October 7, 1981

Dear Alumni,

8 October 1981

There are no words that could possibly express my appreciation and gratitude for the scholarship that I have received. I am honored that you felt I was worthy of your award.

You have given me the opportunity for a higher education at a very reputable school, which without your help might not have been possible. For this,
I thank you.

The Dessert Reception was well organized and I enjoyed meeting some of the Alumni along with my fellow scholars.
In recognizing us, you have also recognized yourselves as willing to help the young people of our future. I look forward to meeting you again.

Sincerely,
Kathy Stinson

To the Alumni,
I would like to thank you for the me as an Alumni & your generosity in line up to the Scholarship Program.
Your gift me to continue for that I

INSIDE THE SCENE

ON THE COVER: Willamette University's Alumni Scholars program bloomed to double its previous total for the coming year. This year 72 students will benefit from the program. The students didn't hesitate to show their appreciation in the form of many letters. The cover letter is just one example of several received by the Alumni Office. Some of the 72 students gathered for a portrait earlier this year and they are pictured below on the stairway of the Putnam University Center. A complete list of all 72 scholarship students is included below the picture.

*1981: Japan Off Campus Study Program

NO ORDINARY YEAR

Seven difficult months for Willamette

Five trees still stand to symbolize a turbulent time in Willamette's history as the university struggled through the early months of World War II.

By Wright Cowger

The attack on Pearl Harbor upset everything. In the hysteria that followed the U.S. entry into the war, there was little that remained the same. Thank goodness the five trees grew. They stand there now by the corner of Collins Hall as reminders of an unusual time in the life of the University.

That academic year of 1941-1942 was certainly no ordinary time at Willamette. The seven months from December to June proved to be the most difficult period since the decade of the nineties. Along with the rest of the world, the Willamette community seemed to be coming apart at the seams.

As was the case everywhere on the West Coast, the Salem area shook with a paroxysm of fear and with very short notice sent its citizens and non-citizens of Japanese ancestry off to internment. The military draft was instituted and dozens of Bearcat men students either enlisted or were called. Willamette had a new president, an outstanding scholar but an inexperienced administrator, and the university was in no way prepared for the shocks it was to experience beginning that day in December. Strangely, the first trouble occurred not on campus but on Oahu itself.

Perhaps the most surprised people on that day of infamy, December 7, 1941, were coach Spec Keene and the Willamette football team who were on the islands to play the University of Hawaii's Rainbows. They lost the game on Saturday, the sixth. Bombs fell on Sunday, and the scheduled passage home went to a higher priority. The campus was numbed first by news of the attack and second by no news of the Bearcats and their supporters for agonizing days.

The team and a few associated fans helped out where they could for the next two and a half weeks. Some did guard duty, others helped in hospitals. With only a very short notice, the Willamette group was told to board the President Coolidge for the trip home. On board were 1,200 passengers, including 125 wounded. The Coolidge sailed under the Golden Gate on Christmas day, and on December 27 the group was welcomed back to a thankful campus.

The centennial convocation held February 2, 1942, in Waller Hall, was also the official inauguration of President Knopf. Carl Sumner Knopf came to Willamette from the University of Southern California, where he was Dean of the School of Religion, Chaplain, and Professor of Biblical Literature and Archaeology. His credentials as a scholar were impressive. No one could guess that within a short three months after the Waller ceremony, the new president would be the center of the second event to shake the campus.

On April 27, President Knopf appeared before his draft board at the Salem Armory in order to complete the required selective service registration. The Statesman of May 7 carried an article headlined: "Legion Seeks Statement on Knopf Action." In a letter to the Willamette trustees, a special committee of Post No. 9, American Legion, charged that Dr. Knopf had "refused to sign his registration card unless he was permitted to write the words 'conscientious objector' on the margin." The committee declared that Dr. Knopf created a disturbance and signed only when threatened with police arrest. The Legion's letter continued: "Believing that the public is entitled to know the attitude of President Knopf on the question of military combatant and non-combatant service . . . Post No. 9 would welcome a statement from him on that subject."

That evening a student circulated a petition which carried 110 signatures and read: "We the undersigned students of Willamette University, while we do not condemn conscientious objectors, are not ourselves conscientious objectors, and we support the war effort of the United States of America to its fullest extent."

In a Collegian editorial the next day, the editor enumerated the record to "show that Willamette has been supporting the war effort to a greater degree than many other colleges" with 100 young men in the armed services. He observed that "the danger of Willamette's becoming labeled a 'C.O. school' must be faced."

President Knopf made only one public statement: "I am sorry that the committee did not come to me first so they could have gotten their facts straight. Until the board of trustees have had a chance to act, I think it is better for me not to make an issue of it. I do that in fairness to the trustees."

On May 9, a special committee of five trustees was designated to inquire into the circumstances surrounding Dr. Knopf's registration. Their investigation was thorough, and their report to the trustees on May 28, 1942, Five California Sequoia trees planted by Dr. Knopf in 1942 are now between four and five feet in diameter at the base and 50-feet tall. They are located near the northeast corner of Collins Hall.

was made public. In it they declared there was no basis for the charges of a disturbance and that the Legion committee had "acted hastily (with) charges inaccurate in important particulars." But the committee also observed that Dr. Knopf "has by his conduct in this matter exposed himself, the university, and all of its constituency to a grievous misunderstanding." The report elaborated the committee's arguments in support of that opinion.

The matter was brought to a vote. The trustees made what is certainly one of the most difficult decisions, under the most trying circumstances, ever faced by that body. They voted to accept Dr. Knopf's resignation. There is evidence that the trustees were aware of matters concerning the president which were unrelated to the registration issue.

Reactions came from several sources, three worth noting. An editorial in the Christian Century blamed the journalistic world. Under the headline "Shall the Press Cow the Church Colleges?" the observation was made that a "journalistic lynching has now occurred." The Christian Advocate decried the "hysteria of the moment" saying that although "the board of trustees were entirely within their rights in accepting the resignation . . . if differences existed between the trustees and the . . . president, they should have been settled at a time and under conditions that would not have exposed the board to the charge of having acted under duress."

Finally, the Oregon Statesman observed: "It was apparent that in the controversy involving President Knopf and the American Legion post of Salem, there was some right and some wrong on each side." The editorial supported the board's decision: "Down through the years, this board has been called upon frequently to make difficult decisions. Through the consultation of many well-balanced minds, most of these decisions have been correct and sound."

There the matter rested. President Knopf carried through with his plan to plant five California Sequoia trees on campus during commencement weekend. A senior art student made and fired ceramic tablets inscribed with symbols of the past and future, descriptions of Willamette's first century and quotations from the Bible and Shakespeare. The tablets were buried under the trees.

The third event which shocked the campus were the deaths in quick succession of three Willamette persons. In May, Mrs. James T. Matthews died. Just fifteen days later, Professor James Matthews followed his wife in death. By all accounts, James Matthews was the most beloved and respected teacher at Willamette, having spent 49 years in the classroom and in campus life. His passing was a great sorrow to all.

Then in that same month, June 22, 1942, President Carl Sumner Knopf succumbed, despondent over his resignation. This brought to a close seven months of extraordinary happenings at Willamette.

ANNUAL REPORT

A year of tradition and change at WU

Nearly 140 years of history, tradition and excellence reflected from Willamette's boundaries in 1980-81, a year especially symbolic of the high quality for which Willamette stands.

Indeed, the success of the year enhanced the long-term strength and stability of the financial and academic health of the university.

On September 2, 1981, the E. S. Collins Science Center reopened its laboratories, classrooms, research facilities and offices to Willamette students and faculty. The fact that the Collins Science Center underwent a complete renovation at a cost of $4.1 million on time and within budget is just one of the most noticeable examples of a year of success.

The renovation expresses a commitment in itself, a commitment to upholding Willamette's tradition of academic excellence. The Collins exterior remains basically unchanged—staid, stately, dignified, a tribute to Willamette's past. The interior, however, is a commitment to the change necessary for a university of Willamette's stature. The modern facilities, literally among the finest in the country, allow us to continue to attract top-quality students and also foster a commitment to research.

Collins generated obvious excitement throughout the year as the campus followed the various stages of construction. But, it was by no means the crux of campus activity. The University's educational stability, as always, continued to revolve around the classroom. Willamette's main source of pride continues to be the interaction between its faculty and students. The give and take of learning, whether it be on the undergraduate level, at the College of Law or at the Geo. H. Atkinson Graduate School of Management, is what Willamette is really about.

A rededication to the liberal arts emphasized the interaction in 1980-81 as undergraduate faculty added courses to the curriculum, modified the content of many others, overwhelmingly endorsed the concepts, and took the formal steps to ratify the changes. It was all part of an enthusiastic surge into the 1980s, in anticipation of the new graduation requirements which became applicable to the 1981 entering freshman class.

The new requirements are stringent and designed to bring out the best in each student. Emphasis on mathematical and English language skills is mandated. A general education program is also included calling for study experiences grouped within five basic areas—humanities, natural sciences, literature, social sciences, and fine arts.

Campus activity stressed the liberal arts commitment throughout the year but activity is something Willamette has never lacked.

With more than 90 percent of Willamette's classes taught by full-time professors, their visibility and availability kept the campus a busy place. And there was more than the usual visible signs of faculty activity in scholarship, research and community service projects.

Scholarship and research are vital parts of the University which stimulates the entire campus community.

An example of the professional growth of the faculty was the United Nations work of Law Professor Farooq Hassan, whose presentation on "The Right To Be Different," was eventually translated into two languages by recommendation of the Assembly. The translation of what has been called, "a new human right," was followed by the publication of his latest book, The Concept of State, which was released in the spring of 1981.

National recognition of Willamette's outstanding faculty was also magnified by the presentation of a Fulbright grant to Dr. Stephen Archer, Professor of Economics and Finance at the Atkinson School. The grant, presented in April, will allow Archer to lecture in Italy on financial management. His was one of just 500 special grants awarded for university teaching and advanced research in more than 100 countries.

Closer to home, history repeated itself in a presentation to the 61st Oregon Legislative Assembly by Dr. Howard Runkel of the Willamette Speech Department. Dr. Runkel, who was introduced to the joint ceremonial by House Speaker Hardy Meyers, was asked to speak on, "The Uniqueness of Lincoln," in honor of the great President's birthday in February. It was the second address presented to the Legislature by Dr. Runkel commemorating Abraham Lincoln. He first addressed the joint session in 1957.

Original research, interpretative projects and writing efforts were all undertaken by Willamette faculty during the year and by the end of the academic year more than half of the full-time college faculty had been granted support for funded summer research activity.

Adding further to the prestige of the already notable faculty was the announcement of the appointment of two distinguished scholars to fill two new endowed chairs, in Public Administration and in Religious and Ethical Studies.

William A. Medina was appointed to the Elmer and Grace Goudy Chair in Public Administration at the Atkinson School. A former Assistant Secretary for Administration at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Dr. Medina was appointed in the late spring to the position he will assume in January of 1982. His appointment brings an air of excitement and another nationally recognized public administration professional to the Atkinson School faculty.

Filling the second endowed chair added further to the prestige of the faculty. Dr. Lane McGaughey will occupy the newly-established professorship in Religious and Ethical Studies funded by the friends and family of the late George Atkinson. Dr. McGaughey headed the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Montana prior to accepting his appointment to the Atkinson chair.

Another tradition was upheld in the continuing effort by the Willamette campus community to generate an awareness of the educational opportunities outside the classroom and through a Faculty-in-Residence series promoting informal educational dialogue among students and the faculty.

1980-81 offered something for almost everyone at Willamette. Some of the photographic highlights are included in the Annual Report. President Jerry E. Hudson (top) completed his first full year at Willamette, while many distinguished visitors were on campus, including Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg (above). Student activities brought plenty of interest to the university. The annual Freshman Glee celebration saw losers pay off their bets in typical fashion as sophomore Mark Cain displays (top right, page 5). Willamette's athletic teams were prominent again, finishing second in the John Lewis All-Sports competition in the Northwest Conference and featuring some outstanding individual efforts, like Mark Johnson's All-American honors in tennis (below left, page 5). Willamette's commencement ceremonies graduated over 400 students from the College of Liberal Arts, College of Law and the Atkinson Graduate School of Administration—now Management. Becky Banks was one of the honored seniors (top left, page 8). One of four retirees also honored at the graduation ceremonies was Martha Springer, who served at the university for more than 30 years (top right, page 8). Two administrative positions were filled as well. Joining the Willamette community were Brian Hardin as Vice President for Financial Affairs (below left, page 8) and Rosemary Hart as Vice President for Student Affairs (below right, page 8).

ANNUAL REPORT

Some 920 campus residents followed national trends in "getting back" to the college community. The residents enjoyed the advantages both educationally and socially, expressing a concern for their growth both intellectually and physically.

Students certainly had a voice in Willamette activities and were again the visible center of the University. Recognition locally and nationally spotlighted the commitment and talent of the student body.

Willamette's interest in encouraging students to pursue their interests was partly satisfied in an exploration expedition with famed undersea explorer Jean-Michel Cousteau. Sharon Cothran, a Willamette junior, was one of a select group joining in a diving expedition off Catalina Island as part of Project Ocean Search Pacific. A chemistry-biology major looking to a career in marine biology, her 10-day experience typified the Willamette students' involvement in merging educational opportunities with life experiences.

Two Willamette music students were honored for their talents in voice and piano, a tribute to both individual excellence and the Willamette program in general. Susan Wells was a first place winner in the adult division voice competition at the National Association of Teachers of Singing in May, while John Signor won the Oregon Music Teachers National Association Collegiate Piano Competition and represented the state in regional competition.

On an international level, Paul Mayer, a 1981 graduate, was appointed as an assistant in English at the Lycee Lakanal in Sceaux, France, the third Willamette student to be awarded an assistantship in recent years.

Student-athletes also kept Willamette in the national spotlight. Steve Koga won two national swimming championships, was named outstanding swimmer and led Willamette's four-man team to a sixth place finish at the NAIA National Championships. Willamette also produced two other All-Americans in Koga's swimming teammate Dawn Lien and tennis star Mark Johnson.

Graduate students followed the tradition of success. Atkinson students acted as actual consultants for local businesses through an entrepreneurship class. In addition, two teams of students earned cash awards from ARCO for offering solutions to a communications problem posed by ARCO Vice-President William Marcussen during his visit as an Executive-in-Residence. Nine Atkinson students shared in the honor.

Successful projects like those made Atkinson students very much in demand after graduation. School placement statistics revealed that 80 percent of the class of '81 were placed with a mean salary figure of $20,000 accompanying the new positions.

The College of Law had equally impressive statistics. Of those taking the Oregon State Bar exam, Willamette saw 83 percent of its graduates passing the exam. This was the highest amount of all law schools whose graduates took the Oregon bar.

During the year, Mock Trial Competition and on-campus Trial Advocacy programs put Willamette's students in practical legal situations with excellent results.

The Willamette Mock Trial teams swept through the Oregon and regional events, claiming the top two awards and competing in the national finals in Houston held last March.

National recognition for the College of Law also came from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, who awarded Willamette student, Jo Ann Greene, a first prize in the Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition. The annual award is designed to stimulate interest in the field of copyright law and is presented to leading essayists throughout the nation.

Actually, Willamette's educational stability had been confirmed even before the accomplishments of the faculty and student body had been recorded. The confirmation of the tradition of excellence and the dedication to continued and growing success was the report from the accreditation committee of the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. The report concluded that Willamette has very good academic programs with no significant agenda deficiencies.

The American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools granted continued accreditation for the College of Law.

Change was most evident at the head of the Willamette community where Dr. Jerry E. Hudson became the 20th president of the university at the opening of the 1980-81 academic year.

In less than half a year, the new president had Willamette in the midst of international educational relations, opening doors and solidifying established partnerships as part of his trip to the Far East, which included visits to Japan, Korea, and the People's Republic of China. Sponsored by the National Association of Schools and Colleges of the United Methodist Church, the trip explored the possibilities for educational cooperation among various higher educational institutions of nations rimming the Pacific.

On an even more personal note for Willamette were his visits during the tour to mainland China and Japan. Willamette was one of the first universities in the nation to enroll an undergraduate student from mainland China, making the president's stop take on even more significance. The visit to Japan enhanced Willamette's close relationship with its sister college, the International College of Commerce and Economics, which during 1980-81 continued our active student exchange program.

As the new president settled in, other administrative changes were taking place and Willamette saw a search for a new Vice President for Financial Affairs and a new Vice President for Student Affairs. Both positions attracted top candidates in their field and were filled by the start of the 1981 school year.

The Willamette community was also enhanced by the efforts and activities of our alumni. Graduates continued to be in important leadership positions around the country. This year saw Willamette's link to Washington, D.C. grow as Representative Denny Smith joined Senators Mark Hatfield and Robert Packwood in the nation's Capitol. The national spotlight also focused on Neil Hutchinson, who served as flight director for the space shuttle Columbia. Ann Rule was Willamette's contribution to the literary world with her best-selling book, "The Stranger Beside Me," a chilling account about convicted slayer Ted Bundy. Back on the political front, College of Law graduate Norma Paulus was re-elected as Oregon's Secretary of State in November, 1980.

And as always, Willamette alumni continued to be concerned and active in the future of the University. Contributions to the Alumni Annual Fund showed a strong increase over the previous year. For the second year in a row, these funds were committed to the Alumni Student Scholarship Program. Contributions in 1980-81 will support 72 deserving students in the coming year, a substantial increase over last year's level of 36 scholars.

The Alumni Annual Fund was just part of the successful fund-raising year. Total gifts received exceeded all but one other year in the history of the University. Voluntary gifts—Willamette's most important support category—were up by 64 percent, compared to the prior year. Voluntary gifts (all but government funds) remain a key factor in the overall financial stability of the University in the face of continued government resource reduction and inflation.

ANNUAL REPORT

Gift Highlights

- The gift total of $3,770,069 exceeded 1979-80 by $368,504; it represents the second highest year in University history (1968-69 was highest). Capital campaign funds accounted for $1,760,614 of the total.
- Voluntary giving of $2,812,737 was $1,105,400 more than in 1979-80—a 65 percent increase.
- Unrestricted annual gifts went up 11 percent to $361,329. Within this total, alumni giving increased 36 percent for the College of Liberal Arts. The Parents Fund more than doubled.
- Foundations, invariably the leading source of Willamette gift income, soared to $1,240,496—82 percent more than in the previous year.
- Six bequests totalled $149,665, about three times more than in 1979-80. Five other bequests, in probate at the end of the fiscal year, have estimated $225,000 in value.
- Gifts from business and industry through Oregon Independent College Foundation came to $139,719 compared to the previous $114,711.
- Other increases came from restricted annual funds, the Atkinson School Advancement Fund and the Cardinal Roundtable.
- Government income dropped significantly, from $1,694,228 to $957,332.
- Other decreases were from Trustee Annual Fund, Community Work Scholarship Fund, the church, and general unrestricted as well as for the Law Development Fund and the Friends of the Library, both restricted annual funds. The FORE Willamette golf tournament income was approximately the same as for the previous year.

ANNUAL REPORT

The strength of Willamette's recent enrollment figures have also been a positive force in the academic and financial picture of the university. In fact, in an era of projected declines in higher education enrollment, Willamette's future appears bright, based on the strong numbers of 1980-81 and the record enrollment for 1981-82.

Hard work to recruit quality students as well as to achieve support from private sources provides a positive outlook for Willamette's ability to maintain the quality academic programs and financial health that it currently enjoys.

The symbol of Willamette's stability for 1980-81 was the completion of the E. S. Collins Science Center. This renovation lends itself well to traditional goals and improved academic standards. It also provides the launching pad for the Capital Campaign for Willamette, an exciting $18 million project with a public phase lasting three years. The now completed Science Center was just the first step of the campaign which will renovate three more liberal arts buildings, include construction of a new library and make some substantial improvements in the campus landscape.

Capital construction costs will total more than $15 million and represent what Willamette projects will be its facility needs well into the twenty-first century. The Campaign will also add to the endowment so as not to erode its relative strength which, at approximately $36 million, is one of the strongest in the region.

The end result of the Campaign, which is expected to reach its $18 million goal by late 1984, is not only to enhance the quality of Willamette's academic program through providing outstanding learning opportunities, but also to help the university continue to attract high-quality students, both through scholarship assistance and quality academic programs.

There is sound basis for optimism reflected from 1980-81. Quality is what Willamette is all about and stability is its offspring. There are challenges on the horizon, but Willamette's tradition is to meet each one with a dedication to educational quality, a commitment to improvement, a respect for history and an overall stability that makes each hurdle a little easier to clear.

ALUMNI NEWS

Degree, citation nominations open

The Alumni Association as a whole is the body that spearheads the nomination of deserving individuals for Willamette University Honorary Degrees and Alumni Citations. It would serve us well to review the guidelines for each category, as January 11, 1982 is the deadline for delivery of these nominations to the Alumni Office.

Candidates for Honorary Degrees may be people of notable reputation in the academic/administrative education world or they may be people whose contribution to the general public welfare is outstanding in some area of public life, such as business, government, labor, the arts, religion, science or technology. While there is no obligation to grant any honorary degrees, the number awarded in any one year shall not normally exceed three. The choice should be someone who will feel honored by the University, and who has evident sympathy with the academic life and who fully supports the values for which it stands. Except in unusual circumstances, honorary degrees will not normally be conferred on active or retired faculty, administrators or members of the Board of Trustees.

Any alumnus or alumna of Willamette University is eligible to be considered for an Alumni Citation, except that:

- No one who has previously received an Honorary Degree from the University in recognition of the same or similar activities shall be considered;

- No one who is presently a member of the University Board of Trustees or Alumni Association Board of Directors or University faculty or administration shall be considered;

- No one will be considered for the 1982 award who graduated since 1972 because of the 10 year requirement.

To be considered, an individual must be nominated in writing, with a sufficient amount of biography, achievements, professional background, honors and publications listed to give the committee ample supporting data. Alumni Citations are awarded for distinguished service to one's profession and/or community; effort will be made to identify potential recipients in the Classes of 1932 and 1957.

The selection committee will remain anonymous throughout its deliberations and will recommend no more than five to receive this award. The recommendations will be submitted to the Alumni Board for approval on January 23rd and the approved names will be submitted to the University Board of Trustees at its winter meeting for final approval. The recipients will be notified of their selection by a letter from the President of the University. Alumni Citations will be presented to each individual jointly by the President of the University and the President of the Alumni Association at the Alumni Banquet on May 8, 1982.

Continuing Education program offers variety

The Alumni Continuing Education Committee is able to announce an interesting variety of educational adventures for 1982 and 1983. Alumni are encouraged to call 370-6356 for pre-registration details.

The always popular Ashland and environs Shakespearean Festival Trips will be offered in the Spring and Summer of 1982. Professor and Mrs. Braden will be offering an economy tour the week of March 19-21 and a more leisurely, luxurious tour the week of August 13-15. The Alumni Association has acquired a membership in the Festival, so premium seats and ideal accommodations can be arranged by mid-November. A $25.00 advance deposit will assure you a place on either of these trips.

Four days in May, after Alumni Day, Professor Carol Long and her husband will guide and encourage alumni through the joys of white water rafting on the Owyhee River in the wilderness areas of Eastern Oregon. Advance deposits can be accepted any time.

June 7 to 21, 1982 are the dates for the oft-heralded Professor Breakey Hawaii trip. The site will be Maui and lecture field excursions will be conducted by Donald Breakey (ecology and zoology), Susan Kephart (botany), Jim Kephart (astronomy) and Harry Rorman (geology). Cost will depend on the number of participating and could vary from $325.00 to $400.00 plus air fare. Early sign-ups are encouraged.

Some of you may want to begin planning for 1983. The Continuing Education group is.

To follow up with this spring's campus Japan Symposium, in Spring, 1983, we anticipate a special visit to Japan.

The summer of 1983, Professor Bill Braden will share the fruits of his leave in the form of a three-week experience with English provincial theaters and castles.

As Thanksgiving nears, a sizeable group of our alumni pack their bags for four days and three operas in San Francisco.

Indeed, a wide variety of trips and experiences await the Willamette alumni.

Scholars, Alumni meet at Dessert Reception

President Jerry E. Hudson and Associate Dean Virginia Bothun shared thought provoking remarks with the Alumni Scholars at a Dessert Reception held in their honor on September 21, 1981. The remainder of the time was spent more informally as the students mingled with members of the Alumni Association Board of Directors and Willamette Administration.

This year's 72 scholars represent Canada, Alaska, California, Hawaii, Idaho, North Dakota, Oregon and Washington. It was exciting to see so many academically qualified and financially deserving young people together in the Alumni Lounge at one time.

Alumni Scholar Cheryl Gunselman, right, talks with Willamette Alumni Director Colleen Corcoran during the Dessert Reception held in Putnam University Center Sept. 21 of this year. The reception honored the 72 recipients of the Alumni Scholarships.

Hello classmates of 1931! What great memories we have of the May Alumni Day when our class celebrated its fiftieth reunion! And what a turnout for our very special celebration. The Friday night dinner at McNary Golf Club was a great success with 67 attending and the luncheon at old Lausanne had about 80 of us. Let's plan another get-together in 1983 when Josephine Albert Spaulding can lead us in some of our good old songs.

We are glad to report that Howard and Mary Allen Miller of Hemet, California are making excellent recoveries from their near fatal accident on their way up to our reunion.

Fritz and Grace Henderson DeHarpport celebrated their Golden Wedding on October 10 in Salem at the Chumaree Rodeway Inn.

If any of you have any news, be sure to send it in to me.

Edgar Canfield and wife Catherine Faxon report they're enjoying retirement, some travel and much reflection! They have a daughter, Merri and son, Russell. Ed practiced law from 1937 to 1962. From 1962 to 1980 he was associated with banking: Bank of America, San Francisco, Trust Division. First Western Bank, Vice-President and Trust Officer. Seattle Trust and Savings Bank, Seattle, Senior Vice-President, Senior Trust Officer. When asked what was his most exciting event after graduation, Ed listed "surviving the great depression, getting married and raising a family—all phases of my professional and business life have been exciting and challenging."

Hortense Taylor and husband Jesse Foster are kept busy with his active world of music supervisor in Portland schools. Hortense commented she is grateful to have lived to 1980 and see all their four children graduate from college. Mark, computer researcher; James, business administrator; Daniel, instrumental teacher; and Kathryn, wife of Methodist minister in Philomath. She is continuing to play her violin in many groups and teaches others to perform and appreciate good music. Even in retirement she has a busy and active world in many areas of the music world, especially churches and volunteer services.

Dorothy Durkee and husband J. Wilbur Harris make their home in Vancouver, WA. They have two daughters, Barbara and Kathleen, plus two grandsons. After W.U. graduation, Dorothy took additional work at University of Portland and had six months Fashion Study in Europe sponsored by Temple University. She is now retired after being head of Clothing Construction and Design at Clark College, Vancouver, WA. She reports that currently she is an enthused gardener. She enjoys fly fishing—using flies that she ties. She works with 4-H and is active in her church, and designs clothing of all kinds. When they can find time, they take as many trips as they can squeeze in!

Maurice McCann retired in 1978 as Vice-President of Fred Meyer, Inc. He served as Commanding Officer, NAF Station 521, 8th Air Force, England, World War II. He and wife Doris Reben enjoyed a world trip in 1969. They hope to continue to travel some—both overseas and in the USA. They divide their time now between their Portland home and their beach home at Road's End.

Marion Pope and husband, Karl Kahl, live in Oregon City and have a daughter, Mary Ann, and sons, Robert and Roy—plus seven grandchildren. After graduation from W.U., Marion had three years nurses training at Good Samaritan Hospital in Portland. She is now retired after working for 22 years on the staff of Clackamas County Camp Fire Girls. They have enjoyed traveling abroad and keep busy with family and church in retirement.

Rae Steele Larson writes to say she and husband Dave are residing in Eugene with their three sons (ages 10 and twins 7). Rae is an Assistant Fitness Director at the Eugene Family YMCA. Rae also states that Doris Rose Burklund and husband Chuck, daughter Kim, 5, and son Chris, 1 are in Eugene. Doris works at Lane Community College in the Study Skills Department.

Rich Kawana, '66, was kind enough to share some Hawaiian news clippings about Ronnie Lee and Bill von Arnswaldt. Ronnie has been head coach at Kaiser

High School in Honolulu for the past nine years. This fall he'll be joining brother Tommy as Willamette's football defensive coordinator. Succeeding Ronnie at Kaiser will be Bill, who has been assistant to Ronnie along with being PE and health teacher and weight and track coach.

Vance McFarland wrote a lengthy epistle containing all sorts of news. Vance resides in Vancouver, WA, and is owner of two accounting/bookkeeping consulting firms, through which he does taxes for individuals and businesses, collections and audits large credit unions. He's also developing a seminar series in business management, taxes and accounting. For recreation, Vance referees basketball and football; works with the Washington Association of Retarded Citizens; was editor of several issues for the Jaycees and won the St. Patrick's Parade as best dressed leprechaun.

Vance informs us that James Reed is still head of the Actuarial and Statistics Division at Blue Cross. James and Judy have two children. Charles Baty is working for his father's insurance company and is taking over responsibility at the Ridgefield office. Ross Cravens has been in Oregon City for 11 years where he is assistant prosecuting attorney.

Educators seem to abound in our class. Dr. John Erickson and his wife are in Stayton, OR, where John was recently appointed superintendent of Stayton Elementary District.

Donna Wright will be instructor at Prairie State College in Chicago Heights, IL. She resides in Park Forest South, IL, and invites people passing through Chicago to give her a call.

Ruth Fenske has just completed three years in a doctoral program at the University of Michigan. She will be living in Tuscaloosa, AL, where she has accepted a position as Assistant Professor at University of Alabama Graduate School of Library Service.

It's so much fun to hear from and about our classmates. Keep those cards and letters coming.

Summer tans are already beginning to fade and I am fighting a deep desire to buy new notebooks, pens and Pee-Chee folders! No matter what the weather, it always seems necessary to drag out the wools and sweaters and 'get back to business'. I hope everyone had a good summer—I know that our 10 year reunion was a highlight for many of us! The party at Mission Mill Museum was a great success and I marvel at how much and how little we have changed—friendships were quickly renewed and highlights of the last 10 years recounted.

Linda Forrest made one of the longer trips west. Linda is presently living in

Alums announce scholarship

Six Willamette alumni have announced plans to create a $50,000 Endowment Fund for Student Scholarships. Their objective is to obtain gifts of $1,000 each from 50 alumni. Income from the fund will be added to Annual Alumni Fund Gifts and distributed to Willamette students on the basis of criteria established by the President and Director of Financial Aid.

The organizers, who will be asking other alumni to participate, have each given or pledged $1,000 to the fund. They are:

Jim Booth G'64
Bob Miller G'53
Dale Gustafson G'56
Dr. Mark Hattenhauer '63
Lew King G'67, L'70
Marvin Case G'65

The names of donors to the fund will be published in this space, in each succeeding issue of the Scene, until the $50,000 goal is achieved.

Any alumni who wish to participate may do so by calling or writing to the Director of Alumni Relations or by calling:

Jim Booth (503) 288-9338
Bob Miller (503) 221-0550
Marvin Case (206) 687-5151

Emeritus Law Dean Seward Reese dies in Salem

One of Willamette's most respected citizens was lost earlier this fall when Seward Phillip Reese, former dean of the College of Law died on Sept. 10.

Reese, 78, died in Salem after a long illness. He was one of Willamette's most familiar faces during his 22-year tenure as law dean and was a prime force in bringing national recognition to the College of Law.

The popular Willamette administrator began his tenure in 1946 and in the 22 years that followed until his retirement in 1968, Dean Reese was instrumental in the establishment of a legal aid clinic, student research service, anonymous grading policies and a series of Willamette legal handbooks. He was still involved in the College of Law in 1981, serving on the Centennial Committee for the school. He was awarded an honorary degree at Willamette commencement exercises in May of this year.

Reese was a 1926 graduate of West Virginia Wesleyan. He received his master's degree from the University of Michigan in 1931. He earned his law degree from the University of Indiana in 1935 and an advanced law degree from Duke University in 1941.

The former dean was a member of the bars of Oregon, Indiana and West Virginia. He taught at Syracuse University and served in the United States Air Force.

Dean Reese is survived by his wife Donna, son Richard in Salem, and daughter Donnetta in Berkeley, California.

The family suggests remembrances and contributions be made to the Seward Reese Memorial Scholarship Fund at the College of Law.

Laughlin to speak at Friends of Library banquet

William Laughlin, Class of 1941, now a noted anthropologist, author, and professor at University of Connecticut, will be the speaker when the Willamette University Friends of the Library hold their annual baron-of-beef banquet in the Cat Cavern of the University Center at 6:30 p.m., Thursday, February 25. Tickets for the dinner are $6.25 and can be obtained or reserved by contacting Tina Richards, University Relations, Willamette University, Salem, Oregon 97301, (503) 370-6231.

The Friends also will continue their annual Founders Day book sale, which earns money to enhance the University Library collection. The date is Feb. 1. Anyone with books to contribute to the sale can drop them off at the Library. All kinds of books—fiction, nonfiction, popular, scholarly, texts, hardback, paperback—will be appreciated.

Belongings need to be claimed at Willamette

Several residence hall storage areas are bulging with old suitcases, trunks, carpets, boxes of books, clothes and assorted paraphernalia. Current residence hall staff members are cleaning attics, basements and storerooms. Part of the effort is to eliminate fire hazards as well as provide more space.

Problem: many items are neither marked with a name nor date. Belongings which clearly have been stored two years or less are to be retained, but others are either to be discarded or sold in residence hall fund-raising efforts. Proceeds will help dorm residents purchase recreational or entertainment equipment such as a ping-pong table or television.

So . . . if you're using a Willamette storage area as your mini-warehouse, please contact Lily Driskill, Assistant Dean of Students, to claim your belongings.

Former president Corson dies

Jim Corson, who served a one-year term as interim president at Willamette in 1973, died in Burlingame, Calif., Thursday evening, Nov. 12.

Corson, who succeeded Roger Fritz at Willamette, was coaxed out of retirement by the then-chairman of the Board of Trustees, George Atkinson, in 1972.

Graveside services for Corson were held in Modesto, Calif., on Monday, Nov. 16. Memorial service was held the same day at United Methodist Church in Burlingame.

A memorial service is expected to be held in Salem as well, pending approval from relatives of Corson. Services will be held after Thanksgiving, though no exact date has been set.
