The New Scene

It was Thoreau who said, "Things do not change, we do." Well, clearly the Scene has changed, but perhaps it is merely an indication that we have changed. In a continuing effort to improve the quality of Willamette University, changes without sacrificing of basic purpose or mission have become commonplace. Buildings change, personnel changes, the curriculum changes, even the Millstream changes.

And the new Scene reflects the new Willamette. It has been our intention to hold on to many of the same features and certainly to retain the same basic purpose — to communicate accurately and interestingly to our alumni and friends what is happening at Willamette and among our alumni.

We hope you like the new format; just as we hope you like the "new" Willamette. We are proud of our tradition of excellence, but there are very few things in life which cannot be improved. Our task is to improve what we can without detracting from the spirit which is Willamette.

A number of faculty, administrators, and trustees are currently involved in a project that seeks a better understanding of the perceptions of Willamette. Included in the questionnaire being circulated is a question about what constitutes the institutional "glue" that holds the University together. Reflecting on what weight to give each of the four suggested answers was a provocative exercise for me. Each respondent was to distribute 100 points between:

- formal rules and policies
- commitment to innovation and development
- emphasis on tasks and goal accomplishment
- loyalty and tradition

Thankfully, it was not an either/or choice, and I was even grateful that the question assumes that the institution is together and not coming unglued. Nevertheless, I had a difficult time with the question and I think of it now in the context of change and stability.

How do we balance a necessary commitment to innovation and development while simultaneously respecting loyalty and tradition? We want to hold on to traditions and precedents without living in the past. We want to honor what we have been even as our eyes are on what we can become.

So, we hope you enjoy the new Scene and the new Willamette. They are different — and yet they are the same.

Jerry E. Hudson

SETTING THE SCENE

It's a long way from 1842, when Willamette University was founded, to 1984. How did you feel when you learned that your alma mater was rated "Best in the West" in a recent U.S. News & World Report survey of college presidents? Proud? Pleased? Warmed by an "I-knew-it-all-the-time" confirmation of good feelings, good experiences and good memories?

Those of us at Willamette today share the honor with you. The new Scene is a tribute to the qualities and traditions that make Willamette a superior university.

Congratulations to all of you who helped — and continue to help — make Willamette University "Best in the West."

To the editors:

Dear Ms. Posell and Ms. Richards,
I want to thank you for the Fall issue of the Willamette Scene — interesting, informative, upbeat.

It made me proud to be a WU alum, and regretful that I don't live in Salem to take advantage of such things as the series, What About the Russians? and the Madrigal Dinner.

ALUMNI SCENE

You can be proud of your elected representatives on the Alumni Board of Directors.

The Nominations, Records and Achievements Committee submitted a slate of Alumni Citation Nominees to be approved at the January meeting of the Willamette Board of Trustees. Nominations for Board and Committee positions will remain open until February 25. Please take a few minutes to make nominations by writing to: Alumni Relations, University House, Willamette University, Salem, OR 97301.

The Continuing Education Committee helped plan and prepare the Study Tours described on page 29. Use the coupon for additional information or to suggest a Study Tour.

The Campus Relations and Special Events Committee sponsored another highly successful Pittock Mansion Christmas Party. They are now gearing up for Alumni Day, May 12, 1984.

Admissions Assistance Alumni counselors are active in 45 cities in the US and are providing strong support to the WU Admission Office on a year-round basis.

Since June 1983, successful Alumni Club events have been held in San Diego, Seattle, Portland, Anchorage, Kawagoe City (Japan), Boise, Reno, and Honolulu. If your city or state is not one of the above, please contact us. The Clubs Committee is preparing a Guide for Willamette University Alumni Clubs so that any alums in one area can form their own club.

At the November meeting, the Directors recommended the tasks of the Publications Advisory Committee be broadened to include all communications and that a class representative (rather than a class agent) be responsible for communicating with each class at least once a year. The ASWU has returned to a Class Council structure, so a representative will be appointed from the class of 1984 and all future classes. Let us know if you might want to hold a representative position for your class.

The Alumni Funds Committee is working to increase the percentage of annual alumni contributions to Willamette, through direct mail and phonathon appeals. If you have not yet responded, please do so today. Volunteers can serve as mentors for those of you who have yet to become personally involved in Willamette's future. I invite you to join them as committee members now, as active participants in your diverse geographic areas anytime, and as directors in the future.

On the Campaign Trail

This is a pretty heady experience for a 22-year-old college senior," KEN YATES says of his internship at Mondale for President campaign headquarters and his term at The American University in Washington, D.C.

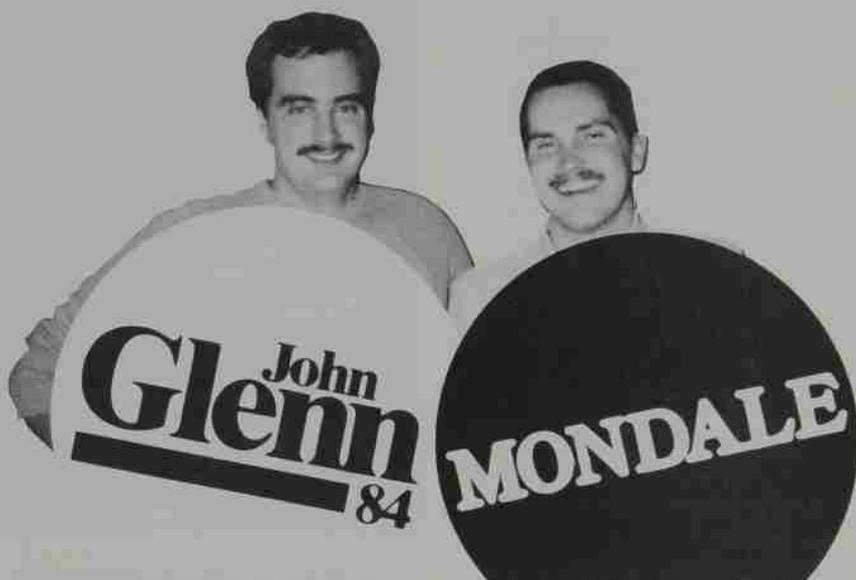

"I came to Washington to further my career and was able to do so because of the experience and contacts I made through Willamette University. I work 45 hours a week at Mondale headquarters as a regional coordinator for Oregon, Alaska and North and South Dakota. To date, we've raised $1.5 million, added 60,000 new contributors and organized every state in America.

"I will organize 325 parties in my four states, worth between $80,000 and $100,000. I miss Willamette, but I'm having the time of my life in Washington."

The Washington Semester in American National Government and Politics is a program sponsored in cooperation with The American University and selected US colleges. The curriculum includes seminars, individual research projects and an internship. Related programs focus on foreign policy, the justice system, economic policy, journalism and public administration.

Ken Yates' description of life in the US capital is similar to that of TIMOTHY KEMPTON'S. Kempton, a WU student in the American University program, is working for the competition: he interns for Senator John Glenn.

"Being an intern for John Glenn's presidential campaign has had a profound influence on me. I know my political involvement in the future will be heightened because of this experience. I plan to take what I have learned from this semester in Washington and put it to use in my remaining time at Willamette."

Yates and Kempton's experiences reflect their own abilities as well as the opportunities which programs like American University's can offer students. Commenting on his newly-gained perspective, Kempton had this to say: "A Willamette education, combined with practical political experience under Senator Glenn, are two opportunities I would not trade for anything. An excellent liberal arts education and hands-on knowledge of how our political system functions will be two important tools for me to use in making a contribution to society in the future."

Ken Yates points to Willamette

University as an integral part of his life, too. "Joining the Sigma Chi fraternity, holding offices in the fraternity and on campus, interning with the Oregon legislature — all led to my current job in Washington, DC. The key is to get involved and to care about what you're doing for the institution as well as for yourself."

Those who participate in the Washington Semester are told: "Use Washington as a laboratory." As promising young political scientists, Tim Kempton and Ken Yates are taking the advice seriously. Classes, campaign work, social events and study — Kempton and Yates call this a formula for seeing the political process at work.

For more information on the Washington Semester, contact Jim Bjorkquist, Department of Sociology, Willamette University.

— ALUMNI PROFILE —

“The dedication was easy to write: ‘To our families, and to the teachers and advisors who made a difference in our lives.’” After six years, writing every weekend and most weeknights after the kids were asleep, the textbook in which this dedication appears was in production at Prentice-Hall. It took another year to be typeset, proofed, indexed and bound. Finally, in January, 1983, Botany — Principles and Applications, by Barbara Woodworth Saigo and her husband, Roy, was made available to colleges and universities in the U.S. and Canada.

“Tops in my mind in that dedication,” she writes, “are my former profs at Willamette. They irreversibly altered the course of my life with what they taught me about both the substance of human knowledge and the methods by which that knowledge is sought, analyzed, and applied. It’s often said that we become more sentimental as we grow older. So it is that many of us who were at Willamette almost 20 years ago look back at those years with affection, as well as with curiosity about former professors and classmates.”

Barbara enrolled at Willamette at the tender age of 16 straight out of Willamina High School. While taking a full load of classes, she served in a variety of positions at the Collegian, was a campus correspondent for the Capital-Journal, taught children tap dancing, performed in theatre productions and at the Oregon State Fair, was initiated into Mortar Board, was a member of Delta Gamma sorority, and was involved with numerous other activities and committees. Commenting on her active extra-curricular involvement, she says: “In many ways, the extra-curricular activities have been as useful to me as the academic activities. I don’t think I could have been so deeply involved in so many different things but for the opportunity of a smaller school.”

“As alumni we benefit from Willamette’s excellence twice — during our college years, and by association with its continued success. One appropriate way to acknowledge this benefit is to continue to support the university.”

In the spring of 1964, she graduated from Willamette with a degree in biology, though English/journalism finished a close second. Before she reached the age of 21, she was off to graduate school at Oregon State University. While studying for her Master of Arts in zoology, with emphasis in natural history and ecology and a minor in botany, she met Roy, who was working on his Ph.D. at OSU in botany and plant pathology. They were engaged in 1966 and married in June, 1967.

Soon after Roy accepted a teaching position at Wisconsin State University in Eau Claire, they moved to Wisconsin. During their first semester in Eau Claire, a teaching position opened in the biology department. Barbara applied and was accepted and the two began collaborating on research and writing projects. After the requisite number of years, both received tenure.

Barbara has taught General Biology, General Zoology, Biological Science and Ornithology, as well as non-credit outreach courses. She has also served as a resource person for the Summer Science Institute at UW-EC (serving "high-potential youth"). She is the founding advisor for four campus women's groups — Alpha Lambda Delta freshman women's scholastic honorary, Gold Caps Chapter of Mortar Board, the co-ed cheering squad, and the UW-EC Pom Pom squad.

In October, 1972, Roy and Barbara's first daughter was born and Barbara resigned her teaching position. According to Barbara, "I opted to remain with her through what I regard as a singularly precious and significant time of life for a child." In April, 1975, their second daughter was born and the Saigos signed the contract to write their botany textbook. In 1977, Barbara was nominated and selected for the newly-created position of administrative assistant to the Chancellor of the University of Wisconsin. While working for the chancellor, Barbara also co-authored a lab manual which was designed to accompany a best-selling biology textbook. She served with the university's first woman chancellor until 1980. Then, in August of 1980, Barbara and Roy's third child, a son, was born.

All through these years, in between raising their family, teaching, and staying active in numerous professional organizations (including the Botanical Society of America, American Institute of Biological Science, National Association of Biology Teachers, and others), Roy and Barbara were writing Botany — Principles and Applications. Since publication, they have signed another contract with Prentice-Hall to write a general biology textbook, to be published in 1986 or 1987.

Though Barbara is a long way from Willamette, she is quick to express her closeness to the school. "As alumni we benefit from Willamette's excellence twice — during our college years, and by association with its continued success. One appropriate way to acknowledge this benefit is to continue to support the university." In a letter expressing her thoughts about Willamette, she wrote: "We can still participate in what happens at Willamette, by helping it to both change and remain the same. With Willamette in a strong financial position, many future freshman classes can grow and learn. At a strong, 'personal-sized' liberal arts university they can develop both a successful future career and a sense of purpose and caring for the world as a whole. Such a place nurtures many voices for the future." ♦

Sumner appointed Director of University Relations

Ralph Wright has accepted the position of Vice President of Development and Community Relations for Salem Hospital.

During his 12 years of service at Willamette, Wright served in many development capacities, most recently as Director of University Relations. The concluding paragraph of his letter of resignation articulates the character and commitment of Ralph and his work at the university:

"I love Willamette — its students, its faculty, its staff. I respect the University for its considerable accomplishments of the past and present and look hopefully to even greater accomplishments in the future. If I am not a staff member, I hope that I might become a Salem volunteer for some Willamette ventures. It has been a privilege to be here for more than 12 years." He will be missed.

James M. Sumner, 39, has been appointed Director of University Relations.

Sumner has been at Willamette since 1974, serving first as the Associate Director of Admission, and more recently as the Assistant to the President and Director of Public Relations. He received his Master's Degree from Springfield College in Massachusetts and his B.A. from Pacific University in Forest Grove.

Sigma Tau: 40 Years Later

Willamette's first fraternity, Sigma Tau — founded in the summer of 1919 — staged its first reunion in 40 years at Salem's Rodeway Inn in September.

The Sigma Tau register contains 400 signatures. The first two in 1919 were H. "DIM" DIMICK and O. "FROSTY" OLSON. HERBERT B. DAVIS was the last to sign the register in November, 1946, along with RICHARD "BUZZ" YOCOM, long-time member of the WU faculty and now assistant to the president. In January, 1947, Sigma Chi installed Sigma Tau as the Delta Zeta chapter and many Sigma Tau members chose to become part of Sigma Chi at that time.

Master of ceremonies for the two-day reunion, OTTO J. WILSON '38, substituted for founder and first president Dimick, who was unable to attend. The history of Sigma Tau was based on Wilson's interview with the 85-year-old Dimick:

During the summer of 1919 Dim and Frosty conceived the idea of founding a fraternity at Willamette. With no financial resources, no nucleus organization, no encouragement from the university and some hostility toward the idea of fraternities — Dimick and Olson began searching for a house. A three-story Victorian structure — with a full basement and a carriage house — was found empty at 920 Oak Street. Enthusiasm soared despite the absence of funds.

Dim spent each summer since boyhood living and working on his uncle's farm in Molalla building muscles and character for star performances in football, basketball and baseball at

Woodburn High School and Willamette. His uncle signed a note enabling the emerging fraternity to purchase the house. Dim was elected president and Frosty was elected manager. "We would never have made it without his wizardry," according to Dim.

A name was chosen, a pin designed (which later was replaced by a more elaborate design with rubies and pearls) and a spacious dining room was built in the basement for daily meals, meetings and social events. A cook was hired, and, when school opened in September, 1919, 22 members took up residence on Oak Street and WU's first fraternity was a reality.

DR. PAUL TRUEBLOOD '28 emeritus professor, Byron scholar and composer of the Sigma Tau pledge song, led the group in songs, followed by LEN RANTON '38, Portland; DR. MARK WALTZ '42, Reno, NV and COL. KEITH SHERMAN '42, Olympia, WA.

Other presentations were made by: DR. PHIL ARMSTRONG '33, San Luis Obispo, CA; PAUL HAUSER '36, Portland and BILL HANZEN '38, Sunriver, CA. JUDGE VAL SLOPER '46, Salem, gave an account of the fire which severely damaged the house during the war years when it was used as a rooming house. BILL STORTZ '46, Salem, introduced Estelle Gatke, whose late husband ROBERT MOULTON GATKE '39 was a member and long-time faculty advisor to the fraternity.

Buzz Yocom introduced WU president Jerry E. Hudson who stressed the importance of alumni interest and participation in the school's future. WADE BETTIS '44, Canby, OR honored the 134 deceased members, as 96 Sigma Tau brothers and spouses joined hands around the table and sang a parting hymn.

On Saturday, the group toured the campus noting improvements such as Hudson's Bay and the recently-renovated Eaton Hall. The removal of the railroad tracks which once ran through the campus was a pleasant surprise to some of those who returned for the reunion. Lunch with students during the Willamette Week tailgate party, the football game at McCulloch stadium and a dinner dance rounded out the reunion activities.

STAN ELAND '42 and Wilson co-chaired the reunion. Committee members were Bettis, DR. CHARLES CAMPBELL '32, and BERNHARD "BUZZ" HAGEDORN '40, Albany.

Otto Wilson was elected president (and benevolent dictator) and was ordered by unanimous vote to organize a second reunion in 1986 which seems assured of success, judging by the response to the 1983 reunion.

OTTO J. WILSON

Kappa Sigma Wins Standards Awards

The WU Theta Delta chapter of Kappa Sigma has been nationally recognized as the Number Two chapter in the country. It follows Duke University in the rating of the top ten chapters in the fraternity's Chapter Standards Award.

The judging uses a point system averaging different areas of the chapters' programming including: rush, pledge education, membership, scholarship, housing, finances, chapter activities, chapter management, ritual, community service, and fraternity relations. "This is the top award of Kappa Sigma and we are very proud to have earned it," notes Monte Hong, Grand Scribe and a senior history major.

The Chapter Standards Award isn't the only citation the WU Kappa Sigmas have earned this year. Two other presentations were made to the Theta Delta chapter at the bi-annual conclave held in Knoxville, TN this past summer. The Campus Involvement Award was given to the WU chapter for outstanding and sustained involvement of members in campus organizations and student leadership positions from a field of more than 190 other Kappa Sigma chapters throughout the United States. The Theta Delta chapter has among its members: the student body president, secretary, parliamentarian, and former treasurer, 11 members of the freshman honorary, Alpha Lambda Delta, 12 members of the freshman honorary Phi Eta Sigma, six members of Mortar Board, nine Collins Scholars, and an impressive showing among all university and student committees on campus. Add a scholarship award given to the Theta Delta chapter for Spring and Fall '82 for maintaining a grade point average above the fraternity average on campus, and that's the national office of Kappa Sigma's definition of a "comprehensive fraternity experience of excellence." ◇

DG Honors Latimer

The Delta Gamma sorority hosted a special evening in January to honor emeritus faculty member, Lois Latimer. The chapter members named their remodeled living room the Lois Latimer Room in appreciation of her helpful advice and support of the house.

As a new Willamette faculty member in the 1930's, Miss Latimer began working with the Delta Phi sorority and was initiated as a faculty member into the Delta Gamma sorority when the local chapter joined the national fraternity.

She served many years on the advisory and house corporation boards and continues to be involved in the operation of the DG house, home to 46 collegiate women.

Entrepreneurship

A group of Willamette University students has launched its own search for excellence.

"We were tired of hearing, 'if you want a job after graduation you should move out of the Pacific Northwest,'" says DON KRAHMER, JR., '81, Atkinson graduate student in management and co-founder of the Student Entrepreneurship Association.

"We are seeking innovators, men and women who have observed and experienced existing institutions and believe things can be done better. This outlook is the essence of entrepreneurship. It's part of what I see as the Oregon spirit," Krahrmer says.

For 23-year-old Willamette University undergraduate KIRSTEN HARTY, entrepreneurship has meant developing the family's shallot business by marketing to such companies as Neiman-Marcus, Macy's and Portland gourmet shop, Strohecker's.

For first-year student HELEN LABREC, entrepreneurship is a word she heard often in her days at Control Data Corporation but is just now experiencing as she establishes her own management consulting firm.

For joint degree (management/law) Atkinson student ERIC CONRAD, entrepreneurship meant working last summer for potato entrepreneur JR Simplot, who dropped out of school in Idaho in the eighth grade and made his fortune selling frozen french fries to MacDonald's. Conrad has an interest in developing and maintaining the "entrepreneurial spirit" in the corporate environment.

The Student Entrepreneurship Association is the first of its kind in the Pacific Northwest. It was modeled after similar successful programs at Stanford and Harvard universities, among others.

The goal of the students in creating the association is to develop an awareness — not only within the university community but also within the region — that economic recovery will be based on the "creative human potential" of individuals who live here.

So far, the group has invited successful entrepreneurs to speak at luncheons (see side bar) and has a full-day entrepreneurship conference slated for Saturday, April 14 at Willamette.

The Conference on Entrepreneurship will be patterned after a highly successful effort by Stanford University students. To the group's knowledge, Willamette will be the first university in the nation to sponsor a student-initiated Conference on Entrepreneurship. The conference will be aimed at two groups within the Pacific Northwest and Northern California: students and entrepreneurs who own or have an interest in starting their own new business.

The conference program will consist of three major keynote speakers and 15-20 workshops on how to start a business, legal and regulatory issues, industry trends, entrepreneurship and capital formation. The day will conclude with a wine and cheese reception featuring Pacific Northwest wines.

The SEA aims to establish Willamette University "on the cutting edge of entrepreneurship and economic transformation," Krahrmer adds. "It accomplishes the more immediate goal to provide a network of people on the west coast who are interested in sharing innovative ideas for business development."

Krahrmer quotes the Statement of Willamette University Goals found in the Standards of Conduct which reads, "The University is mindful of its heritage, its present and future obligations and seeks to provide — through close student-teacher relationships in an atmosphere of free exchange of ideas and innovation — the best possible climate for learning."

To Don Krahrmer, this means "that the Willamette community has a responsibility to assist with economic development within the geographic region. Entrepreneurship fits the concept of a liberal arts education in the development of 'creative thinkers' and in the development of strong, imaginative and responsible managers at the Atkinson Graduate School of Management and College of Law."

GSM SCENE

A group of business and government leaders will be named in January to advise the group. For more information on the conference, alumni and friends of the University may write: Conference on Entrepreneurship, Student Entrepreneurship Association, Geo. H. Atkinson Graduate School of Management, Willamette University, Salem, OR 97301. ♦

GARY CONKLING, Governmental Relations Manager, Tektronix and PAT MCCORMICK, Executive Director, American Electronics Association, were the featured speakers at the first meeting of the SEA. They outlined the seven conditions which must exist to create a climate for entrepreneurial activity:

- Adequate basic research
- Support of applied research
- Adequate risk capital
- Sufficient rewards for risk-taking
- Trained work force
- Expanding international market shares
- Good economic climate

POLLY MADENWALD, national president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, will speak on Tuesday, February 14. Brownbag lunch, noon, Dining Rooms 1 and 2, Cat Cavern. For information, call 370-6440.

Two Named to GSM Posts

SALLY SEDERSTROM has been appointed interim Assistant Director of Admissions at the Atkinson School. She replaces Mary Ann Wynkoop who has accepted a job as editorial assistant with Kansas City Magazine.

Sederstrom earned her Master of Management degree at the Atkinson School this past August. She is a 1977 graduate of the University of Oregon in art history. Prior to graduate school she was assistant to the director, Salem Art Association, and staff assistant to city commissioner Mildred Schwab and to Congressman Les AuCoin.

STEVE ARCHER has been named acting dean of the Atkinson School. He served as dean when the school opened in 1974 and teaches classes in finance at the GSM.

Archer was appointed by President Hudson after it was learned that James A. Thurber, citing family concerns, declined the position of GSM dean. A new search will be conducted during the next school year for a replacement, according to President Hudson.

The Next 100 Years

The College of Law centennial celebration brought a steady stream of distinguished visitors to campus fall semester. Thirty of our oldest alums joined former Chief Justice William McAllister of the Oregon Supreme Court for dinner and reminiscence. John Shepherd, president-elect of the American Bar Association, and world-renowned mediator and author, Roger Fisher, were part of the "Law, Justice and Society" lecture series.

During this centennial year, it was announced that WU would open a Center for Dispute Resolution in June. In addition to improving trial advocacy skills, the Center will teach and encourage alternatives to litigation such as negotiation, arbitration, and mediation. It will be the most comprehensive dispute resolution program in the nation.

The program was launched through a major grant from the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust of Vancouver, Washington. The Trust pledged $330,000 to the Center if a like amount is secured by the University before June 30, 1984. Other foundations, businesses, and individuals will be asked to contribute to a fund-raising campaign that has just begun. Nearly $1 million is needed to establish the Center.

President Jerry Hudson and Leroy Tornquist, Dean of the College of Law, named WU law professor Carlton Snow to head the Center and WU assistant to the president, Randy Lowry, as staff director.

Tornquist said, "Inquiries, letters, and editorials have been tremendously supportive and

Roger Fisher, author of Getting to Yes, discusses the Center for Dispute Resolution with College of Law Dean Leroy Tornquist and CDR staff Randy Lowry and Carlton Snow.

Last year, over ten million civil suits were filed in US courts. The delays and costs resulting from this explosion of litigation are staggering. The College of Law's new Center for Dispute Resolution will be on the leading edge of the search for speedier, more affordable justice.

unanimously approving. People like that we will serve so many constituencies. We will train not only our own students, but lawyers who are already practicing. We will also be conducting research, sponsoring conferences, maintaining a library, and providing actual conflict resolution services to the region."

Contributors to the Center appreciate Willamette's leadership in responding to the need for quicker, less expensive and more appropriate forms of resolving disputes. In recent comments applauding the Center, Senator Mark Hatfield observed, "It has long been my feeling that the adversarial approach to problem-solving is an imperfect vehicle for the resolution of many disputes that are now in the courts. Our entire judicial system has become a maze of pleadings and appeals, and there is little emphasis placed on the healing process that is so essential to the resolution of conflicts between individuals. Negotiation, arbitration, mediation, and client-counseling offer great potential for less costly means of dispute resolution but, more importantly, provide an opportunity for reconciliation among people."

The Center has already attracted the interest of other

Fall Sports Wrap Up

The highlight of the fall sports season came November 5, when the Willamette football team stunned visiting seventh-ranked and defending national champion Linfield 26-21, in a game the Bearcats dominated. The Bearcats outgained the Wildcats 370-327 in yards on the muddy afternoon, as sophomore quarterback Todd Alberts threw for 262 of them, completing 12 of 24, with no interceptions. The Linfield QBs threw two INTs, one of them returned 48 yards by freshman Bob Willard, who also had 13 tackles. Willard was chosen the NAIA National Defense Player of the Week, and Alberts was named Northwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week.

The Bearcats finished the season with a 1-8 record, but next year Broeker will return an experienced group, including first team All-Conference and District defensive lineman Randy Sullivan, and second team All-Conference and District defensive back Wayne Johnson-Epps. Broeker will lose senior tight end Jeff Peter, Salem, who played in just seven games due to injury, and in his second year of organized football, caught 31 passes for 355 yards and two TD's, and did an outstanding job of blocking on the offensive line. Peter was awarded Honorable Mention All-American by the NAIA, along with his team MVP, first team All-Conference and first team All-District recognitions. Said Peter, "Being named to the A-A squad is quite an honor, but I share it with all my teammates and coaches."

The men's soccer team had an exciting and successful season, finishing 10-6-2, second in the District. For the playoff match in Salem against Warner Pacific, Coach Brad Victor's side saw more than 100 students and faculty turn out at Wallace Marine Park to cheer them on. Unfortunately, the Knights prevailed 5-2 and advanced to the national playoffs. Victor was impressed by the play of juniors Tim Meehan and Doug White, who, with senior Jeff Johnson, were named to the All-Conference squad. Junior mid-fielder Tom Stalp was named MVP for his play.

The women's soccer team, led by Coach Fran Howard and new assistant coach Ron Santa improved its mark from 1-10-1 to 5-7 in 1983, "strengthening our entire program," noted Howard. The team was led by MVP freshman Tracy Deeming, who, with senior Sandy Meredith scored eight goals apiece. Howard says the key to next year is to stay free of injuries, a problem that killed the women this year. Also returning will be outstanding team players Denice Gray and Shannon Martin.

Under head coach Janie Ellis, the women's volleyball team finished the season with a 5-23 record, but showed marked improvement from last year. Said sophomore spiker Trina Timms, "We got much better at the skills, legislators, jurists, and some of the nation's leading lawyers. During a November visit to WU, John Shepherd, president-elect of the American Bar Association, said, "I'm excited by this new Center of yours, for it will directly help us in the American Bar Association achieve one of our major goals — promoting the use of alternative means of dispute resolution wherever appropriate. As a trial lawyer, I know from personal experience that there are many disputes which can be resolved outside of the courtroom more quickly and with less expense than litigation."

According to Tornquist, the quickness and enthusiasm of the response has been "a cause for celebration in a year of celebration. We are in the midst of observing our first century of service. While it is impossible to predict what the next century will bring to the study and practice of law, alternatives to litigation will play an increasingly important role. Courthouses of the future will not be limited to adversary litigation but will contain many options for speedy justice at a cost clients can afford. With the new Center for Dispute Resolution, Willamette has taken steps to prepare for the next hundred years."

But, she added, the key to next year's success depends on "being more like a family, not so concerned with independent play." In the Willamette Tournament, hosted in October, WU took third place in the 10 team field, while Lewis & Clark State (ID) won the championship.

In his 19th year as head coach Chuck Bowles saw two Willamette cross-country runners gain All-American status. Junior Robbie Wright (11th in the November national meet, Kenosha, WI) and sophomore Kara Crisifulli (20th) were named to the squad after their excellent performances back east. The men's team finished 15th overall, after taking second at Conference and District. Crisifulli was the lone WU female entry at the national meet. Also named at the national meet were Wright and junior Paul Yunker to the NAIA Academic All-American cross-country team.

It was a very exciting and inspiring fall sports season, and the phrase constantly heard throughout the Sparks Center is "Wait 'til next year!"

Campus appearances by newly-announced presidential candidate John Anderson (left) and Georgia State Senator Julian Bond (right) were an important element of student activities this fall. Both speakers stressed the importance of voting in the 1980's. The candidacy of Jesse Jackson was a subject that students wanted to talk about with both political leaders; Bond confirmed that he was already committed to the Mondale campaign; Anderson believes that Jackson's candidacy will win votes for Anderson's new organization for independents, The Freedom Party.

Economics professor Jim Hanson coordinated the series, "What About the Russians?" which brought Martha Mautner to Willamette in November. Mautner, Associate Director, Soviet Affairs, Intelligence and Research, US State Department, was one of the speakers for this successful event which presented the US-USSR debate from many perspectives.

Rethinking America in a Changing Global Society: The Native American Perspective, April 2-6, will include speakers, films, art shows and panel discussions, as well as Native American spiritual leaders, musicians, poets, dancers and storytellers. According to chaplain Phil Hanni, "the symposium is a chance to experience the forward movement of Native American thought, culture, criticism and spirituality." For more information, call 370-6213.

Nikki Giovanni, poet, will be on campus Thursday, February 9, Smith Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Endowed Scholarship Fund Hits 50

Willamette President Jerry Hudson is delighted to receive a plaque from alums BOB MILLER ('53) and JIM BOOTH ('64) commemorating 50 one thousand dollar donors to the Alumni Endowed Scholarship Fund. Miller and Booth pioneered this special effort that marks the first permanent scholarship funded exclusively by Willamette alumni. The University is also grateful for the hard work of GENE LOWE ('49) and DALE GUSTAFSON ('56) and especially to the fifty individuals who gave so generously. This $50,000 is over and above traditional University giving programs and forms the initial corpus of the Alumni Endowed Scholarship Fund. Plans are currently being made to ensure the continued growth of this on-going source of student financial aid. Names appearing on the plaque are:

Annual Report

OF THE PRESIDENT

In November as the timeclock ticked off the final seconds in Willamette's first football victory over Linfield since 1968, the sound of student cheers swept the stadium. I smiled as the small but very exuberant band of students chanted, "We're Number One! We're Number One!" Surely one can overlook this slight exaggeration (after all, that victory broke a fifteen-game losing streak and was our only win of the season) and attribute it either to excessive emotion or creative tongue-in-cheek humor.

Perhaps the students were merely being prophetic. Just two weeks following the football victory over last year's national champion, the release of a poll by U.S. News & World Report gave increased credibility to the chant, "We're Number One!" Hundreds of college and university presidents were surveyed and they named Willamette the best comprehensive university among schools its size west of the Mississippi. "Best in the West" has a wonderful ring to it.

This annual report seeks to document systematically the reality behind the perception of excellence. I believe our reputation is well-deserved and I invite your careful attention to this report summarizing 1982-83. Among the more significant developments were:

- The renovation of Eaton Hall
- The centennial celebration of the College of Law
- The $3,216,000 in gifts provided by alumni, trustees, and friends of the University
- The launching of a new merit-based scholarship program in honor of former President G. Herbert Smith
- The establishment of a new major in business-economics
- An increase of $11,581,000 in our endowment, making the total market value of $47,342,000
- Over 50 percent of the graduating seniors going on for graduate degree work

- The recognition of the Atkinson Graduate School of Management for producing the best Small Business Institute Case for Oregon
- A balanced operating budget
- The enrollment of eight National Merit Scholars in the College of Liberal Arts

And most important of all — lives were changed for the better. Our commitment to excellence found expression in the achievements of students, faculty, staff and alumni. We are proud of these accomplishments, and as we express gratitude to all those who played a part in the progress of Willamette's 141st year, we invited increased participation and full partnership in assuring that the best days for the West's oldest university are still in the future.

James E. Hudson

There are approximately 1,900 four-year colleges and universities in the United States; roughly two-thirds of them are independent or private colleges and universities. The majority of these has 2,000 or fewer students and can be classified as primarily undergraduate, liberal arts institutions. Willamette University is clearly one of this latter group. So how, generally and specifically in 1982-83, can we distinguish Willamette from many other small, independent, liberal arts universities? Besides being a small university, Willamette possesses certain characteristics which distinguish it from the 900 other similar institutions in America. Consider the following traits, each of which contributes an important dimension to the character of Willamette University and was built upon in 1982-1983: Founded in 1842, Willamette is the oldest university in the west. Our long history of excellence provides a firm foundation of enduring educational principles to which we added innovations and new approaches in 1982-83, in keeping with contemporary challenges.

The University's reputation for academic excellence is matched by its graduates' achievements in diverse fields. A study in 1982-83 of alumni who graduated within the past six years gives some indication of the range of careers in which our graduates are engaged. Currently, five members of the United States Congress are Willamette alumni. We number presidents and chief executive officers of major U.S. corporations among our graduates. The flight director of the space shuttle Columbia did his undergraduate work at Willamette. In the arts, education, medicine, industry and virtually every other aspect of human endeavor, Willamette alumni make their mark. Most graduates are working in positions for which their undergraduate majors provided direct preparation. Many, however, choose to utilize the flexibility of their Willamette liberal arts education to pursue some unusual career paths not necessarily related to their majors. Consider the following: A 1978 biology graduate is an account executive for Young and Rubicam with responsibility for the Atari account; a 1977 English government, county government and many other state agencies and institutions. In 1983 Oregon's capital, Salem, again earned the distinction of being named an All-America City. This is the second time Salem has been so honored, and Willamette was cited as one of the reasons the city received this recognition.

In addition to the quality environment provided by Oregon and Salem, a special effort continued in 1982-83 to maintain a quality environment on the campus itself. In 1981, the Uni-major is a stock broker in Florida; a 1977 political science alumnus works for Twentieth Century Fox as a screenwriter; a 1978 biology graduate is an attorney in Hawaii; a 1978 religious studies major serves as a county commissioner; a 1979 art major owns and operates a gourmet catering service in California; another art major from the class of 1980 is a weather forecaster; a 1980 foreign language major is an investment officer for the Bank of America; and a 1980 philosophy graduate plays cello in a symphony orchestra.

Another thing that clearly distinguishes Willamette from other similar institutions is its location. No other university is located directly across the street from a state capitol, and within the immediate neighborhood of city versity launched a major $18 million capital campaign, entitled "The Campaign for Willamette." As the 1982-83 school year ended, and we approached the half-way point in the Campaign, almost nine million dollars had been raised. The Campaign includes plans for four extensive renovations of academic buildings and the construction of a new $6 million library, as well as extensive landscape changes. The Campaign continued to show progress: the $4.1 million renovation of the E. S. Collins Science Center was completed in 1981. In January of 1983, the $1.7 million renovation of Eaton Hall was completed. United States Senator Mark O. Hatfield, a Willamette graduate and former professor and dean, spoke at the rededication of Eaton Hall, which for many years housed his office. The Departments of History, Religious Studies, English, Sociology, Philosophy and Education now occupy the office and classroom building.

In March of 1983, The Chronicle of Higher Education published information showing that Willamette University has the largest endowment of any college in the entire northwest region. Further, The Chronicle points out that Willamette is easily among the 100 most heavily-endowed colleges in the country, and has one of the highest per capita endowments in America. This, too, sets Willamette apart.

Some new academic programs were approved in 1982-83. Our faculty approved a major in business economics. This major will provide the substantial and excellent theoretical economic base that has distinguished our Department of Economics, but will expand its offerings in business management and provide a less abstract major. New courses for the major will be Business, Government and Society, Business Internship, Business Politics Seminar, Operations Research, Decision Theory, and Labor Economics and Labor Relations. These will be coupled with existing courses in Economics, Statistics, Accounting, Finance, Management and Economic Simulation to form an excellent new program.

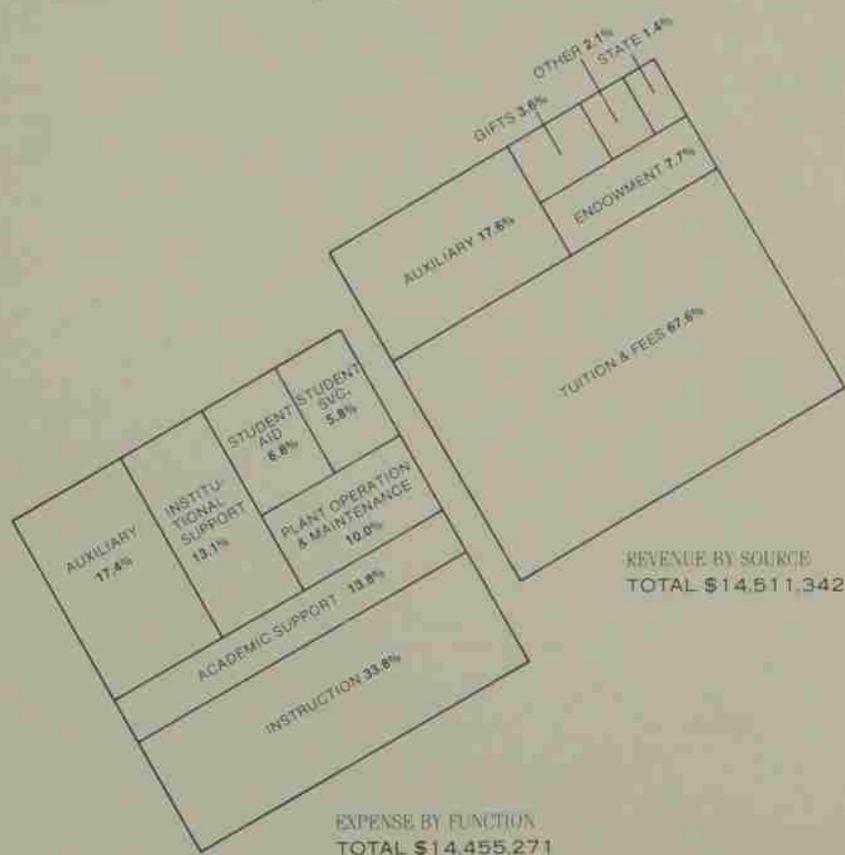

In addition to the Computer Science/Mathematics major approved last year, our faculty, in 1982-83, approved a new minor in Computer Science and a new 3-2 joint degree program in Computer Science. The 3-2 program enables a student to spend three years at Willamette and two years at the Oregon Graduate Center, earning a Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science from Willamette, and a Master of Science in Computer Science from the OGC, all in one five-year program. This is similar to our existing combined degree programs in engineering with Stanford University and Columbia University, forestry with Duke University, business and public management with the Geo. H. Atkinson Graduate School of Management at Willamette, and elementary education with Western Oregon State College.

Two new foreign studies programs were launched in 1982-83. Our first group of students studied in Salamanca, Spain. A number of Willamette students will now be able to study in Spain each year in this program which requires two years of college-level Spanish for acceptance. In addition to the academic coursework conducted in Spanish, students can further their language skills and cultural awareness by living with Spanish families. Access to the facilities of the University of Salamanca provides an added advantage, as do excursions to various sites of historic and cultural importance.

A second new foreign study program was launched in 1982-83 in Mexico. Professors Carol J. and W. Randall Ireson took a group of Willamette students to study in Guadalajara. Although the courses are taught in English, participants are required to have at least one year of college-level Spanish. Offered in alternate fall semesters, this program houses Willamette students with local families in Mexico and includes field trips and excursions. The new programs in Spain and Mexico join our existing and ongoing off-campus study programs in Japan, England, Germany, Italy, Washington, D.C., and New York City.

The curriculum of the Geo. H. Atkinson Graduate School of Management expanded this year with the addition of a new full-time marketing professor. New classes in Marketing Research and Strategic Planning, as well as additional independent study programs provide Atkinson students with wider choices for acquiring expertise in this important area.

The Atkinson School also continued its very successful "Executive on Campus" program in 1982-83. William Kilkenny, Chairman of the Board of the Hyster Company, kicked off the program in September, in September.

As a Willamette graduate and trustee, Kilkenny offered a fitting start for the 1982-83 program. Other Executives on Campus were Peter Johnson, Administrator of the Bonneville Power Administration; Lloyd Bailey, Vice President for the Agricultural Products Division of the Kerr-McGee Chemical Corporation; Gerard K. Drummond, President of NERCO, Inc.; Karen Roach, Administrator of the Oregon Children's Services Division; and James Coe, Chair of the Meier and Frank Company.

Executives on Campus lectured, answered questions and met informally with students and faculty during their campus visits.

In February of 1983, the College of Law opened its Centennial celebration with a dinner in Seattle. Prominent speakers like CBS legal correspondent Fred Graham came to campus as part of the Centennial commemoration.

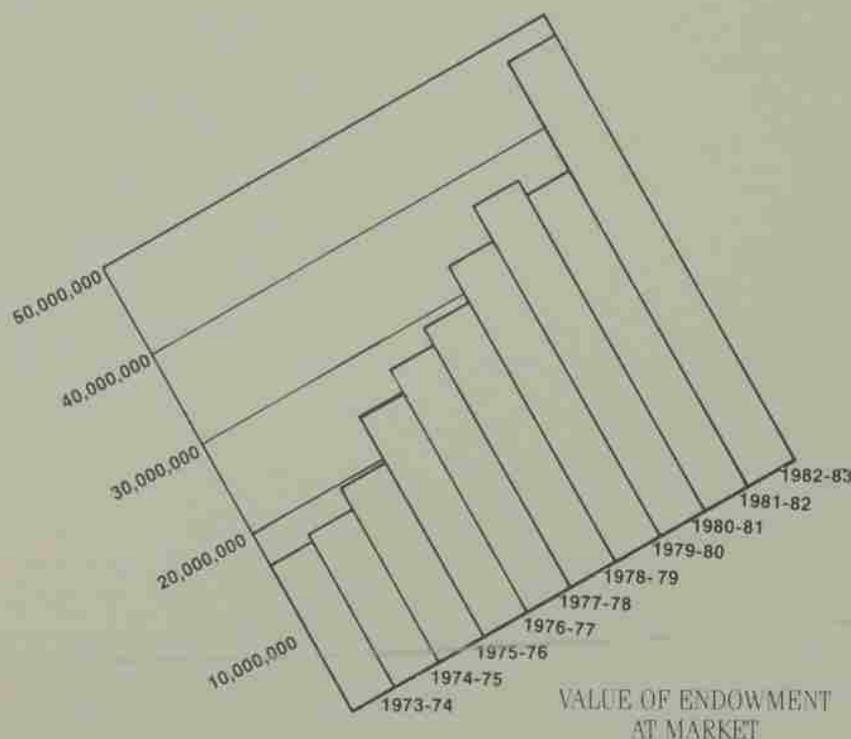

In 1982-83, Willamette created two substantial new merit scholarship programs: the dramatically expanded National Merit Scholarship and the G. Herbert Smith Scholarship.

Both programs provide a minimum of $2,500 per year for four years to outstanding students, regardless of demonstrated need and up to full tuition for outstanding students with established need. The high academic, co-curricular and testing standards are designed to further improve the quality of the Willamette student body.

Willamette faculty members continued to publish in 1982-83. For example, faculty at the Atkinson School had more than 15 books and articles published, including Financial Management, a second edition book written by Professors Stephen H. Archer and G. Marc Choate (John Wiley & Sons, Inc.). In the College of Liberal Arts, faculty authored more than 35 books and articles, ranging from Professor Suresht R. Bald's work, entitled, "From Satyartha Prakash to Manushi: An Overview of the Women's Movement in India" (Michigan State University) to Professor James P. Brik's "The Volunteer Coach and Questions of Legal Liability" (Scholar's Coach) to Professors Thomas H. Hibbard and James S. Hanson's article, "Economic Analysis of Lease Rates: Submerged and Submersible Lands" (Oregon Division of State Lands) to Professor Daniel G. Montague's "Neutron Diffraction Studies and the CRN Model of Amorphous Ice" (Journal of Physical Chemistry).

The College of Law faculty had another productive year, with more than 20 books and articles published. Typical was Professor Carlton J. Snow's article in the Syracuse University Law Review, entitled "Union Stewards: A Problem in Labor-Management Relations."

ROBERT L. PURBRICK, Professor of Physics. A one-semester sabbatical leave to prepare a textbook on the photographic process and update laboratory work for other courses.

DEAN W. RICHARDSON, Professor of Law. A one-semester sabbatical leave to study Native American law and history, research the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, and study American history related to slavery and the Civil Rights movement.

RICHARD A. SUTLIFF, Associate Professor of English. A one-semester sabbatical leave to study in Europe for purposes of gathering material and writing a novel, and continuing research in the field of narrative discourse.

PROMOTIONS

To Professor — KATHY T. GRAHAM, Law; JAMES S. HANSON, Economics; EARL K. LITRELL, Accounting and Information Sciences; KENNETH S. NOLLEY, English.

To Associate Professor — DONNA D. DOUGLASS, Music; JOANNE B. ENGEL, Education; MARTA VELEZ, Spanish.

To Assistant Professor — VALERIE MCINTOSH, Music; ELIZABETH YOCOM, Biology. Tenure achieved: PATRICK E. CONNOR, Organizational Theory and Behavior; DAVID E. GOODNEY, Chemistry; W. RANDALL IRESON, Sociology; and LANE C. MCGAUGHY, The George H. Atkinson Professor of Religious and Ethical Studies.

In the 1982-83 Alumni Survey, it was again verified that more than 50 percent of our graduates pursue additional degrees. The professions of law, medicine, education, business and government attract the majority of these students. Others pursue advanced work in traditional academic disciplines.

According to a study by the National Academy of Sciences — which determined the undergraduate institution of origin for Ph.D.'s earned in the United States — Willamette ranks in the top seven percent of all four-year, primarily undergraduate institutions in terms of alumni who have earned the Ph.D.

Ranking no lower than the top eight percent (in the arts and humanities), Willamette's performance in some areas ranked as high as the top two percent. Our most notable performances were in anthropology and sociology (top 1.6 percent) and political science, public administration and international relations (top 1.8 percent).

In an effort to assist students with career interests, a major thrust was directed toward launching and funding the Career Development Office.

Willamette's commitment to its students goes beyond the immediate provision of four years of challenging and demanding educational programs. Attention is given to help students use their education in valuable and rewarding pursuits following graduation.

From the freshman year, students are encouraged to take advantage of the programs and resources available in the new Career Development Office. The extensive career and graduate school information files are a source of excellent and important data for students.

Students are invited to meet individually with the Career Development staff to explore career options, personal goals, skills, values and interests. Workshops on resume writing, job search and interview strategies for job and graduate admissions interviews are frequent. A new alumni network has been developed to provide our students with the advice and example of successful professionals.

The Career Development Office arranges visits by potential employers from the public and private sectors, as well as graduate and professional school admissions representatives, and schedules interviews for interested students.

GIFT AND GRANT INCOME

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS: There is no typical Willamette student, although statistics allow us to draw some general conclusions about the undergraduate class of 1986, which entered in the fall of 1982.

They are academic achievers with strong preparation who welcome the intensity and challenge of an excellent liberal arts education. The typical entering Willamette student took at least four years of college preparatory English, mathematics through the advanced algebra/trigonometry level or beyond, two years or more of a foreign language, two years or more of a laboratory science, and at least three years of social science and history courses. Many of their courses in these subjects were taken in accelerated, honors or advanced placement programs.

The average solid subject grade point average for entering freshmen was 3.4. Their test score averages were in keeping with their strong academic showing: scores of 1,000 or better on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (verbal plus math) and 24 on the American College Test (composite score).

The diverse group of entering undergraduate students represents 29 states and 11 foreign countries.

GRADUATE SCHOOLS: In the fall of 1982, the Geo. H. Atkinson Graduate School of Management enrolled another outstanding class. Every year since the Atkinson School opened, the profile of its entering class has improved, particularly in regard to collegiate grade point average and Graduate Management Admission Test scores.

The solid subject or academic mean grade point average for the class entering in 1982 was 3.22 on

Runkel Retires

Dr. Howard W. Runkel of the Department of Speech Communication retired from the Willamette faculty at the end of the 1982-83 academic year.

Dr. Runkel served Willamette for 33 years, nearly all as the Chair of the department. Gratitude was expressed by faculty, colleagues, alumni and townspeople, administrators, students and other friends at several well-attended farewell functions. Dr. Runkel was the only faculty member to retire in 1982-83.

a 4.0 scale. The mean Graduate Management Admission Test score was 527 (70th percentile). The mean age of the entering class was 28 years of age, and one-third of the entering class were women.

The most popular undergraduate majors for the entering students were business, economics and government (political science), in that order. Forty-two percent of the entering class came directly from college, 30 percent from work in business, 13 percent from employment in not-for-profit organizations and 11 percent from government.

Oregon, Washington and California contributed the most students to the entering class.

Exactly half of the entering class came from private or independent colleges, and half from public colleges and universities.

The quality of the 1982 entering class in the College of Law was again excellent. The grade point average (for undergraduate study) mean was 3.31 and the Law School Admission Test mean was 606. Both of these figures represent an increase over the previous year.

The class of 150 students was composed of 90 men and 60 women. The age range — from 21 to 50 years — averages 26 years of age. The entering class hailed from 65 different colleges, with 14 having earned their baccalaureate degree at Willamette. Fifteen held advanced degrees. To enroll this outstanding class, which came from 18 states and one foreign country, 4,722 inquiries (and 711 completed applications) were received.

In 1982-83, if a Willamette student attended every musical event, theatrical production, film, guest lecture, art exhibit, dance and other cultural event on campus, here is how he or she would have spent the year:

... viewing nearly fifty films. Most were sponsored by the Associated Students of Willamette University or our film studies classes. Others were part of a film retrospective on the Vietnam War and a special showing of the works of British cinematographer Peter Watkins. Some of the films shown included "The Deer Hunter," "Chariots of Fire," "A Nous La Liberte," "A Clockwork Orange," "Casablanca," "Psycho,"

"The King of Hearts," "On Golden Pond," and "Dracula."

... attending exhibits of more than twenty artists whose works were displayed in the Hallie Brown Ford Gallery, the Fine Arts Building Gallery and the University Center.

... listening to more than seventy musical performances, ranging from noontime brown bag concerts to the Second Annual Willamette Collegiate Jazz Festival featuring Bobby Hutcherson and Howie Smith. Performances by the Oregon Symphony, student coffee houses, the Distinguished Artists series, faculty and student recitals, ensemble performances and opera theatre presentations of "Gianni Schicchi" and "The Songstress" were also part of the musical year at Willamette.

... enjoying the talents of Willamette's theatre students in such works as Joseph Heller's "We Bombed in New Haven," Ibsen's "Ghosts," Bertolt Brecht's "Threepenny Opera," and J. P. Donleavy's "The Ginger Man." There were over 50 plays performed on campus including those in the student-directed series.

... being challenged by the variety of outstanding guest speakers who shared their experience and viewpoints with the Willamette community. Highlighting the year were the visits of Linus Pauling, the only two-time winner of unshared Nobel Prizes; black activist and comedian Dick Gregory; consumer advocate Ralph Nader; internationally renowned filmmaker Peter Watkins; best-selling author and alumna Ann Stackhouse Rule; and CBS newsman and attorney Fred Graham.

The 1983 Commencement speaker was United States Congressman Douglas Bosco, who earned his Bachelor of Arts degree at Willamette in 1968 and his Doctor of Jurisprudence in 1971. The Honorable Mr. Bosco is the First District Congressman from California, and a former practicing attorney and member of the California State Assembly. He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1982.

Year in Sports

This proved to be another outstanding year for athletics at Willamette, beginning with excellent seasons for the men's and women's cross country teams.

The men's team, under the direction of Dr. Charles Bowles, earned its seventh straight conference and district championship. In winter sports, our men's basketball team had a particularly fine season, the best in several years. The team finished the regular season with 19 wins and 7 losses, placing second in the conference and proceeding to the Oregon-Idaho-Hawaii district playoffs, where we lost to Chaminade University in Honolulu. Chaminade spent most of the season as the number one-ranked small college in the country, and in December, beat the University of Virginia (then the number one-ranked large university in the country.)

The men's and women's swimming and diving teams also had excellent seasons, with the women's team finishing fourth in the nation, and the men's team finishing 21st nationally.

During the spring, the women's track and field team won its first conference championship in recent years, and the men's team won its sixth straight conference championship.

Honors

SARA NOAH, a senior from Los Gatos, California, was nominated in 1982-83 by a panel of outside judges to compete in the regional Irene Ryan acting competition, sponsored by the American College Theatre Festival. Another theatre student, LOUISE FOSTER from Los Alamos, New Mexico, earned a full tuition, room and board graduate assistantship to study costuming at the University of Utah. In the College of Law, PAUL MAUTNER, SCOTT STICKNEY, and JOHN TOMLINSON placed second in the regional Mock Trial competition, qualifying a Willamette team for the national competition for the fourth consecutive year. PROFESSOR G. MARC CHOATE of the Atkinson Graduate School of Management and his students produced the best Small Business Institute case of 1982-83 for Oregon. The case competed in Seattle at the northwest regional competition. In 1978, a case developed by PROFESSOR STEPHEN H. ARCHER and his students tied for the national championship.

PRESIDENT HUDSON received his first honorary degree in April when he was awarded an honorary doctorate by Pepperdine University of Malibu, California. President Hudson delivered the commencement address to the 1983 graduating class at Pepperdine, an institution he served from 1962 to 1975 as a teacher and administrator.

In the spring of 1983, Professor of Political Science SUSAN M. LEESON was selected as a United States Supreme Court Judicial Fellow. Winning this extremely keen competition enables Dr. Leeson to spend the year working with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Warren Burger, in Washington, D.C.

CLASS NOTES

HENRY AND FAYE MILLIE observed their 60th wedding anniversary on September 12, 1983. Henry J. Millie and Faye Bolin were married in their home at 450 Capitol St. NE, Salem, OR in 1923.

Now retired, Henry (L'21) practiced law in Salem and was admitted to the Oregon Bar in 1921. He later was a merchant with Henry's Photo Shop. Faye was a school teacher at Salem High School, a legal secretary and a state employee. Congratulations, Henry and Faye!

DR. CECIL L. SHOTWELL retired from his Los Angeles medical practice in December, 1979. He has been married for the past three years to Alta Sieling Shotwell.

VIRGIL A. ANDERSON, former professor at Stanford, is enjoying retirement with his wife, MARTHA MALLORY ANDERSON, '25.

THELMA MILLS is now retired in Portland. "After most of 1968-80 spent in Taipei, Taiwan (five trips) as international consultant to the Taipei YWCA, we succeeded in establishing four new city associations and becoming a national YWCA of Taiwan in 1980. These were some of the most interesting years since my 1925-27 years at Tientsin, China teaching English in the Tientsin Methodist Boys' School when Ed Winans ('07) was principal. I still hear from some of the 'boys' occasionally."

BRUCE AND GRACE F. (BRAINERD) WHITE are both retired from the University of Hawaii (Bruce as Vice President and Dean of the Faculty, Grace as a mathematics instructor.) They reside in Portland and have one son and four grandchildren.

JUANITA HENRY MOLL is retired and writes that after her husband, Wilmot, passed on, she sold her home in Pocatello and moved to Medford where she lives in "an electrically-heated apartment near Agnes. Expects to see classmates in 1985."

---

MABEL FLOCK LARRISON is vacationing in San Luis Obispo, CA and on October 16 went by Amtrak to Phoenix and back home to Seattle on November 15 for $175 using the "All Aboard America" 30-day fare.

DONALD A. HEATH: "The main 'news' with me is that, contrary to your list of 'Deceased' Sigma Tau members, I am still very much alive and it was quite a shock to me to find my name on the 'deceased' list. No other news to relate, just enjoying retirement and looking forward to many more years of it."

LETHA MILLER MOORLAND and husband Albert have six grandchildren and two great-grandsons — all in the Portland area. "We enjoy San Francisco and have just recently retired from our accounting business due to poor health."

On June 19, Reverend and MRS. J. THOMAS LEWIS (ELSIE TUCKER) celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a reception in St. Paul's Episcopal Parish Hall, Oroville, CA. It was hosted by their children, Stephen T. Lewis of Eureka, CA and Mrs. James E. Gamette of Oroville, and their families. On November 19, Father Lewis celebrated the 40th anniversary of his ordination, in the same church. Elsie Lewis was honored with a 50-year membership award, given by the American Association of University Women (AAUW) in May 1983.

"My husband and I plan to come up for the 55th Class Reunion of the 1929'ers on May 12, 1984, expecting to greet the remaining members of my great class."

DOROTHY RYAN PETERKIN and her husband, Wilbur, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in December, 1983. They have two children and five grandchildren and are retired in Sumner, WA.

MARGARET D. HOGG is a music instructor in Salem.

PERRY N. SPELBRINK lives in Salem, OR with wife Velma. Both retired from teaching, they grow cherries, apples and walnuts on 12 acres of orchard. Perry reports that he is in excellent health since a coronary artery bypass operation seven years ago.

HELEN (NEY) STANCLIFT is retired and pursuing hobbies as much as physical condition permits. She and her husband, Paul (retired orchardist), live in Merced, CA and have three children.

DR. TYRUS HILLWAY writes: "Dear Classmates of '33: Your class picture in the recent Scene brought back many wonderful memories. You all look so dignified (except Barney Cameron!) and beautiful. I once was a member of your class and, in fact, served as president in our freshman year. A change of program in my final year made it necessary to graduate with the Class of '34 (also a good class). In any case, I wish I could have been with you this spring to renew old acquaintances.

"After several years in Austria, life in the Rocky Mountains (retired in our Austrian chalet) has proved pleasant and comfortable. I have been in Salem only twice since leaving there, but I sincerely miss old friends and hope I can see you all again in the future. My best wishes to all members of the class. With affection, Ty Hillway."

BENT T. BRIGGS, a retired chemist, is living in Shelton, WA, and has two children. His wife, JEANETTE SCOTT BRIGGS '37 is semi-retired, still teaching violin.

MYRTLE MILLER recently married Richard Oestreich, and they live in Moses Lake, WA.

HELEN KEUDELL JONES writes that last June, MARGARET MAGEE attended the National Federation of Press Women in Vale, CO. Betty Narragan (contributing editor of "Working Women") and Betty Ford were the speakers. Betty Ford discussed the experiences of a president's wife and gave a frank talk on alcoholism. An added dividend of attending was once more to encounter seven past presidents — three of whom had come from our north-west area.

September 30 saw the first reunion in 50 years of the Sigma Tau fraternity held in Salem at the Rodeway Inn. OTTO WILSON ('38) did an excellent job of organizing the get-together, which over 200 people attended.

From our class was PAUL HOUSER and DON EGR. HELEN BENNER '36 was pianist and soloist and did some numbers from "Oklahoma" (she was in the original cast). They sang favorite serenades from college days along with the Freshman Glee winning songs of that period. It added up to a fun event. I'm glad to report that since Helen retired several years ago and returned to Salem to be near her family, she now has all the voice students time permits — she's much in demand here in Salem! Far from retired.

DR. JOHN ROSS (semi)-retired in March 1983 and is doing the more "fun" stuff — assisting on some of the surgeries and enjoying more free time. Last April, he and Thelma attended the Masters' Golf Tournament in Augusta, VA. In June, 1983, they enjoyed a 3½-week tour along the Mediterranean, into the Pyrenees and through the Loire Valley. After a three-day stay in Nice and a rural tour of France including three days in Paris, they flew home by way of London. Our paths almost crossed — we caught our flight home from London just one day prior to theirs. Malcolm and I spent five weeks in England as guests of his cousins in East Sussex and in Glasgow, Scotland. Some highlights of those weeks included viewing Winston Churchill's beautiful home in Chartwell, Kipling's home in Berwick, all the castles, lovely cathedrals and many other historic places, along with all their colorful gardens. Our stay in the village of Alfreton was delightful, for it maintains an atmosphere of the 13th century — no street lights and one narrow street through the center of the village. We only had one day of rain while there — rather rare for England.

In mid-September, we enjoyed a few days in Lostine with WARNER ('36) and ETHEL CROW. We enjoyed attending a surprise golden wedding reception given for MELVIN AND LOUISA (SIDWELL) CROW ('33). They'd had an earlier celebration in Colorado with their four children and families but their hometown decided a reception was in order, too. They look wonderful and live in the home they built when first married.

WILLIAM B. VOSS retired in June,

1982 after 33 years of engineering at Hughes Aircraft Company in the Los Angeles area.

"Since then I have been working around home, managing a small property owners' association. I will soon resume activity on the Citizens' Planning Council for Los Angeles County. My wife and I have been fortunate to enjoy several trips that were, seemingly, once-in-a-lifetime events. The first was an autumn trip to New England and Atlantic Canada. Last spring we enjoyed, by invitation, a marvelous trip to Hong Kong and mainland China. This fall, we spent an incomparable two months in central Europe. We lived in Pietrasanta (near Carrara) Italy for one month, then toured through Switzerland, Lichtenstein, Austria, Bavaria, and south-eastern France. We have copious slides as records of the trips and we are asked to show them from time to time."

HORTENSE E. FOSTER is a homemaker, while husband Jesse is retired from teaching in the Portland School District. They have four children.

Choosing what not to know

This initial appearance of "The Last Word" is a condensation of Dr. Hall's September, 1982 Opening Days convocation address.

In the first line of Aristotle's Metaphysics, the philosopher tells us that all persons desire to know. It is an essential part of human nature to desire knowledge.

One of our problems is how to acquire enough accurate information about the real world to construct general truths that will make the resulting knowledge satisfy our desire to know. Another problem is how to avoid cluttering our minds with inaccurate information or accurate but useless information. How should we choose what to know? How should we choose what not to know?

Today, almost anyone can put out information. Unfortunately, the amount of inaccurate and useless information has grown at a faster rate than the total amount of information. That is, a high percentage of the available information is rubbish, much of it dispensed for profit and with no concern for helping the consumer. Frivolous information and information not checked for quality is being sent to us in a continual stream — and I suppose that we consumers sometimes transmit the useless, unchecked information on to others. Today's access to information has become both an advantage and an affliction.

Since the need to choose what to know is as old as the desire to know, there has been much consideration given to how the choice should be made. However, because the circumstances in which the choices are made have changed so much, we need to augment the traditional tactics and criteria for locating and identifying accurate information and deal with the necessity to choose information to ignore. I will list a few possible criteria, tests, principles, or cautions that I think useful in choosing what not to know:

1. Reserve some time, within that set aside to satisfy your need to know, to survey regularly those bodies of knowledge which you have chosen not to know. An adequate amount of attention needs to be reserved for a periodic scan of information that may have become available and for reassessment of your choices in light of changed circumstances.

2. There is more to knowing than the acquisition of the information. We must reserve time with the input devices off, time for reflection, digestion, assimilation — however we choose to describe the internal process by which we can move from information received to knowledge acquired. This is a traditional caution to seekers of knowledge; the increased amount of attractive information makes it harder to heed.

3. There are so many choices and so much information that it is necessary to rely on others to pre-screen almost all of it. Invest in the effort necessary to join as extensive a network as possible of persons who can work as agents for each other. These agents (to be chosen carefully) serve as assistants and as authorities in the pre-screening process. They process information and evaluate its truth and potential usefulness.

It is responsible behavior to be a full participant in the support of the network you join. Help others locate and screen information.

4. Remember that the most useful information may not be the most available. Do some searching. Given what has been noted about the quality of information available, it is not good strategy to stand on the beach and make all one's choices from those that wash up.

5. If you are attempting to find information in order to know, then it is most efficient to ignore totally information that arrives through most communications media. Almost everyone believes this, but few of us follow it well enough. I find it useful to review occasionally the way I deal with my mail, newspaper and television. I am working hard to know how to deal with computers. I fail miserably in being able to handle telephone calls from salespersons. Every time I have been tougher with myself, I have been pleased with the result.

6. Finally, a criterion for choosing what not to know that I leave you with — because I feel compelled to mention it and cannot begin to discuss it here. When other criteria fail to determine the choice, always choose to know the older bodies of knowledge. The fact that they have been preserved is often an indication that they contain something worth knowing.
