Betty Jean Mullin, Patsy Older, and Carolann Snarr were chosen as finalists for May Queen in an election held Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Run offs will be held Tuesday and Wednesday to determine the queen. The other two women will serve on her court. The Collegian next Friday will announce the election results.

At a senior class meeting this week 10 women were selected to compete for the May Queen title. Beside the winning three were Thelma Bennett, Jo Colony, Jeanette Gilberson, Sue Mellor, Jo Oliver, Pat Stanton and Anne Swanson.

The May Queen will rule over May Weekend festivities. She and her court will attend the Willamette university production of "Twelfth Night" in a body.

A traditional sophomore daisy chain and may pole dance by the junior women will be seen at the coronation.

The queen will award trophies for inter-sorority and inter-fraternity sing. Other events of May Weekend will include a barbecue, tug-of-war, greased pole climb, and the queen's breakfast.

Next week is the last week in which students may order Freshman Glee pictures on sale at the Collegian office. All pictures ordered will be available the following week, starting Monday, April 23.

Students Set for Torch Rally; Houses Assigned Candidates

Members of the five men's living organizations on campus will gather at the Alpha Chi Omega house Tuesday about 7 p.m. to begin the mock convention torch-light parade and rally, Carol McLeod, rally chairman, announced.

From there the parade will proceed to Chi Omega, Delta

Gamma, Pi Beta Phi and Lausanne, concluding at McCulloch stadium for the rally.

A Republican speaker and Senator Richard Neuberger, Democrat, will conduct a debate at the rally, and representatives from the various living groups will make speeches for their candidates.

Men's and women's groups have been paired off and assigned certain candidates, Miss McLeod said. Chi Omega and Beta Theta Pi will work for Eisenhower. Delta Gamma and Phi Delta Theta will campaign for Stassen, while Lausanne and Baxter will support Taft.

Pi Beta Phi and Sigma Chi will speak for Warren, and Alpha Chi Omega and Sigma Alpha Epsilon will support a dark horse. Each organization is making signs and banners to advertise its candidate.

Miss McLeod has been assisted by her committee, which includes Dave Belch, Jim Bergmann, George Buland, Nancy Doughton, Bob Howe, Thelma Klepp, Dick Mercer, Daline Montag, Betty Royer, and Marilyn Witham.

This committee has been working on platform decorations for the stadium and completing arrangements for the rally.

Caves Jobs Open

Mr. Sabin, manager of the Oregon Caves, will be at Miss Jack's office in Lausanne hall Thursday morning between 9 and 12 to interview students for summer employment. Those wishing to see him should make an appointment with Miss Jack before that date.

Collins Award To Be Granted

In the near future selection will be made of the students who are to be elected to hold the Collins scholarships granted each year by the Mary L. Collins scholarship fund.

This year a maximum of seven scholarships will be awarded, four to men, and three to women. Candidates must have completed their sophomore year this year and be outstanding in character, leadership and scholarship.

Nominated in Chapel

Candidates for the Mary L. Collins scholarships are chosen from a list of those eligible on the basis of scholastic average of 3.25 or better. The ballot is submitted to the student body at chapel time. The students nominate by vote twice the number of people to be elected. From this number the faculty selects those who are to be elected to scholarships.

The following list has been supplied by the registrar's office as those who are eligible. Anyone who thinks he may be eligible for this competition and whose name is not in this list, should report it immediately to the president's office so that investigation may be made and the person's name included in the list prior to the balloting.

Eligible Candidates Listed

Reporter Observes Progress On 'Twelfth Night' Production

By Lyn Wence

"If music be the fruit of love, play on . . ." This eavesdropper arrived just in time to hear the first line in the rehearsal scene of the "Twelfth Night," the Shakespearean romantic comedy to be staged here May Weekend. Just a short period of observation proved that this production has progressed rapidly and is on the way to being a fine work of dramatic art.

It was quite impressive to notice how modern youth handled the flowery, poetic lines and gave forth with that pompous elegance that is so out of the ordinary. The droll satire accompanied by exaggerated pantomime lends the sensitive mood of the plot and sets any audience completely at the mercy of the players. Even with a plain backdrop and one bench as stage material this reporter was lost in the imagination of the old Shakespearean theater. "And much may be said of it . . ."

The old accents and facial expressions are especially noticeable in the soliloquies. There is a sort of strangeness about the emotions and the reactions of one character to another. There is a great deal of vocal inflection used to portray lovesickness, anger, happiness and despair.

As the different scenes were rehearsed the intricate plot unfolded through the talent of poised actors. A touching line is this, "I thank you, lead me on." A treat is in store for May Weekend as theater-goers and Shakespearean fans will be thrown back hundreds of years to a life of sadness, humor and complex love affairs.

One of 12 children, Miss Hang, 20, is a graduate of Methodist Girl's school in Singapore. Her father, Rev. Paul S. H. Hang, is currently minister at the Hinghura Methodist church in Singapore.

Miss Hang is planning to major in public school music. While in high school she wrote several songs for song competitions. She placed high on the University of Cambridge tests, which are similar to our college entrance examinations.

Senior Recital Set Monday

Gladys Blue, a piano and music theory major, will present her senior recital Monday evening, April 21, at 8:15 in the Waller hall auditorium. The program will consist of four groups, each representative of one of the main periods of musical composition.

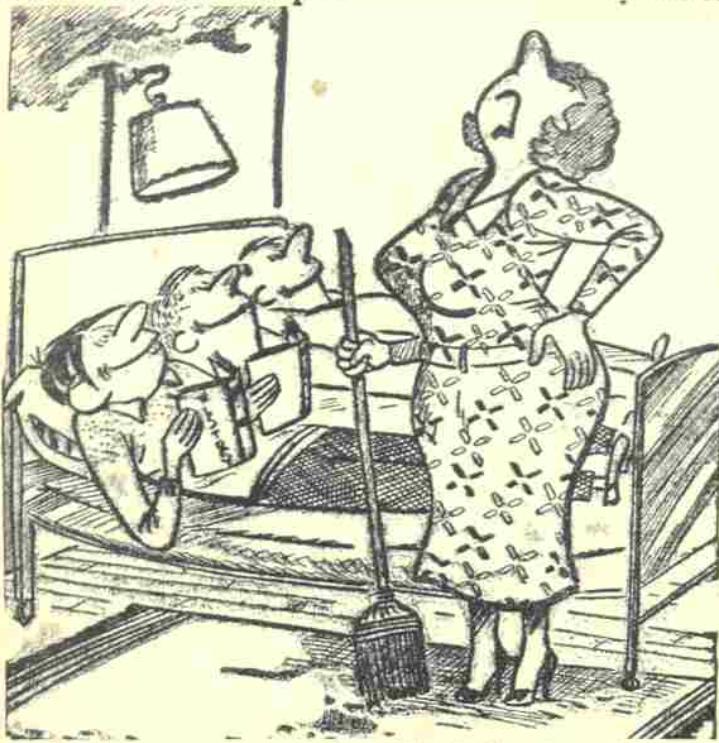

Miss Blue will open the program with three examples of the Baroque style of composition, the "Allemande" by Muffat, the "Fantasia No. 1" by Telemann, and "Capriccio" by W. F. Bach. The second group will consist of one of the major works of Beethoven, the Sonata Opus 26.

Representative of the impressionistic era are the works of the French composers Faure and Debussy. Miss Blue will play the Nocturne Opus 104, the Barcarolle Opus 96 by Faure, and "Voiles" or "Sails" by Claude Debussy.

The final group of the recital will consist of some of the works of Chopin. Miss Blue will play three Mazurkas, and will conclude her recital with the Waltz in E Minor.

H.H.H.

Harley Hoppe was hawking hotdogs (or something) at a recent baseball game when a foul ball was hit his way. Harley retrieved the ball but before he could do anything with it someone called out "Sell it back to 'em, Harley!"

Yep, Harley is a boy who sells things. As was observed in this space several months ago at the beginning of the concert series, H.H.H. is an promoter and a good one. But as he handed the reins of the concert series over to Phil Ringle preceding the Warfield concert so that the latter might acquire valuable experience for next season, Harley found other endeavors in the promotions field to occupy him. He managed the details for the recent Duke Ellington jazz concert here, and is doing same for a determination to begin our concert series that we can thank Harley. As long as there is a Willamette university Distinguished Artist concert series, Harley Hoppe will be remembered as the person who gave it impetus.

YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE what Graunke's Shakespearean thespians are doing with the next play, "Twelfth Night." I mean it's good.

If you have never seen Garold Meinke doing drunken Sir Toby Belch, Firinstance, you have many a whoop and a holler in store for you when the play is produced over May Weekend. According to Grunke it is extremely difficult for people to act inebriated convincingly. Meinke is convincing. The players now have lines memorized and are polishing them up for production of the Bard's comedy. Ah, this next should be a dandy.

THAT IS ALL for this week. These four page papers hardly let a columnist get started on his weekly tell-all-you-know session.

Beefs - Bouquets

Dear Mary Louise:

The closing line of a good, but unfortunately not winning, Glee song submitted by the mighty class of 1951 said in effect: "Willamette university is great." Many are the reasons why that aphorism is the farthest thing from parody. What I would like to do with this letter is to pay tribute to what I consider one of the most important reasons for Willamette's greatness—its a cappella choir.

I had the pleasure of hearing the choir in concert at Burlingame, California, the other evening, and I know I can speak without compunction for the many other Willamette alumnae of various vintage who were also present when I say that the concert was unsurpassable. It would be impossible, of course, to measure the good will engendered by such a performance, but you can be confident that an excellent impression of Willamette was given to many prospective college students and their parents.

We are all guilty of the common error of overlooking greatness because of its nearness and familiarity, but the present students of Willamette have at least one opportunity of avoiding this peculiar myopia by tossing a bouquet to one of its finest representatives, its own "songsters in cardinal and gold."

Sincerely,
Richard E. Endsley, '51.

Editor, The Collegian:

Does The Collegian have an advertising policy? I sometimes wonder whether the paper recommends its advertisers or stands behind their ads. For example, in the issue of March 21, I read, "The way to get an A! Get those supplies at the . . ." Now, what if a student, after reading this ad, buys his pen and ink at . . . and dutifully writes an exam with this particular pen and ink, and then gets a C (perish the thought!). Can he get his money back because he did not get the promised A? . . . In the same issue Duke Ellington is presented as "America's Foremost Modern Composer." I have been intending to inquire at the music school about this.

Yours quizzically,
Norman Huffman.

Coming W. U. Mock Republican Convention To Imitate New Presidential Primary Plan

By Don Scarborough

(Ed. note. This is the first of several articles giving background information on Willamette's forthcoming mock Republican convention.)

Just how much say will the American people have when they elect our president next November? Not as much as might be hoped for under our democratic system.

In November all eligible, and interested, citizens will elect a President. And if you overlook our Electoral College system that allows a man to receive less popular votes than his opponent and still be elected, then you could say the next President will represent the "general will" of the nation.

But the trouble is that when a candidate emerges still coughing from a smoke-filled convention hall where he was hand-picked by a clique of politicians, the people's final choice may be merely the lesser of two evils.

Peoples Choice?

The sober fact is that Americans chose, not the best man perhaps, but the man who the political parties thought could win.

Few people doubt the value of the political party as a method of concentrating public opinion and channeling it into the government via its candidates. But many resent the fact that the choice of candidates is left up to a small group of politicians and not the people.

A candidate for President is chosen by a political convention held every four years about six months before election. The delegates to this convention are themselves hand-picked by state politicians — or were until the advent of the "Oregon system" at the beginning of the 20th century.

It is bad enough to allow a convention of politicians to choose our next President, but it is even worse to allow these very politicians to be in turn chosen by another group of men who are not responsible to the people of their state.

Oregon's Innovation

Oregon was one of the first to give up the state convention and initiate a new means of choosing a Presidential candidate. The system is the direct primary and it is in use now by about 26 states.

Under this set-up the voting Republicans and Democrats of the state choose their own delegates to the national conventions.

At present Republicans in Oregon will elect 10 delegates-at-large and 2 from each of the four congressional districts — a total of 18 men who are sent to the Republican convention by the people and not by the hierarchy of the state Republican party organization.

The Democrats chose four delegates-at-large and eight congressional district delegates — a total of 12.

Delegates Pledged

The whole advantage of this system is that the delegates go to the national convention as the pledged supports of one particular man. The delegates were chosen by the voters in the state as a supporter of, say, Eisenhower or Taft, and they are pledged to vote for him in the convention.

This is the type of politics that will be followed in Willamette's mock Republican convention. Delegates from 12 schools will arrive at the "Northwest's National Republican Convention Headquarters" and choose a Presidential candidate just as if this were the real thing.

The direct primary is perhaps not the best method of introducing popular control over Presidential campaigns. There certainly are a lot of flies in the ointment. Not all the states choose delegates this way; delegates are not always held to a pledge after the first convention ballot; while some delegates must continue to vote for a man even after he is out of the running.

Presidential primaries may be, after all a lot of "eyewash," but they are the first step in bringing Presidential election within the control of the people.

Carlson Predicts Ike Victory Aided by Truman Drop Out

Washington, D. C. (Special)— Senator Frank Carlson, (R-Kansas), said today that General Eisenhower will come home before the Republican convention and will be elected president of the United States whether politicians like it or not.

Sen. Carlson, who will be keynote speaker at Willamette university's mock Republican convention May 10, said Eisenhower is the only man in the country who has the support of the American people.

"And," said Carlson, "he is the only candidate who will draw votes from both parties. He will be nominated and elected no matter what some politicians might believe."

Carlson believes Eisenhower's campaign was bolstered greatly by President Truman's withdrawal from the race.

"Taft's entire campaign was aimed directly at the Truman administration," Carlson said. "With Truman out of the race, Taft's whole strategy has broken down and his appeal to the voters is lost."

Carlson admitted that Eisenhower's recent showing in Nebraska and Wisconsin was a setback. "But," he said, "we are building up a strong campaign for the general and are certain of strong support in the July convention."

"We know how to get the delegates," he added.

Asked if Eisenhower's absence from the United States and his lack of a definite stand on issues is hurting his cause, Carlson said, "absolutely not."

He indicated Eisenhower would return to the States before the convention in July and "any loss of contact resulting from his duties as chief of NATO in Europe will be more than made up for when he makes a few television speeches and personal appearances. The general's personality and personal popularity is hard to beat."

"Of course," Carlson said, "Eisenhower hasn't taken a definite stand on each clause of each bill in congress. But his ideas on broad principles are easy to see."

"Do you think," the senator said, "that Eisenhower would have been elected president of Columbia university without high intellectual and administrative abilities?"

Senator Carlson, who has served in the Senate since 1950 and was previously governor of Kansas and 12 years a United States representative, is a key national figure in the Eisenhower for President movement. He will leave for Oregon and Willamette's convention early in May.

"She directs a festival workshop group in San Francisco, teaches several other groups in the Bay area and is constantly in demand as a teacher at dance institutes."

Second Annual Relays Prove Huge Success as 27 Old Records Fall

The Willamette relays, under the directorship of track coach Chester Stackhouse, came off in fine style Saturday, April 5, as 27 new records were established on the McCulloch oval.

Stackhouse, who has directed his second and final Willamette relay meet as he leaves Willamette in June, was well pleased with the meet as 1700 athletes from 60 Oregon high schools and 16 colleges got their first real test of the 1952 season.

In the two top feature races of the afternoon, Bill Fell of Oregon ran the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds and Don Chambers of Oregon State ran the high hurdles in 15.1 seconds. Both times were new records.

Bearcat chances in almost every event and at least eight freshmen and other new-comers to the squad add plenty of potentiality, as they showed Tuesday in a practice meet against OCE.

Jim Hitchman bettered his school-record shot put of 45 feet and one and one-half inches with a 45 foot and 3 inch toss. However, because the meet was unofficial, it will not stand as a record.

In the field events it will be Bob Hall and Stan Neperud, javelin; Mark Cotton, Gene Kerr and Ray Fretheim, pole vault; Jim Hitchman, Bob Alfred and Layton Gilson, shot put; Verne Shangle and Bill Van Horn, broad jump; and Merlin Schulze and Hitchman, high jump.
