorb the following helpful hints not included, for obvious reasons, in the formal orientation program:

(1) If you want to be one of the gang get rid of your new clothes — YOU ARE CONSPICUOUS. Trade them in for a pair of dirty suntans or orange pedal-pushers. Then even total strangers will say, "There goes a Willamette student!"

(2) Learn this lesson well. Please, if your Prof. ever lets you out early go down the stairs quietly, or you'll wake the rest of the students.

(3) Lastly, never get discouraged. College is hard to step into as we all know. But we are glad to have you here, you're a fine looking class, and we're pulling for you all of the time.

Rollin Cocking.

Leah Conner, a Willamette university coed and former princess of Chief Joseph Days, is reigning as queen of the world famous Pendleton Round-Up now taking place in Pendleton, Oregon.

Miss Conner, now a sophomore at the University, is a direct descendant of the Pacific Northwest's famed Indian warrior, Chief Joseph. She is a graduate of Pendleton high school and has a reputation as a talented horse-woman in round-up races.

Wide attention has been given to the trim Indian girl during the summer as she prepared for her rule over the "world's greatest round-up." Queen Leah appeared at various functions in the state prior to the round-up.

The name of Conner is a familiar one on the Willamette campus, not only since Miss Conner's recent fame, but because Cece Conner, a brother, starred for four years on Willamette tennis teams.

Men Overseas To Hear Glee

Willamette's 44th Freshman Glee will be featured on a world-wide broadcast next Thursday over the Armed Forces radio program, "Way Back Home."

The transcription of last year's Glee competition, made available by KOCO in a nation-wide broadcast over the Liberty Broadcasting System last year, will be heard by service men in Europe, the South Pacific, Hawaii and other nations reached by the AFRS.

Featured on the half-hour radio show are happenings from cities and towns throughout the nation, and Thursday's broadcast will also include material from Atlanta, Ga., and Indianapolis, Ind. The broadcast can be heard in Salem only on short wave radio.

Freshmen Win Scholarships

Forty-six members of the class of 1956 have earned scholarships to Willamette on the basis of their high school records.

Dan Dearborn of Ontario will attend Willamette on a $500 award by Consolidated Freightways. John Bone of Salem is a recipient of a Rotary scholarship to the University.

The Max D. Tucker Scholarship Foundation of Oregon has awarded a $1,000 scholarship to Alma Felton of Portland. Seven $200 scholarships to Willamette were awarded by the Elk Lumber Company of Medford to Margaret Huson, Carla McKeen, Marilyn Russell, Carolyn Shangle, Evelyn Stafford and Renae Seger, all of Medford, and Charles Russell Peter of Ashland.

AROTC Unit Offers Men Chaplain Plan

Willamette men who would like a career as a chaplain in the Air Force may enroll in Willamette's newly-inaugurated AROTC chaplain career program, the Air Force announced this week.

According to Maj. Norman W. Champion, professor of air science and tactics at Willamette, a student interested in the program enters ROTC as any other cadet. He indicates his intent to continue in the AROTC chaplain program for four years.

If accepted for the four-year AROTC program, he will be kept from active duty until he completes his theological training. Upon acceptance by the Air Force, he will then enter the chaplain service as a first lieutenant. The amount of active duty he would be required to serve was not known.

While in the AROTC unit on campus he will receive the same training as any other cadet. It was not known if he would be required to take any military science in theological school.

The reason for the program, said Champion, is a lack of chaplains in the Air Force.

Ph.D. Earned By Ringnalda

Murco Ringnalda, head of the journalism department at Willamette, received a doctorate in philosophy from the University of Southern California during the past summer.

Dr. Ringnalda has been a professor of journalism at Willamette for the past 10 years, and was assistant professor of English two years previous to that. He has been working on his Ph.D. for several years, but it was only until the past summer that he was able to get his committee together for completion of his degree.

The subject of Dr. Ringnalda's thesis was "Logical Foundations of Language and Communication." Some of the material for the thesis had to be secured in foreign countries as not all of it was available in the United States.

Graduating from UCLA with an AB degree, Ringnalda received his MA degree from USC, later doing graduate work at the University of California.

Size Unknown; Prospect Good

A freshman class as large or larger than any Willamette has had in recent years will finish orientation preliminaries today and enroll in the University tomorrow.

Pre-enrollment figures were not released by the president's office since no exact count of the new class can be made before registration. But according to lists prepared for faculty advisors, 421 new students—transfers and freshmen—are going through the orientation program in preparation for registration. This includes 256 men and 165 women and is an unofficial count.

According to a record of incoming freshmen prepared for the Greek letter organizations by the office of the director of admissions, 329 students had been accepted by the University as of September 1.

Either of these figures meant that Willamette may have one of the biggest freshman classes in late post-war years.

At about the same time last year 312 freshmen had taken the University's general classification tests. No comparable figures were released this year.

President G. Herbert Smith said nothing was known about prospects for the returning classes, but he believed that Willamette's total enrollment would at least equal that of last fall—1035. The College of Law enrollment prospects were not released at this time.

Our Welcome, Freshmen

Freshmen, you will hear words of advice from parents and professors throughout your college career; but please allow us to offer our sage words of guidance that come only to those who can no longer use them.

Only when you become a senior do you realize that college years are the best of your life. Now we wish we had studied more or had more fun or taken on more activities and more responsibilities. And now we see that getting an education does not mean turning hermit nor that raising a little hell leaves no time for book learning.

A good many of us did not know this until recently, but you do because we just told you. Freshmen, college is the greatest opportunity in your life, and your best training (if used right) for life. It is the best arrangement in the world for getting an education while you have fun; for learning responsibility where errors count for little. But college does not last long, and when it is gone nothing is going to erase the responsibilities of this world and bring you back for a second chance.

We will let others tell you that it is your "solemn duty" to study. We will let others tell you that every soldier, and the parent of every soldier, in Korea is watching you and wondering if the college man is worth saving.

We will be happy if you learn only one thing from us: "If all the gold you would ever receive should be given you today, how much would you take?" Substitute education — all-around education — and you see what we are driving at. —DS

No Excuses, Stan

Although this is the second issue to be put out by the new staff, this is the editor's first appearance in the Collegian office for eight months.

While News Editor Stan Nelson and his staff worked long into the night on their first issue last June, the editor was loafing lazily in Washington D. C. trying to hold down a job and still finish the Washington Semester.

But if he had had the time to submit an editorial he would have told how much he missed the Collegian, Glee, May Day, Willamette, its traditions and especially its faculty and student body. He would have explained that with all its faults Willamette is not such a bad place after all — even after a fling at the gay life of the big city.

Please accept my contribution, Stan. — one issue and three months late. —D.S.

If You Love the Arts... WU Has Something for You!

Willamette university will, throughout the coming school year, offer to its students, faculty and the Salem community an outstanding number of educational and entertainment attractions.

CONCERT SERIES

Going into its second year is the Willamette university Distinguished Artists concert series which last year brought four distinguished concert artists to Salem and offers again this year four great concert artists. The series presented last year Brazilian soprano Bidu Sayao, violinist Yehudi Menuhin, British pianist Solomon, and baritone William Warfield and gained for itself an outstanding national reputation in the concert field for its initiative and the quality of its artists. It is the objective of the concert series, which is student managed, to bring to Salem great concert artists at the lowest possible prices to students. The series is non-profit and is managed this year by Phil Ringle.

Presented this year under the auspices of the Distinguished Artists Series will be tenor Jan Peerce; the Ana Maria Spanish ballet, featuring authentic Spanish Flamenco music and dances; violinist Joseph Szigeti and contralto Marian Anderson. Student tickets are obtainable at the price of $4.80 for the four concerts and seats are reserved for the convenience of those who wish to attend.

DRAMA

Three major dramatic productions will be produced this year by the university drama department and any student may participate in these productions regardless of previous training or experience. Tryouts are announced well in advance of the beginning of rehearsals and those students who participate in play production in any capacity are eligible for membership in the Willamette University Players. The drama department will also present several one-act plays during the course of the year in addition to its regular radio programs. These, too, are open for the participation of the entire student body.

FACULTY RECITALS

The Willamette university College of Music annually presents members of its faculty in concert. The recitals are free and open to the public as well as faculty members and townsfolk. Heard in recital this year will be pianist Ralph Dobbs, who will also appear in concert with the Portland symphony orchestra as piano soloist for one of its regular concerts here in Salem. Other faculty members who annually appear in recital are Clorinda Topping, soprano, and the Willamette Trio, including Dr. Willis Gates, violinist, Ethel Lou Stanek, cellist, and Stanley Butler, pianist.

THE "MESSIAH"

Handel's great oratorio "The Messiah" is annually presented by the Salem Oratorical society which is comprised of the Willamette university choir and choirs from throughout the city, assisted by the Willamette orchestra under the direction of Dr. Gates, with Stanley Butler, pianist, and Josef Schnelker, organist. The entire oratorio is under the direction of Dean Melvin Geist, dean of the College of Music and director of the Willamette choir. The choir will also make its annual spring tour during spring vacation. The choir last year toured throughout Northern California and visited San Francisco. Choir tryouts are held during the first of the fall semester and are open to any member of the Willamette student body.

THE BAND

The Willamette university band, under the direction of Maurice Brennen, is very active and in addition to playing at games, gives several concerts during the year. The band also has an annual tour during the spring semester and last year filled many dates throughout Southern Oregon.

LECTURES

Lectures are given by members of the faculty during the course of the year which are open to students, faculty and the Salem community. Last year's schedule included lectures on modern music, philosophy and psychology. Prominent speakers are also engaged by the university for the regularly scheduled chapel periods on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

FOREIGN FILMS

Several foreign films will be presented during the course of the year sponsored by the campus UNESCO organization. These are shown in Waller hall on the campus on Friday nights at a nominal price and include some of the finest foreign films available. They are shown with captions in English, thereby presenting no barrier for those who do not speak the particular language. Last year's series included films from France, Germany, Russia, Italy, Sweden, and England and were well attended by students, faculty and Salem townsfolk.

SENIOR RECITALS

During the close of the year senior recitals will be given by graduating music students fulfill the qualifications for the bachelor of music degree. Scheduled also nearly twice monthly are student recitals held in the recital hall of the school of music where students participating in applied music appear under formal conditions. The series is geared to acquaint listeners with the best music and to allow music students to make public appearances. This series, too, is open to the public as well as to interested students and faculty.

Students new to the Willamette community will find that the University offers a full schedule of music and dramatic and educational events for their attendance or participation. It is hoped that each student will find some activity in which to participate or support by his attendance. Extracurricular activities such as these listed constitute an integral part of the liberal arts curriculum which Willamette university offers you.

The Grab Bag

Dear Reader,

Welcome to Willamette! You are now reading what is often loosely referred to as the Feature Page. Perhaps more than any other page in the Collegian, of which we are justly proud, this is your page because it not only invites your readership but also your contributions.

The Collegian is the official organ of the Willamette university student body. It reports, as fully as possible, the various happenings of the campus and those who participate in them.

Certain happenings fall logically into various portions of the paper. If you get pinned, engaged, or married you may find yourself on the society page. If you participate in athletics your activities will be reported on the sports pages. If you do practically anything else (and we hope you will) it will be duly reported in the remainder of the paper. This leaves the feature page.

The feature page is always open to you and for you. Space is provided for letters to the editor in which you may vent, hold sway, or just wax (enthusiastic) at any time. The bulk of the page is also open for your contributions if you like to write. We may even print your diary if it is interesting enough.

Feature material may be anything which will hold the interest of the reader. We can always use a little humor but we like to keep it clean and also amusing, if you know what I mean. You might say that the feature page contains selected short subjects such as are seen at the movies.

If you would like to contribute selected short subjects to your Collegian, you may be certain that they will be given careful attention. Please limit your contributions to not more than three-hundred words. We do not ordinarily print poetry but an outlet for this may be found in the UNESCO bi-annual publication, Endeavor.

Contributions may be submitted to Collegian Feature Editor in the Collegian office in the basement of Waller hall (across from the bookstore). They must include your name the way you want it used in your byline if your contribution is accepted, your school address and phone number. Contributions for the week's paper on Friday will be accepted not later than Monday of that week for the convenience of make-up and editing.

We want to make the feature page more than ever your page and we invite your contributions, suggestions or what have you. Drop us a feature or just drop in and see us. The mural on the wall is worth seeing too.

Sincerely,
Darrel deChaby,
Feature Editor

Student Body Roundtable

New President's Lonely

Once again summer has passed and we can savor another quiet and peaceful year at Willamette.

While I was bumming around this summer your more capable officers were hard at work. Big Jim Hitchman, your first vice president, went out of his head and actually had erected a bulletin board of no small size near the student body office. This board will house the social calendar for the coming four months. Also dates and times for all student body meetings and functions will be posted. Good work Jim.

Your student body office sports a new paint job... thanks to the efforts of Mary Ellen Snyder, that cute, hard working secretary you elected. Come down to the basement of Waller hall, see the bulletin board, our new paint job and our office help.

In a week or two I hope to have a desk at the office and I will then hold office hours so I can talk with anyone who has a problem, a plan, or a cute cousin.

We've been telling the new students how friendly Willamette is so let's make an effort to meet and help them.

More later on the office hours but please drop in anytime, it's your corner of the basement of Waller hall you know.

Sincerely,
Rollin Cocking

D. S. From W. U.

By Don Scarborough

Willamette University (Special)—This column is not to be a habit in the Collegian, but I could not quit now without telling the juniors and underclassmen that they would be missing out on one of their greatest opportunities if they ignored Willamette's Washington Semester.

So I promise to drop the D. C. and the W. U. with this column.

Freshmen have been told that the Washington Semester is an academic program in which several juniors in social science fields spend one semester in the nation's capital. And certainly it is an outstanding opportunity to increase one's knowledge of the inside of a book. Both Bob Ulrich and I had our share of formal book-learning.

But you certainly cannot learn about Washington, our government and people entirely from books. Rubbing elbows with senators and government officials certainly has its advantages over the eye-strain I used to get reading about government in Ogg and Ray or Time magazine.

Let me recommend a few days in the gallery of the senate or in a committee hearing over a semester in American government.

Washington has a social life that can hardly be matched. Art galleries, concerts, receptions and anything else you might imagine are waiting to give you a good look at a different kind of life. (Let me add, however, that I am eight months behind in my sleep and glad to be home.)

The Washington Semester offers other opportunities — side trips to New York, Mt. Vernon, Civil and Revolutionary War battle grounds, in addition to unusual summer jobs. Government agencies and departments are very willing to hire summer clerk-typists; while several members of our group worked for congressmen.

This is a purposely restrained and greatly abbreviated account of eight months in Washington; but I hope you will believe me when I say simply: Don't miss it. If you have any questions don't hesitate to ask me or Bob Ulrich. We will be glad to relieve for you the Washington Semester.

Miller, a journalism major, is a junior at the University of Oregon and Miss Bennett, majoring in primary education, is a junior.
